CITY ELECTION RESULT HANGS WITH WOMEN

Rowe-Eaton Row, Sanitarium, and Liquor Make Suffragists a Puzzle.

HEAVY BALLOT LIKELY.

Chicago's registered woman vote will have its chance to demonstrate its strength at the aldermanic elections Tuesday. There is fear that a large share of the men voters—of the politician sort at least—have forgotten all about real municipal issues. They appear to be slaughtering each other over factional political differences that will not be settled at the polls until one week from next Tuesday.

There are 261,172 registered women in the total registration of 781,201. They can vote for alderman and for Municipal court judge next Tuesday. The Supreme court decision of February prevents their voting for ward and state committeemen and national convention delegates on April 11.

WOMEN BALANCE OF POWER.

When the campaign closed last night political experts agreed that the women held the balance of power in Tuesday's municipal contest.

Downstate the women will be voting in less than 200 townships where the saloon proposition is up under the township local option act. One thousand saloons are at stake and sixty dry townships stand to be converted into wet territory.

Park bond issues are up for approval in Chicago, including the million dollars that Lincoln park needs.

POLITICAL LEADERS IN DOUBT.

With conditions in several wards bordering on civil war and factional strife the bitterest known in an aldermanic election in years, political chieftains yesterday were unable to make definite forecasts, except the Democrats.

The extent of the knifing that will be carried on Tuesday, particularly in the Republican household, is to be the determining factor, they said, in several Republican wards.

The Democratic chiefs see the best chance they have had in a long time to "clean up the slate," although they have troubles of their own, particularly in the Eleventh and Twenty-first wards.

All were agreed that the total vote will set a new high record. Election board officials put the figures at 500,000.

Chief Clerk Egan of the election board predicted a 70 per cent of the registered vote. He also anticipates serious trouble in several wards. In the Third, Eleventh, Twelfth, Eighteenth, Twenty-first, and Twenty-second wards it would not surprise some of the election officials if bloodshed should make of the day's voting a fresh scandal in the factional strife.

10,000 TO MAN THE POLLS.

It was estimated that at least 10 000 party workers will be on hand to man the polls in addition to volunteer workers and thousands of police.

The polling places will open at 6 o'clock in the morning and close at 4 p. m.

All parties forecast an unusually heavy percentage of women voting this time, due largely to the Rowe-Eaton "scandal" in the city hall and the trouble at the tuberculosis sanitarium.

The sanitarium scandal has been carried to the women by their leaders with more earnestness than any of the other

ARCHIE ROOSEVELT ENDS HIS QUARREL WITH HARVARD

Trouble Over Bill Patched Up and Son of Colonel Will Stay in University.

Cambridge, Mass., April 1.—The Archie Roosevelt vs. Harvard college squabble, which stirred the university today with rumors that the ex-president's son was about to be "canned" for unpaid bills, has been patched up.

It was all caused by Archie getting warm under the turndown because the college tripled a bill for laboratory expenses which he had persistently neglected to pay. The more the bursar added to the bill, which was only for $5, the longer young Roosevelt kept him waiting, until finally the inevitable machinery was set in motion.

Roosevelt was called from class yesterday and was not served in the dining hall. These are unmistakable signs that a man is about to be fired from college.

According to G. W. Cram the whole incident was just a mistake, but the bill was paid.

LAST SUNDAY'S RECORD BROKEN TODAY

Today The Tribune again prints more "Want Advertising" than it has ever printed before in a single day in its history and breaks its own previous "record issue" of last Sunday, March 26th.

There are 204 columns of want advertising in today's issue—a monumental tribute of public confidence in the result-producing quality of Tribune advertising space.

There's never been a time when readers and advertisers alike could profit so advantageously by patronizing the want ad columns of The World's Greatest Want Ad Section.

Don't miss reading today the largest want ad section (not special edition) that ever came off a printing press.

FARMERS RIOT; MILK DUMPED; FAMINE FEARED

Dealers Admit Gravity as First "Strike" of Kind Ties Up Plants.

SUPPLY FOR BABIES.

Violence marked the first real farmers' strike in the history of the middle west yesterday. Many of the 10,000 milk producers in northern Illinois and Indiana and southern Wisconsin even carried out their threats to dump milk into the ditches rather than permit it to reach Chicago dealers who have refused their demand for an increase of 22 cents a hundred pounds in price.

Regular old fashioned labor tactics were employed. Hundreds of farmers and their hands went on picket duty around the bottling plants to prevent the delivery of milk by seceding members of the Milk Producers' association or independent producers. Hundreds more blocked the highways with their teams as a precautionary measure.

EGG WAGON DRIVERS.

Clashes occurred at several points. Drivers of wagons loaded with milk were egged and their produce dumped in the roads or on railroad tracks. At Mokena, Ill., four "strikers" were injured when they attempted to mob a deputy sheriff armed with a revolver and a hickory club.

William J. Kittle, secretary of the Milk Producers' association, declared at night that no less than 1,050,000 quarts were diverted from the Chicago retail market. He said an encouraging conference had been held with the officials of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union looking toward the affiliation of the producers with the American Federation of Labor and that should the dealers carry the fight too far a sympathetic strike of the drivers in the city "would not be an improbability."

GET LIVELY TODAY.

"Things were lively today, but they'll be more so tomorrow," he said. "The dealers will find that the situation will grow more serious as the strike continues. Our members are sticking, to a man, and are determined to win. In 1913, when we threatened to strike, we compromised for a cent and a fraction. This time we are not going to compromise for one fraction of a cent."

The dealers admitted the situation is serious, but declared they have plenty of milk to take care of their trade today and possibly tomorrow. They say they make no promises for subsequent days, but they are hopeful that the retail trade will not suffer. In any event, there will be plenty of milk for the babies.

SERIOUS CLASH AT MOKENA.

The most serious clash occurred near the station of the Bowman Dairy company at Mokena. The plant was picketed early in the morning, but two wagons succeeded in running the blockade. A third wagon, in charge of George Osmus of New Lennox and Deputy Sheriff George Mau, was approaching the station when a crowd of farmers surrounded it and threatened to dump the milk. Mau drew a revolver, but six men leaped on the wagon, shouting they would kill him if he "didn't put up that gun." Mau put the gun back in his pocket but began belaboring the crowd with a thick hickory cudgel.

Byron Nelson, Daniel Kohl, Fred Hantsch, and Fred Brown received broken heads or cracked knuckles. The town authorities came to Mau's aid, and the wagon reached the plant. It was said, however, that only 1,500 pounds of milk reached the station during the day, as against an average receipt of 40,000 pounds.

TEN CANS DUMPED.

Fred Secore was stopped on his way to the Bowman plant at Marengo, and ten cans of milk were taken from his wagon and dumped into the gutters. At Crystal Lake members of the association purchased a wagon load of milk which had been brought to the railroad station for shipment and dumped it on the tracks. The farmer was informed he would not receive payment the next time he attempted it.

Many wagons were turned back at Shermerville and Huntley. The Borden plant at the latter place was reported to be closed. One hundred farmers were reported on picket duty at Hampshire, and no milk at all was received at the Borden plant at Hebron, the plant of the Roseland Dairy company at Roseland, or the Jelke plant at Harmony. At Batavia

Holland Fearful Allies May Draw Nation Into War

Dutch Paper Hints Plan Laid in Paris Is Menace to Neutrality.

ARMY HEADS CONFER

THE HAGUE, April 1.—The widespread anxiety which has suddenly arisen respecting the ability of Holland to keep long out of the war is not due to the feeling aroused by the sinking of the Dutch steamer Tubantia, according to the Nieuwe Courant.

"Its cause," the paper says, "lies in the general war situation, which, according to information received, is now entering or is about to enter a phase which gives our country cause for special vigilance. We do not know whether what our government apparently fears—but concerning the character of which we could obtain no exact information—will come to pass within a week or a month, or whether the situation generally will remain merely one of a more critical character for our country.

Change in Situation Foreseen.

"We venture only the conjecture that a change in the situation, which is now considered possible, may be the outcome of the allies' conference that closed Wednesday at Paris.

"We understand that in yesterday's cabinet council matters were discussed which led to the consultation of the government with the highest military authorities and consideration of the advisability of holding a secret session of the second chamber."

Holland Denies Massing Army.

LONDON, April 1.—A Reuter dispatch from The Hague this afternoon says it is authoritatively stated that the reports regarding the withdrawal of all furloughs and the requisitioning of all freight trains by the Dutch authorities are untrue.

An extraordinary council of the Dutch ministers of state was held today at The Hague, according to Reuter's correspondent at The Hague.

Berlin Press Stirred.

BERLIN, April 1, via Copenhagen and London.—The German newspapers give much space to reports concerning an alleged ultimatum by the entente allies to Holland, and the sharpening by the latter of her mobilization measures.

The press generally points out, however, that all the reports apparently are based on rumors and assert that Germany has no cause to view the situation with the slightest uneasiness, whether the rumors are true or not.

JUDGE PUTS PRICE OF $1.25 ON BEST MANICURE IN WORLD

Not Worth More with All the Requisites, Along with Prettiest Girl, Kansas City Court Rules.

Kansas City, Mo., April 1.—The best manicure in the world—one with all the requisites that go to make the finger nails artistic in design and color—is not worth more than $1.25, according to Judge J. E. Guinotte of the Probate court.

Judge Guinotte made his ruling today in passing on a claim for $2.20 filed against the estate of Herman Peltzer, a real estate dealer, who died in a fall from an office window here six months ago. The claim was for "manicure, talcum, and file."

"The best manicure in the world," the judge said, "is not worth more than $1.25. Even if the fingers are soaked in rose water, the nails polished until they shine and sparkle like diamonds, the fingers dusted with talcum powder and the nails shaped like almonds, by a pretty manicure."

With these remarks the judge cut down the claim to $1.25, which he allowed.

LONE GERMAN ROUTS SLAVS ATTEMPTING MASS ATTACK.

Teuton Stands on Parapet and Hurls Grenades Into Russian Ranks—Assault Breaks Down.

BERLIN, April 1.—One Silesian territorial trooper stopped a Russian mass attack in the Narocz lake fighting single handed, the correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung telegraphed tonight.

The Silesian soldier sprang on the parapet of his trench and began hurling grenades into the advancing Slav columns. When his supply was exhausted his comrades handed him more bombs. He threw forty bombs in all and completely broke the enemy attack on this sector. He was especially commended by his superior officers.

MUNDELEIN ACTS ON NEW PROJECTS

Home for Moneyless Men and Girls' Clubhouse Planned to Improve Chicago.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Archbishop G. W. Mundelein is about to put in operation four big movements to help solve the social problems of Chicago.

Two of these movements have been referred to previously in THE TRIBUNE, but two have as yet had no public announcement.

The institutions announced for the first time yesterday are a home for moneyless men in or near Desplaines and Randolph streets and the other is a club house for girls somewhere in the downtown district.

"The plan to care for homeless men is already formulated," said Archbishop Mundelein, "but the site is not yet definitely settled. I have two pieces of property under consideration.

Property to Be Large.

"The property will be large, six stories or so, and will be for the care of young men who may be without employment or money. Of course, we don't intend to encourage idleness, but we intend to relieve distress.

"On the first floor there will be a chapel for religious services. A priest will be in attendance day and night and will be ready for any calls for help.

"The clubhouse for girls will be placed under the care of a strong organization of capable women from the different parishes. The women have been selected, but all of them have not yet accepted, so that we are not yet ready to announce their names nor the name which will be given to the organization. It will have a new name and will be devoted to this special task."

Boys' Home Progressing.

Archbishop Mundelein said the plan to build an institution to care for the boys, which is to be under the care of the Knights of Columbus, was progressing.

"There was a meeting of the advisory council today," he said. "Monday the plans probably will be announced at a meeting of the knights at the Hotel La Salle.

"The Holy Name society has had assigned to it the care of young men placed on parole. I had a talk with Judge Fisher of the Boys' court and we will have his cooperation. When a boy who is a Catholic has committed an offense he will be paroled to some member of the committee of five of the Holy Name society in the parish to which he belongs.

"I intend to commit to every large Catholic organization some definite social duty to perform in addition to their churchly duties."

Villa Band Slays Three Americans in Guerrero Raid

El Paso, Tex., April 1.—The story of the murder of three Americans, a German, and an Englishman at Minaca was brought here today by Americans arriving from Chihuahua City and was accepted as authentic by federal officials.

The bandits' victims were Benjamin Snell, Dr. A. T. Stell, and Lee Leadesley, Americans; Herman Blankenburg, a German; Donald McGregor, also known as Bruce, a British subject, who once lived in Chicago.

Two other Americans, Henry Acklin and Frank Woods, were in Minaca at the time, but their fate is unknown.

ONE ESCAPES WITH NEWS.

The news was brought to Chihuahua City by J. H. Locke, the only American known to have escaped the massacre.

According to the story, Villa captured Minaca, Guerrero, and San Isidro last Monday. Everywhere he went he announced his intention of putting to death every "gringo" that fell into his hands, and he carried out his intention.

As far as the Mexicans were concerned, the bandit promised safety to all who did not take up arms against him. No quarter was shown to the Carrancista troops who attempted to resist him.

FORMERLY A CHICAGOAN.

Donald McGregor, who is reported to have been one of Villa's victims in the massacre at Minaca, formerly lived in Chicago, and was a worker on a local newspaper. He previously had worked on several papers in western cities.

Later he went to Colorado and during the mining strike there he took part in the fighting at Walsenburg, between the strikers and the state troops. He then went to Mexico.

CLOSE IN ON BANDIT LAIR IN MOUNTAINS

Dodd Has 2,500 Men Beating the Canyons in Chihuahua.

OUTLAW IS A CRIPPLE.

BULLETIN.

San Antonio, Tex., April 1.—Pancho Villa's hiding place northeast of Guerrero has been surrounded, and 1,000 American cavalrymen are closing in.

A message dated San Geronimo ranch, March 31, received by Gen. Funston late tonight, stated that Villa undoubtedly is in the country northeast of Guerrero, that American troops surround the region, and that four squadrons of cavalry selected from three regiments are ready for the final dash.

BULLETIN.

Queretaro, Mexico, April 1.—The municipal president of the town of Temosachic, Chihuahua, reports that Villa was so badly wounded in the surprise attack recently made on the Constitutionalist garrison at Guerrero that amputation of the leg was necessary.

FIND TRACKS OF WAGON.

Camp of Commanding General at the Extreme Front, April 1, by aeroplane to field headquarters and by wireless to Columbus, N. M.—Hopes of the American cavalrymen under Col. George A. Dodd on finding Francisco Villa among the snow clad slopes of the continental divide are based on the discovery today of the track of carriage wheels in a mountainous waste near here.

These, it is believed, may have been made by the vehicle which carried away the injured bandit leader.

Ever since they defeated the Villa commander at San Geronimo ranch with heavy losses last Wednesday the American cavalrymen have searched ceaselessly for the bandit leader, but up to late today no definite information concerning his whereabouts had reached this camp.

NATIVES REFUSE TO AID.

Villa has disappeared in a way, which, considering the relentlessness of the American pursuit, seems mysterious. The American troops have not encountered any natives who will even admit they have seen Villa.

Every gorge, canyon, trail, and watering place in the mountainous passes in this vicinity is being watched by American air scouts or searched by cavalrymen in the hope of discovering the bandit's lair.

The aviators also are keeping the column informed of the movements of the scattered remnants of the Villa band. Hope is expressed that one of these at least may attempt to rejoin their chief and thus lead the American forces to his hiding place.

FIND 60 MEXICAN DEAD.

Search of the field after Col. Dodd's fight with Villistas at San Geronimo ranch, disclosed sixty Mexican dead. There is no report as to the number of Mexicans wounded.

The American soldiers are now operating over a front of seventy-five miles and there is not a foot of that distance uncovered. They are operating in six columns commanded by Col. Dodd, who has under him a squadron of the Tenth cavalry. Col. Brown has another squadron of the Tenth, Maj. Evans, and a squadron of the Seventh cavalry, Col. Erwin.

It was Erwin's squadron which engaged Villa at San Geronimo and routed him. Other commands are Maj. Tompkins, with two troops from the Tenth and Thirteenth, Maj. Lindsley's squadron of the Thirteenth, and Maj. Howse with a picked squadron of the Seventh.

GIVES DETAILS OF OUTLAW CHIEF'S FIGHT AND INJURY BY BULLET

In all, there are twenty-five hundred men in the search.

MANY RUMORS OF CAPTURE.

El Paso, Tex., April 1.—There were numerous rumors in El Paso today that Villa had been captured. Some of these were circumstantial, but not one of them was capable of verification.

One report was based on an announcement issued by Gabriel Gavira, Carranza commander at Juarez.

The report received by Gavira came from Gen. Luis Gutierrez, commander of the garrison at Chihuahua City.

It was said at Fort Bliss that the report probably was premature. Gutierrez was ordered by Gavira to get all the facts as soon as possible, but communication is cut off between Chihuahua and the region of Guerrero.

The Chihuahua report said the capture of Villa was made at Minaca, which lies ten miles to the south of Guerrero.

If Villa is located, army officers believe that his capture, if not already made, will be only a matter of a few days, because the wounds he is known to have sustained would prevent either a long flight or a hard fight.

VILLA BANDS SPREADING.

Even should the reports of Villa's capture prove true, the task of the Americans would not be ended because of the many small bands of the Villistas which are swarming about in Chihuahua state.

Fifteen hundred Villista troops, well mounted and armed, are fifty miles west of Chihuahua, waiting for Villa to take command and go up to attack Chihuahua City, according to information which reached here from what would seem to be reliable private sources. Who at present is at the head of these troops is not known.

Advices from Chihuahau City tonight say bandits today raided the property of the Potosi Mining company, several miles west of that city, robbing the paymaster. The bandits are supposed to be fugitive members of Villa's band defeated at Guerrero.

THREE VILLA BANDS BEATEN.

Reports received from various sources tell of the defeat of Villa bands by Carrancistas in three battles.

Eighty Villistas are reported to have been killed in a battle between Carranza troops and the forces of Canuto Reyes, the bandit leader of the Laguna district.

Gen. Jacinto Trevina has defeated the Villistas under Elias Perez in the same district.

A third report says Col. Salvador Ortiz has defeated a bandit gang near Las Canoas, killing seventeen, including the notorious "Bolas Neal."

DIARY TELLS OF MARCH.

With American Outposts in Mexico, to Columbus, N. M., April 1.—[By Aeroplane.]—Cavalry marches surpassing all known previous performances of mounted troops in Mexico have been made in the pursuit of Villa by some of the flying columns sent out to cut off the avenues of escape of Francisco Villa. The diary of a cavalry officer, obtained today, gives a romantic sketch of one such march. Names and dates cannot be published. The first entry shows the abandon with which the Americans threw themselves into the chase. It says:

"We arrived with practically nothing to eat and no grain for the horses."

How food was obtained in comparative plenty for men and horses is also a military secret. However, some of the minor sidelights were furnished by this officer's record.

"The night of March —," said the diary, "we hiked all night, making fifty miles, including a fifteen mile climb to an altitude of 10,000 feet over a terrific mountain trail. We made camp at 8 a. m., and in the evening started over mountain trails 8,000 feet high. In a march of 110 miles from our base we slept three hours. All the mountain trails were very bad.

"No Signs of Villa."

"No sign yet of Villa, and no sign of beef. We saw one cow. Troop — got two deer. They kept the deer and did not loan a bite to any one else. D—n hogs! Some of the men found rhubarb, with which they made a very good stew. We also got some ducks.

"——— hiked twenty miles, and I am worried about him. Later: ——— has returned safely. He located wire and supplies for us. We were to take five days' rations for men and horses, but in order to make the time we wanted we took only two days'. Spent two days in high altitudes, in rain. The weather otherwise is fine. We have been among pines nearly all the time, with cañons and massive, rocky or brilliant, semi-metallic peaks all about us. The scenery is most wonderful; much like Yellowstone, I imagine. Probably Villa could hide here indefinitely, but he would starve.

"Later: March resumed, making thirty miles to a point where we obtained beef and one mess of beans."

VILLA WOUNDED LEADING BATTLE; SHOT OFF HORSE

Gavira Says Bandit Chief Was Injured in Clash with the Forces of Cavazos.

BY WALTER NOBLE BURNS.

El Paso, Tex., April 1.—[Special.]—Graphic details of the battle between Pancho Villa and Col. George A. Dodd's American column at the San Geronimo ranch and of Villa's victory over Col. José Cavazos at Guerrero were received today by Gen. Gabriel Gavira, Carranza commander at Juarez.

Gen. Gavira's dispatches came from Gen. Luis Gutierrez, commandant of the Carranza garrison at Chihuahua City, who in turn received the information direct from Col. Cavazos himself.

Villa, according to Col. Cavazos' report, was shot out of his saddle in the streets of Guerrero. The bullet crushed his right knee and the fall severely injured his right hip. He was made insensible and for a time his followers thought him dead.

Indians Steal Into Town.

"My first report that Villa surprised Guerrero seems to have been correct," Gen. Gavira said. "Col. Cavazos and his officers, I am told, were at a dance.

"Villa was in the central plaza before the garrison was aroused. Col. Cavazos leaped through a window in the midst of a dance and made his way to the cuartel, where he mustered his troops for battle. He had not more than fifty men to pit against Villa's 500. He fought bravely. His troops barricaded the streets and shot from the tops of the adobe houses.

"Villa, I am informed, was sitting on his horse in the square directing the fight when a bullet struck him in the right knee. His horse reared and Villa was pitched headlong to the earth. Villa was unconscious when the members of his personal escort, believing him dead, picked him up and carried him into a private residence. A surgeon dressed his injuries.

Seeks Safety in Flight.

"The fighting continued in the streets for several hours before Col. Cavazos finally was driven from the shelter of his last barricade, and fled to the hills. Most of his followers were either killed or captured. I am informed that ten were executed next morning.

"I am told that Villa remained in bed in Guerrero until Tuesday afternoon. Then it is said he got wind that an American column of 300 men was heading his way from the country about Temosachic. Villa at once evacuated Guerrero and marched northward to give battle.

Says Villa Fought Dodd.

"The dash and fighting qualities of Col. Dodd's soldiers must have astonished him. Despite the fact that the American official reports declare Villa was not present in the fighting at San Geronimo, Gen. Gutierrez informs me that Villa was in a tent on a hill overlooking the encampment of his troops when Col. Dodd rode in on him. The first reports had it that Villa escaped in a carriage with a Mozo lashing the horses into a run and disappeared in the Sierras to the northeast.

"I do not credit this story of Villa's escape in a carriage; my information is that he was borne away from the scene of combat lying in a litter slung between two Tarahumari Indian runners."

ATLAS CLUB HOLDS FROLIC.

McCutcheon's "Bird Center" and Brook, George Ade's Home, Scenes in Playlet.

Bird Center, made famous by the cartoons of John T. McCutcheon, and Brook, Ind., the home of George Ade, the humorist, were used for local coloring in a playlet entitled "The Wonders of Merchandising," given by members of the Atlas Club of Chicago at their annual spring "frolic" at the Congress hotel last night.

The club is composed of advertising men. The receipts will be used for the "Off the Street club," which the club maintains for relief and comfort of boys and girls having no homes.

The playlet was produced under direction of Guy C. Pierce, the book was by Murray Springer, and the interpolations by Jack Stewart, all members of the club.

IN MEMORIAM

Contributions for a Wreath as a Tribute to Lieut. Joseph Allison, U. S. A.

More than 100 Chicagoans, including officers in the Illinois national guard, society women, business leaders, and friends of Lieut. Joseph Allison have joined in sending a huge memorial wreath to West Point, where the funeral of the young army officer will take place on Wednesday at 4 o'clock. Contributions, limited to 25 cents each, will be accepted by THE TRIBUNE until Tuesday for the wreath.

The West Point funeral is in keeping with the promise of Lieut. Allison's classmates made when he was graduated in 1914. Those who were lower classmen in West Point will see the fulfillment of the promise when the young man who lost his life in the Mexican campaign comes back to them in death.

Prof. Youngberg of the engineering department at West Point is a brother of Mrs. Allison.

WAITE CONFESSES MURDER IN STATEMENT TO PUBLIC.

Says He Deserves Death Penalty for Killing Peck—Embalmer Admits He Burned Check.

New York, April 1.—[Special.]—Dr. Arthur Warren Waite sent to the editor of the World late tonight a signed confession of the murder of John E. Peck, his father-in-law, and Mrs. John E. Peck, his mother-in-law. This is the only confession Dr. Waite has ever made over his signature. It follows:

"I have been informed that I have been indicted for the crime of murder in the first degree. I know the punishment is death. The indictment is just and the penalty is one that I deserve, for I killed John E. Peck.

"While lying in my bed here in the hospital, I have gone over all the incidents of the last few months of my life, and I have made my peace with my Creator. I desire to make atonement for the wrong that I have done.

"It is a terrible grief to me that I should have brought such obloquy and shame on my wife and on the name of my good parents and made my brothers to suffer as they do. I am relieved to make this my confession.

"ARTHUR WARREN WAITE."

Attorney W. R. Deuel, Waite's counsel, wrote a letter showing that Waite's confession was made with his consent.

The investigation turned today toward an effort to locate $1,200 that appears to be missing from the roll of bills surrendered by Eugene Oliver Kane, the embalmer to whom Waite paid $9,000, he says, in the hope that Kane would put arsenic in samples of embalming fluid to deceive the district attorney. Kane denied subtracting any money from the original sum Waite gave him.

Kane confessed he burned a check for $9,000 which Waite also gave him.

District Attorney Swann is determined to take the case to court at the earliest date possible, which will be May 1 probably. At Bellevue hospital it was said that Waite is improving rapidly in physical condition and that he will be in shape for arraignment Monday morning.

PLOT TO SINK LINER TOLD BY GERMAN CAPTOR OF SHIP.

Teuton Who Seized Freighter Says He and Comrades Planned to Destroy a Cunarder.

New York, April 1.—[Special.]—Ernest Schiller, the bold and independent pirate who, single handed, captured the British freighter Matoppo on the high seas last Wednesday, told Police Capt. Tunney today that the taking of the Matoppo was a mere afterthought by way of consoling himself for the failure of a plot to take the Cunard liner Pannonia.

According to the police, Schiller and three other men planned to blow up the Pannonia on the night of March 3, while it was moored in the North river. Schiller admitted he had used a motor boat in which dynamite was stored, but refused to state where the launch or the explosive could be found.

The plot to destroy the steamship was abandoned, Schiller said, because two of the three men he had engaged as confederates backed out at the final conference, and he decided the task was too big for two men to tackle.

"Four men could take a Cunarder easier than one man could take a freighter," Schiller said. "When we had taken the ship we meant to order the passengers and crew into the boats and start them for shore, reserving a launch for ourselves. After taking what money was on to blow up and sink."

CENSOR TALK ON ALLISON DEATH; CONGRESS MUM

Administration Said to Be Bringing Pressure to Bear to Prevent Discussion.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 1.—[Special.]—Administration officials were attempting today to prevent discussion of the death of Lieut. Joseph W. Allison, who contracted pneumonia while with the American Mexican expedition and died as a result of the administration's failure to provide adequate hospital facilities for its force.

Senator Culberson of Texas, who received a stirring telegram from the father of the young officer denouncing the president and the administration for criminal culpability in the death of his son, declined to say whether or not he would reply to the message and if so whether he would make his reply public.

Republican senators insisted the president should have seen that the American army was enabled to take care of its sick and wounded while in Mexico. But, out of deference to the president's desire that they do not discuss the Mexican situation in the senate, the Republicans declined to make any comment on the Allison case.

Baker and Lansing Silent.

Both the state and the war departments declined to discuss the telegram from Lieut. Allison's father. Secretary Baker was asked whether the four troopers wounded in Thursday's engagement were to be brought back to an American hospital over the long, racking journey by motor trucks. He said he could not comment on it. He added that he did not yet know who the men were or how serious their injuries were, although it is supposed the injuries were only flesh wounds.

No one else in the department can talk on matters of this sort, closely bound up with the administration policy. No one here doubts that if Funston had been allowed his way the road would have been seized before this and operated not only to bring up provisions to the expeditionary force, but also to bring back the sick and wounded.

Funston's Hands Tied.

"Funston is doing the best he can," said an army man. "How well he's doing you can see for yourself. Maybe Allison's life could have been saved by use of the railroad, exactly as it is certain provisions could be rushed to the force by the scientific use of the railroad by our troops. But Funston didn't have the railroad to work with, and the war department couldn't get it for him."

The officer returned to his work, but glanced up.

"Say," he said, "do you think we'd still be without the railroad or anything else the boys needed—if Teddy were here?"

HIGH JUMP BY AN EDITOR FOILS KIDNAPING SCHEME.

Reform Worker in Indiana Was Threatened with Whip by an Angry Woman.

Valparaiso, Ind., April 1.—[Special.]—In an effort to escape three men who it is reported sought to kidnap him, L. Garfield Snow, editor of the Independent, a reform paper, today jumped from a second story window of his office and fractured his left leg. His assailants escaped. Snow claims that the men threw him from the window.

The attempt to "get" Snow was the third made today. At noon, while he was at lunch with Mr. and Mrs. Ira J. Tilton, two men appeared. Snow, Tilton, and Dr. J. F. Take fought them off while Mrs. Tilton called the police.

The second effort was made on a main street when many people were near. Ralph Parks, son of the deputy prosecutor, and Sam Berry, a young attorney, seized him, but were overpowered.

The kidnapers, it is said, wanted to capture Snow that he might be horsewhipped by a young woman alluded to in Snow's paper.

ROME REPORTS SUCCESSES AGAINST AUSTRIAN FORCES.

Artillery and Infantry Actions Turn in Favor of Italians at Various Points on Long Front.

ROME, April 1.—The official statement covering operations against the Austrians issued today by the war office follows:

There have been minor engagements to the north of the Nago Sarca valley and in the vicinity of Mori and Roverto. Enemy detachments which tried to attack those positions with the support of their artillery were repulsed.

Our batteries shelled enemy columns in the Upper Cordevole and destroyed reinforcements in the Tofana zone. One of our detachments made a surprise attack on a small Austrian redoubt before the Passo del Cavallo, inflicting losses on the garrison and capturing arms and ammunition.

On the Isonzo front artillery duels were fought. Enemy batteries bombarded with especially severe cross fire our positions along the heights northeast of Goritz. Our guns dispersed an enemy column on the Ursic slopes of Monte Nero; damaged a bridge over the Tominski torrent between Tolmein and the Santa Lucia station, and shelled enemy trenches at Tontkuk.

Enemy aeroplanes flew over the Isonzo region yesterday, but were compelled to keep at a great altitude by the fire of our anti-aircraft guns. Repeated efforts by enemy airmen to fly over our positions on the Udine were checked by the prompt intervention of our air squadrons.

AID OF GLENN CURTISS SETS NEW CROSS COUNTRY RECORD

Steve McGordon Flies 300 Miles in Four and One-Half Hours Carrying a Passenger.

Newport News, Va., April 1.—Glenn H. Curtiss said that Steve McGordon of New York, instructor in the Curtiss aviation school here, established a new cross country passenger carrying flight record today when he flew from Newport News to Washington and return, a distance of about 300 miles, in four and a half hours without stopping the engine.

FEW SOLDIERS AT SHERIDAN.

Remnant Left by Fifth Called to Border—Thieves Take Advantage.

Waukegan, Ill., April 1.—Although the matter is not known generally, it developed another detachment of troops left Fort Sheridan the first part of the week for Mexico. When the Fifth cavalry left a part of the commissary and quartermaster's departments were left behind as caretakers. An order was received the first part of the week directing practically all those who had remained to entrain. Barely a handful of men have been left at the fort, and thieves have been busy. A company of the Thirtieth infantry which has been on duty in Alaska will be sent to Fort Sheridan to guard the fort.

Railroad Man Moves.

Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, has by special request given leave of absence to Maj. Charles Hine, his special representative, and Maj. Hine has been appointed by Jacob M. Dickinson, receiver of the Rock Island lines, as his special representative and has entered upon his duties.

TAKES POSITIVE STAND SUSSEX WAS TORPEDOED

Edward Marshall, Passenger, Says Allies Have Plenty of Proof for America.

BY EDWARD MARSHALL.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, April 1.—The Sussex was torpedoed by a German submarine, the German governmental statements to the contrary notwithstanding.

I was a passenger on the Sussex and have been given rather unusual facilities for getting information. I am in a position to state positively that pieces of the torpedo which did the ghastly work were blown into a wrecked boat of the Sussex and have been found.

One is in the hands of the French government, another is in the possession of the British admiralty. As a matter of fact I saw the latter bit before I left the Sussex, although for good reasons I did not mention the circumstance in my earlier dispatch.

Plenty of Proof for U. S.

Thus it lies in the power of the American government to get absolute proof of the falsity of Ambassador von Bernstorff's contentions that the Sussex struck a mine. It was torpedoed.

I am further authorized to state by high official authority that while the torpedo boat destroyer which acted as a rescue ship was taking us to Dover, it was fired at twice by submarines.

The impression made on Americans in Europe by this incredible assault on a defenseless passenger ship, actually and habitually carrying more women and children than men and bearing no munitions of war, has been profound.

Possible Error Seen.

BERLIN, April 1.—It is barely possible the channel liner Sussex was torpedoed by a German submarine whose commander was under the impression that a British transport was being attacked, it was stated here tonight. The officials here, however, believe the Sussex struck a mine.

It was pointed out that the Sussex for some time was in service as a transport carrying British troops to the continent. There is a possibility—though it is said to be extremely remote—that a U-boat commander, believing it still in transport service, shot a torpedo against its bow.

If this should prove to be the case, Germany will disavow the attack at once, it was stated, and pay full compensation for damage resulting from the attack.

CAMPAIGN ON IN EARNEST FOR PURER BRED CATTLE.

Many Farmers Meet at Carbondale, Ill., and Study Every Phase of the Business.

Carbondale, Ill., April 1.—For the purpose of inaugurating a sweeping campaign in southern Illinois to put more pure bred cattle on every farm, a big meeting of farmers, bankers, and business men was held here today.

At the meeting every phase of the pure bred cow business was gone into and the stockmen, farmers, and dairymen were educated to the value of dairy farms.

Twenty-four fine Holstein bulls were donated by the Illinois Central railroad and will be placed along its lines at points where the best herds of cattle have been established. Two carloads of fine Holstein cows are on exhibition and were judged by the school children.

ZEPPELINS KILLED 28, WOUNDED 44, IN FRIDAY RAID ON ENGLAND

ONE GIANT SHIP, STRUCK, PLUNGES INTO THE OCEAN

Driven Off from Attack on London—Crew Captured—Mobs Look On—No Panic.

LONDON, April 1.—Twenty-eight persons were killed and forty-four injured in last night's Zeppelin raid on England, the admiralty announced this afternoon. Several of the injured are in a serious condition, and it is probable the death list may be increased above thirty.

One of the raiding Zeppelins, the L-15, was wrecked and brought down off the mouth of the Thames, forty-five miles east of London, and its crew captured before it sank in the harbor. It was one of the latest models.

BRITISH OFFICIAL REPORT.

The identity of the wrecked Zeppelin and other details of the raid were disclosed in the following official statement:

It has now been ascertained that the Zeppelins which carried out the air raid last night were organized in two squadrons and one detached ship. The two squadrons made the eastern counties their objective, while the detached ship raided the northeast coast.

So far as is known at present, 54 explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped in the eastern counties and 22 on the northeast coast.

The Zeppelin reported by the admiralty to have fallen into the sea was L-15. It was hit by gun fire while over the eastern counties with a shell striking the upper part of the ship near the tail.

After being hit it quickly dropped to a lower altitude, well down by the tail and finally came down into the sea off the coast of Kent.

A machine gun, some ammunition, a petrol tank riddled with shrapnel, and some machinery was dropped either by this vessel or by another of the raiders.

The casualties at present reported amount to twenty-eight killed and forty-four injured.

THREE RAIDS ATTEMPTED.

Arriving off the east coast at about 8 p. m., the airships divided into two squadrons, one moving eastward and the other taking a more southerly course in the direction of the Thames. A single Zeppelin directed its route to the northeastern tier of counties.

Thousands of persons witnessed the raid. They saw the searchlights pick up one of the German sky dreadnaughts and bathe it in light, while anti-aircraft batteries volleyed, surrounding the long gas bag with smoke puffs. As on previous raids, the crowd's attitude was one of curiosity rather than alarm.

The captured crew said it was struck by a shell near the stern, settled slowly approaching the coast, and plunged suddenly to the water from a height of about 300 feet.

The German prisoners number seventeen, with their commander.

The Zeppelin shot down is the first destroyed on the English coast in one of the dirigible raids. It is the twenty-sixth Zeppelin destroyed since the beginning of the war, according to figures of the British and French war offices.

Four French Planes Lost.

BERLIN, April 1.—Four French aeroplanes were shot down by German air craft, two of them being brought down inside the German lines, the official statement from the war office announced this afternoon. The statement follows:

German battle craft shot down four French aeroplanes. Of these two landed in our lines, one near Laon and another near Mogeville, in the Woevre. Behind the enemy's front one landed near Villaux Boise and another south of Hautecourt.

Swiss Demand Action.

GENEVA, April 1.—The political department of the Swiss government says in a public statement that it seems proved that the two aviators who dropped five large bombs on Friday morning on the Swiss town of Porentruy, near the French frontier, were Germans.

The federal council has instructed the Swiss minister in Berlin to protest strongly against this further violation of the neutrality of Switzerland and to demand prompt and complete satisfaction.

Little Miss Waller took the second popularity prize, and thereby carried much pride and satisfaction into her home at 1314 West Sixty-fourth street. Miss Waller reported that she had the time of her life at the Coliseum.

BOSTON AND CHESAPEAKE EASY FOR U. S. INVADER?

British Military Man Says Foe Advancing from Those Points Could Paralyze Us.

LONDON, April 1.—A European power invading the United States would strike simultaneously at the unfortified shores of Chesapeake bay and at Boston, according to Maj. C. Darnley Stuart-Stephens, in an article in the Pictorial.

"Fifty per cent of the German mercantile marine is in Hamburg and Bremen," said Maj. Stuart-Stephens. "In fifteen days this flotilla could land 400,000 German veterans on the New England coast line. So efficient is the general staff organization that these liners would return in another month with a like number.

"The German striking point would be at Boston, which would, of course, be captured from the land side, and the defenses of which, paltry in themselves, would be devoid of even the presence of such a garrison as could maintain more than a couple of days' resistance.

"A minor operation would be conducted simultaneously at Chesapeake bay, where there are even now no fortifications. Then would follow the holding of a line extending from Lake Erie to Chesapeake bay, both flanks protected by water and behind it the sea. Also between the natural rampart occupied by the invader and the seacoast, are practically all the American arsenals, nine-tenths of the steel works, the munitions factories of Connecticut and the shipbuilding yards."

CHICAGO KEEPING IN LEAD IN RECRUITING U. S. ARMY.

Six Day Period Sees Seventy-Five Men Accepted—Total for Country 851—Many Refused.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—[Special.]—Chicago continues to produce more army recruits than any other city of the country. the acceptances for the six day period ended yesterday noon from that city numbering seventy-five. San Francisco had more applicants, 451 against 383, but acceptances at the Pacific port reached only sixty-six, and the total for the whole lcountry was 851.

TURKS TELL OF SUCCESSES ON THREE OF THEIR FRONTS.

Report Victories in the Euphrates Region, on the Caucasus Front, and in the Dardanelles.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 1.—The following official statement, covering various war fronts, has been issued by the Turkish war office:

Irak front—There has been no change in the Tigris region. In the Euphrates region one of our detachments attacked the enemy east of Maxine and drove him southward with losses. At the same time our volunteers surprised the camp of the detachment and took much booty.

Caucasus front—Our troops have advanced in the Tchoruk valley and repulsed attacks of hostile reconnoitering detachments. On the rest of the front there have been no important operations.

Dardanelles—An enemy cruiser opened an ineffective fire and then retired. Three aeroplanes, coming from Imbros, were driven off by the effective fire of our batteries at Yenikui.

BISMARCK'S BIRTHDAY MADE A BIG EVENT AT KIRMESS

Special Chorus Gives Special Program of German Music at Benefit for War Sufferers.

Yesterday was the biggest day of the charity kirmess now being held at the Coliseum for the benefit of war sufferers.

April 1 is Bismarck's 101st birthday anniversary, and special plans were made for making the day one long to be remembered. There was a chorus of 500 voices, with appropriate songs. Ballmann's band gave a specially selected program of German composers, with one exception, Sullivan's "Lost Chord."

Otto C. Schneider, chairman of the executive committee, says the receipts will go over the $100,000 mark.

With the closing day, April 5, drawing near the baby contest and the popularity contest among the girls is getting keener. Tomorrow Frances Lillian Krumbein, who played the baby in "Mme. Butterfly" with Geraldine Farrar last winter, will be on view at the Coliseum.

GERMAN ATTACK ON VAUX VILLAGE WINS FOOTHOLD

Paris Admits That Enemy Made Advance Northeast of Fortress of Verdun.

PARIS, April 1.—Resuming the "nutcracker" tactics, the German crown prince has made a slight advance on the east bank of the Meuse, while halting the advance of his right wing northwest of Verdun.

The Germans gained a foothold in the western outskirts of the village of Vaux, five miles northeast of Verdun early today. The Teutons came under a terrible fire from Fort Vaux in their first attempt against the village, and were slaughtered in large numbers. The second attack drove the French back upon the center of the village in a four hour struggle.

French officers are certain that the next forty-eight hours will see a resumption of the attacks on the west bank of the Meuse, on a grand scale. French batteries around Dead Man hill, and on Hill 304 have laid Malancourt under terrific fire night and day since it fell into German hands. The Germans must either advance, or retire from the position.

Admits Losses at Vaux.

The official report by the ministry of war admitting the German success at Vaux follows:

East of the Meuse the bombardment became exceedingly violent yesterday evening and last night along the sector between the wood south of Haudremont and the region of Vaux. Against this latter point the Germans delivered two sudden attacks in which large numbers of men took part. The first, from both the north and the south, was checked by our curtain of fire and the force of our infantry before it could get as far as our lines.

During the second attack the enemy, after a spirited fight, was able to secure a footing in the western part of the village of Vaux, occupied by our forces.

Further Attacks Stopped.

The text of the official statment dealing with the later fighting follows:

In the Argonne our batteries were active against the German organizations north of Laharazee and Le Fille Mort and against the enemy camps in the north part of Cheppy wood.

West of the Meuse the bombardment has been intense against our positions between Avocourt and Malancourt.

To the east of the Meuse a violent bombardment was followed in the course of the afternoon by a German attack on the ravine between Fort Douaumont and the village of Vaux. The attack was stopped by our curtain of fire.

In the Woevre the artillery activity has been less marked. On the rest of the front there is nothing to report.

German Official Report.

BERLIN, April 1.—[By Wireless.]—The official statement of today from genera headquarters is as follows:

Near St. Eloi an attack with hand grenades by the British was repulsed. There was fighting with mines between La Bassee canal and Neuville.

Northeast of Roye the fire of the French artillery was spirited. German artillery effectively shelled positions of the enemy on the Aisne front.

There were violent artillery duels in the Argonne and in the sector of the Meuse.

SON OF SHAUGHNESSY DEAD.

Montreal, April 1.—Word was received here today that Capt. Fred Shaughnessy, second son of Lord Shaughnessy, head of the Canadian Pacific railway, had been killed in action.

OFFENSIVE COST SLAVS 140,000?

Berlin Estimates Russian Casualties in Latest Campaign in the North.

CALLS DRIVE FAILURE.

BERLIN, April 1.—Russian casualties in the recent offensive on the northern part of the line were not less than 140,000 men, the German war office estimated today. There are no developments of importance. The Russian offensive apparently is exhausted for the moment. The statement follows:

It appears that the Russian storming attacks directed against the very wide sector of the army group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg and carried out with thirty divisions, totaling more than 500,000 men, and with an unprecedented amount of munitions, such as never before has been used on the eastern front, and which lasted from March 18 to 28, now have ceased. Thanks to the bravery and stubborn resistance of our troops the enemy achieved no success whatever.

Russian General Order Recited.

The great object which it was intended should be attained by this attack is apparent from the following order issued by the high command to the armies on the western front under date of March 17 and bearing the number 537:

"Russians on the western front: For the last six months, greatly weakened with only a small number of arms and ammunition, you held up the advance of the enemy, and after having held him back in the vicinity of a break in the line near Molodechna you took up your present position.

"His majesty and the country now await from you another heroic deed—the ejection of the enemy from within the frontier of the country. When tomorrow you undertake this glorious task I have faith in your courage and your deep devotion to the czar and your warm love for your native country and am thereby convinced you will fulfill your sacred duty by freeing your brothers from the yoke. God aid us in our sacred endeavors.

"EWERT, Adjutant General."

The losses suffered in the severe repulses have been carefully calculated and are estimated at 140,000 men

To any one who knows the circumstances, it is certainly astounding that such an undertaking should have been commenced at such a time of the year. The choice of the time decided on was due much less to the will of the Russian command than to the enforced requirements of a needy ally.

Austrian Official Statement.

The official Austrian statement of today follows:

Near Olika Austro-Hungarian detachments captured an advanced position of the enemy, filled the trenches, destroyed the defense works, and returned to their main positions. Attempts by the enemy to advance southeast of Sienkowce were frustrated by our artillery and by counter attacks

Russian Official Statement.

PETROGRAD, April 1.—The official statement issued today by the Russian war office says:

The Germans continued to bombard the bridgehead at Ikskull and began an attack thereon, but were repulsed by our fire. South of the Dvinsk region our artillery successfully shelled an enemy train at the station of Tourmont, and also enemy detachments which held an outpost near Mechkele, north of Vidzy. The Germans fled.

On the Vidzy front and around Lake Narocz there was lively cannonading at several places. In the region to the southeast of Kolki the enemy abandoned first line trenches and retired to the second line. South of Olyka the enemy captured momentarily a hill which was immediately retaken by our troops.

115 DROWNED IN RED CROSS SHIP; GOT NO WARNING

Wounded and Nurses Carried Down by Torpedoed Portugal in the Black Sea.

PETROGRAD, April 1.—The Russian hospital ship Portugal was sunk in the Black sea by a German submarine with the loss of 115 lives, it was officially announced today.

The statement follows:

At 8 o'clock on the morning of March 30 the Franco-Russian hospital ship Portugal, lying in the Black sea off eastern Anatolia, having been sent there to receive wounded, was attacked by a German submarine. Two torpedoes were fired. The second torpedo hit the engine room of the vessel and it sank in less than a minute.

SISTERS OF CHARITY DIE.

Eleven of twenty-six Sisters of Charity were saved by boats which accompanied the Portugal. The missing include Count Tatistcheff, delegate of the Red Cross; Dr. Pankricheff Tikhmeneva, Baroness Meyerendareff, sister superior of the Sisters of Charity; fourteen Sisters of Charity; fifty Russian members of the crew and Red Cross, and twenty-nine men of the French crew and some wounded. There were 273 persons aboard the Portugal, of whom 158 were saved.

The Turkish government had recognized the Portugal as a hospital ship. It was painted with the prescribed colors. The attack was made in broad daylight. The submarine steered around the ship and fired point blank.

This act of the Germans was useless from a military standpoint and evokes indignation. It proves again that peace with an enemy who insanely violates divine and human laws is impossible before his complete destruction.

THREE OTHER SHIPS VICTIMS.

LONDON, April 1.—The Norwegian steamer Memento has been sunk with the loss of one life.

[The Memento displaced 1,076 tons and was owned and registered at Christiania.]

The British schooner John Pritchard has been sunk by a submarine. Sinking of the Norwegian steamer Norne was also reported today. Crews of both vessels were rescued.

[The John Pritchard displaced 118 tons and was owned and registered at Carnarvon. The Norne was a 1,158 ton steamer registered at Bergen.]

Four other ships, all neutrals, also were sunk during the last twenty-four hours. They are the Norwegian steamers Hans Gude and Norne, the Norwegian bark Bell, and the Swedish steamer Hollandia.

D. A. R. TO RAISE FUND FOR RELIEF IN ONE WAR ZONE.

Hope to Sell 10,000,000 Belgian Flags on April 8—Receipts for Aid of Noncombatants.

New York, April 1.—The Daughters of the American Revolution announced today the inauguration of a nation-wide campaign for contributions to relieve destitute non-combatants in Belgium and northern France.

The campaign will culminate on April 8, birthday of King Albert of Belgium, which will be known as "Belgian Flag day." Members of the organization throughout the country, 100,000 strong, dressed in white and wearing the Belgian colors, will on that day sell small Belgian flags on the streets. The proceeds will be turned over to the commission for relief in Belgium.

Seven cents paid for one flag will equal the cost of a day's ration for one Belgian, and 10,000,000 flags have been ordered for the campaign, the organization announced.

AMERICAN RED CROSS AIDS FAMINE VICTIMS IN TURKEY.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—The American Red Cross received word today that Turkey for the first time is ready to accept aid for a half million of her citizens who face starvation. Hundreds, it was said, are dying for lack of foods. Ten thousand dollars was cabled to fill immediate needs.

DRYS' MANAGERS PREDICT VICTORY IN OPTION FIGHTS

Claim They Will Add to Anti-Liquor Territory in Tuesday's Elections.

Anti-saloon campaign managers expressed confidence last night that Tuesday's downstate local option elections will record a decisive victory for saloon foes.

Fifty-nine townships, now wet, are under the fire of the dry forces, involving more than 1,000 saloons. The wets have filed petitions in seventy-eight townships now dry, attempting to regain ground that was lost when the township option law had its first tryout two years ago.

The larger wet cities to vote are Aurora, Alton, Dixon, La Salle, Lincoln, Moline, Rock Island, and Waukegan.

The more important cities where the drys are now in power voting Tuesday are Bloomington, Canton, Decatur, De Kalb, Elgin, Freeport, Kewanee, and Mattoon.

The vote of the women, it is conceded on all sides, will be the decisive factor in many downstate centers. The campaign has been of intense bitterness, particularly in Elgin and Aurora, in Kane county, and in Rock Island and Moline in Rock Island county.

The Anti-Saloon League of Illinois issued this summary of the situation:

"A noticeable feature in the dry campaigns is the number of prominent business men who are out in the open to prevent the return of the saloon.

WETS OUT AFTER SCALPS OF WATSON AND DEMPSEY.

Issue Final Appeal to Voters to Take Advantage of the Factional Rows in the Republican Camp.

The wet forces predict big gains in the new council to be elected on Tuesday as a result of the bitter factional strife that has split the Republican hosts as between Mayor Thompson and former Gov. Deneen. They count on the election of several Democratic candidates who are allied with the wet interests of the town.

Two wards in which the wets look for an unprecedented result in the factional fighting for ward committeeman are the Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, where they hope to defeat Ald. Watson and Dempsey. In both wards the "rebel nine" forces won and inside reports are that the city hall forces have long knives up their sleeves for both aldermen.

In the closing hours of the fight a special effort is being put forth by the wets to defeat Watson. In the final appeal issued to the voters by the United Societies for Local Self-Government, Watson, Dempsey, and Mayor Thompson are singled out as particular objects of the organization's opposition, and all friends of the liberal cause are urged to do their utmost to defeat the two aldermanic candidates.

LOWDEN LEADS STRAW VOTE

Republican Choice of Downstate Newspapers—Dunne Favored as Democrat—Sherman Weak.

Marion, Ill., April 1.—[Special.]—The Republican Leader of this city has just closed a straw ballot of the newspapers of southern Illinois, and the announcement of the result was made this evening. Col. Frank O. Lowden was the leader by 4 to 1 for the Republican party as candidate for governor, and Edward F. Dunne was the leader of the Democratic party for the same office.

Sherman did not pull as strong a vote of confidence as had been expected.

About half of the papers expressed themselves as doubtful of his ability to secure the nomination of the Republican convention.

WEEKLY REVIEW of the WAR

by CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY

GENERAL.

During the week the entente allies' war council finished its sittings. It gave out that the most complete unity of purpose existed and would continue to exist with respect to both military and commercial affairs.

FRENCH FRONT.

The British made a successful local attack near St. Eloi, resulting in the capture of 600 yards of German trenches. The fighting spread to both sides, but finally died out without marked result. After heavily bombarding the French line from Bethincourt to Cumieres and also the region of Malancourt, the Germans made attacks in front of Malancourt which, while at first failing, later gave them 2,000 yards of French trench, with a foothold in Malancourt, and finally Malancourt itself. German attacks made in the region of Fort Douaumont, on the other side of the Meuse, failed. French attacks on Avocourt wood also failed.

ITALIAN FRONT.

In the beginning of the week the Italians made several small successful local attacks on the Goritza bridgehead. These were followed later by small local successes on the part of the Austrians in the same vicinity. Throughout the week there has been reasonably heavy fighting in this theater of war. The last reports indicate that the offensive has been taken by the Austro-Hungarians, who are making a number of attacks. The Italians report having repulsed them.

RUSSIAN FRONT.

The Russians have been making reasonably heavy attacks against Von Hindenberg's line. They report some small local successes. The Germans also report small local successes. The probabilities are that both reports are correct, both sides having had small local successes in some places and small local reverses in others. There has been no fighting of importance along the Galician front the past week.

THE BALKANS.

There has been no change in the Balkan situation. The entente allies still hold Saloniki and Avlona. Roumania and Greece are still neutral.

ARMENIAN FRONT.

The Russians have continued their advance along the Black sea coast. They are now, by their own reports, about thirty miles east of Trebizond. Last week's reports of their besieging this town are therefore incorrect. Along the rest of this front, outside of the repulse by the Russians of a number of Turkish attacks, there has been no event of importance.

MESOPOTAMIA.

The situation remains the same, one British force being shut up in Kut-el-Amara, while the relief force is unable to advance.

PERSIA.

No change has been reported in the situation the last week.

EGYPT.

There have been no reports of importance from Egypt the last week.

SUMMARY.

The event of chief importance is still the German attack on Verdun. Here the Germans are continuing their attacks and still gaining ground. On all other parts of the French front and on all other fronts they are resting on the defensive. This, therefore, is the time for a general attack by the allies on all fronts. The Russians are evidently doing the best they can. The Italians also have attempted an offensive, which apparently has led to a counter offensive on the part of the Austro-Hungarians. The British are the only ones who are not making or attempting reasonably heavy attacks. They now occupy perhaps a fourth of the line in France and are known to have close to a million troops along this line. The undoubted reason for their failure to attack is that their troops, being mostly made up of Kitchener's new army, are not sufficiently trained and not sufficiently well led to successfully carry through such attacks as the Germans have been making for some time at Verdun. Only such attacks as these could break the German line. The failure of the British to attack is one of the many lessons as to the necessity of preparing for war before war comes that their land operations have furnished since August, 1914.

Aid for Retired Ministers.

Decatur, Ill., April 1.—G. W. Kaylor, retired farmer, announced today that he has donated $80,000 toward the $500,000 fund of the Illinois conference of the Methodist church for the support of retired ministers. The fund now totals $175,000.

Firemen Get $100 Check.

Fire Marshal Thomas O'Connor yesterday received a check for $100 from the Byrne Bros. Dredging and Engineering company for the firemen's pension fund. The check was given in consideration of work of firemen in saving a building at South Halsted and West Fifty-fifth streets.

FACTION FIGHTS ON NORTH SIDE BURY BIG ISSUES

Voters Not Wildly Excited, but Politicians Engage in Bitter War.

[This is the third of four articles on the municipal political campaign.]

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

North side and Lake View wards—the rank and file—are not terribly excited over the Tuesday aldermanic elections. The politicians, all the way from the Rush street bridge to the Evanston city limits, have worked themselves into a fury.

There are two good reasons for this somewhat strange condition of affairs, emphasized by the general rule applicable to the municipal campaign just closing, that the real issues that will confront the new council have not been discussed in the slightest.

The first is that the northern wards, in large part, are represented by tried and trusted aldermen. Those who were candidates for renomination fought out their troubles in the Republican primaries. Only an unexpected reversal of sentiment can defeat them Tuesday. This applies particularly to Ald. Kjellander in the Twenty-third, Ald. Link in the Twenty-fifth, and Ald. Pretzel in the Twenty-sixth.

District Full of Politicians.

The second is that the north side wards and the Lake View territory now shelter more active politicians and recognized leaders of all parties and factions than all of the rest of the city put together.

The Twenty-first ward is in a class by itself. Harboring the Lake Shore drive, the "Sands," the Clark street lodging house district, and the shady territory that has secured renewed fame through State's Attorney Hoyne's graft disclosures, this ward is passing through its annual spasm of political recrimination.

In any event, the practical aldermanic issues have been forgotten and Tuesday's elections will be settled largely upon the basis of their probable relation to the ward and state committee contests to be settled one week later.

John F. O'Malley nominated his candidate for alderman in the Twenty-first, Dorsey Crowe, in the Democratic primary.

Earl J. Walker, a young Republican pressed into service at the last minute in 1914, was handed the Republican nomination without a struggle.

O'Malley High in Sullivan Clan.

O'Malley is a candidate for Democratic ward committeeman. He is one of the recognized "big fellows" in the Sullivan organization. Quinn and Ald. Ellis Geiger are out to beat him on April 11. Geiger is the anti-O'Malley candidate.

The Republican organization, now led by Oscar Hebel, believes that it can elect Walker to the council. This belief is heightened by the assurance that many Quinn Democrats will vote for Walker as a means of taking a crack at O'Malley.

Meantime Geiger and Quinn have shot out the charge that the city hall Republicans and the O'Malley Democrats are in cahoots. O'Malley says this is a lie. State's Attorney Hoyne has named State Committeeman Francis A. Becker, a Thompson-Pike lieutenant and city hall payroller, as the "man higher up" in collecting graft from the north side underworld.

The Twenty-second ward affair is little more than a disgraceful Democratic factional fight. It is so bad that the M. V. L. found it necessary to give the benefit of the doubt to Carl Pardeck, Socialist, who has no chance of election.

The league named Ald. John H. Bauler as second choice. Bauler is a brother of the late Ald. Herman Bauler. Two years ago Bauler had scant praise in reform quarters. Former Ald. Victor J. Schaeffer, affiliated with the Harrison Democracy, was defeated by Bauler in the Democratic primaries. Schaeffer now runs as an independent.

Mayor's Ward Battle Ground.

Ald. John Kjellander won an impressive Republican victory when he defeated Mayor Thompson's candidate, Julius Reynolds Kline, in the Twenty-third. This is the home ward of Mayor Thompson and former Mayor Carter H. Harrison. The Thompson organization is supporting Kjellander, and he is due to be reëlected by a big majority over Fred H. Strauss, Democrat.

The ward is shot to pieces by a three cornered fight for Republican ward committeeman. Edward J. Brundage, the present committeeman, is a candidate for reëlection. The city hall is behind A. O. Erickson, and Franklin S. Catlin, backed by Chief Justice Harry Olson and the Deneen organization, is a third candidate. Former Ald. Jacob Hey, late Progressive, has filed a petition.

Democrats Solid for Haderlein.

Ald. John Haderlein, who was the Sullivan slate candidate for sheriff in the 1914 primaries, is up for reëlection in the Twenty-fourth ward. The Democratic organization is pretty well solidified behind him and the Democrats claim his election. Gustave Neuberg is the Republican nominee, supported by the M. V. L.

Ald. Frank J. Link, in the great Republican Twenty-fifth ward, did the big end of his fighting before the primaries. He had to defeat Samuel M. Hamilton, the city hall candidate. The morning after election Hamilton declared himself for Link and turned out his organization in Link's behalf. The next day Hamilton became the city hall candidate for ward committeeman.

Little Chance for Dewey.

Joseph E. Dewey is the Democratic candidate, with little chance of getting anywhere. Edward J. Burns is an independent candidate. All interest in the ward is over the ward committeeship contest, and little attention has been given to the aldermanic race since the primaries. Ald. Capitain and Rogers Park Republicans are backing Isaac J. Bryan. The south end of the ward supports George K. Schmidt, who is a neutral in the present county committee split and says he is against outside domination of the ward. Hamilton is the city hall entrant. All three say they are for Link's reëlection Tuesday.

Ald. George Pretzel in the Twenty-sixth ward was not opposed in the Republican primaries by a city hall candidate, although aligned with the mayor's foes in the council. The Harrison Democratic organization in the ward, led by Peter Reinberg, nominated Frank O. Sebring, former assistant corporation counsel under Harrison. An unprecedented apathy is all that can defeat Pretzel.

POLITICAL "TEAS" A SUCCESS

That Glencoe tea party may get a fifty fifty break from the historians with the Boston pouring, hitherto the most noted table beverage.

Political women wiseacres, intent on putting over the school defense ticket of Glencoe, yesterday served arguments with tea and wafers at fifteen "teas," in the homes of Glencoe matrons. Orators made their way through all fifteen parties, making three minute speeches.

"I believe we have our opponents beaten," said Mrs. George M. Groves, after speaking at thirteen teas. "If we win from the nonpartisan ticket the tea party coup will be responsible."

POWER—Ample to take this car, loaded, anywhere that any automobile can go.

SPEED—More than 999 out of every thousand car owners would ever want or dare to use.

MOTOR—The marvelous Chandler Motor, built in the Chandler factory for three years past and famous the world over. Free from any hint of experimentation.

Some Old Names Are Branded On New Theories This Year

CHANDLER isn't the oldest name in the automobile industry—but there isn't a better name in the industry.

Some old names are branded on new theories this year.

The Chandler name is branded on a car that has made good for three years.

The Chandler motor of today, except for minor refinements, is the motor that upset the whole industry three years ago, (to the everlasting advantage of the car purchaser), and launched the vogue of light weight sixes selling for less than $2000.

Twenty thousand owners have named it, "the Marvelous Motor".

Twenty thousand new owners will this year put their seal of approval on that name. For the Chandler is mechanically right. In it there is not a single hint of experimentation; not a suggestion of untried theory.

And Chandler bodies are the most beautiful of the year. There is no reason why we should tell you this is true, if it were not true. Come and see them.

Come see the big seven-passenger touring car; featured by the handsome walnut panel tonneau cowl—featured by grace in every line. Come see the new four-passenger roadster—the sensation of the year everywhere.

Come see these things, come prove these these things, for yourself.

WILL HE TAKE IT? ANSWER IS UP TO HUGHES

Republicans of Nation United for Justice if He Will Make the Race.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—[Special.]—That Charles Evans Hughes, associate justice of the United States Supreme court, will be the Republican candidate for president if he will accept the nomination is the growing conviction of the party leaders here and elsewhere.

Many Republicans who were saying a week ago that the choice lies between Hughes and Roosevelt are now conceding that "it looks like Hughes in a walk."

With the Republican convention little more than two months in the future Justice Hughes looms so large as a possibility for the nomination that only he can eliminate himself from the contest.

BUT ONE QUESTION.

That his name will figure conspicuously in the balloting in the convention from the start, unless he positively forbids it, now is a foregone conclusion.

"Will he accept the nomination?"

That is the big question in regard to Hughes. He refused to allow himself to be considered for the nomination in 1912 and recently he has written two letters, both made public, in which he asserted that he is out of politics and repudiated any efforts to round up delegates in his behalf. But he did not completely close the door as did Gen. Sherman when he said: "I will not accept if nominated and I will not serve if elected."

AN ETHICAL LIMITATION.

As the days go by without Justice Hughes breaking his silence on this supreme question, Republican leaders are becoming convinced that while the jurist holds it repugnant to propriety and the true welfare of the nation for a member of the judiciary to seek political preferment, he conceives no ethical reason for refusing the nomination if it should come to him wholly unsought. They are beginning to believe that Mr. Hughes certainly would accept if he were nominated by an overwhelming majority of the convention.

From the viewpoint of political "availability" Hughes appears to approximate the ideal candidate more than any other Republican whose qualifications are being considered. He is classed as a progressive Republican, but is far from being a radical. He has always had the support of the progressive wing of the party.

It is recognized, however, that in the extent to which Justice Hughes has been removed from the situations breeding enmity lies his only weakness. His views on the burning issues of the day are not known.

ROOSEVELT OFFERS HARMONY.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—[Special.]—Washington believes that Theodore Roosevelt has returned to the Republican party because of his desire to accomplish the defeat of President Wilson at the polls in November.

Such is the interpretation placed on the conference in New York yesterday between Mr. Roosevelt, former Senator Root of New York, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, and Robert Bacon, former American ambassador to France. Congressman Madden of Chicago, one of the foremost supporters of Senator Sherman's presidential candidacy, had this to say:

"I think the conference indicates that the eastern leaders want to nominate Hughes. I am quite certain that while preparedness may have been the chief theme, Hughes' name was discussed in connection with the presidency and preparedness. I look for the Hughes movement to take more definite shape from now on."

This was the view generally expressed by the leaders, although they would not allow their names to be attached to the view. One of them, a man of more than national importance, said:

"I think the greatest significance may be attached to the conference. To me it indicates that Roosevelt does not desire the nomination this year unless the Republican party feels that he should take it in order to win over Wilson. Although I was not of this opinion a week ago, I now think Roosevelt is willing to coöperate with the Republican party in an effort to develop a man of sufficient strength to beat Wilson.

"Hughes seems to be the man on whom all factions—with one single exception—can unite. Unless Mr. Hughes declares himself absolutely out of consideration in connection with the nomination before the convention meets in Chicago on June 7 he will be nominated there.

"If Mr. Hughes does make a statement to the effect he will decline the nomination if tendered to him I cannot see any outcome except the nomination of Roosevelt."

Democrats See Hughes Out.

In Democratic circles much interest was manifested in the Root-Roosevelt-Lodge-Bacon conference. Some of the administration leaders admitted the conference indicates there will be a united opposition to Mr. Wilson.

The Democrats still believe and the belief apparently is founded on the hope that Hughes will not accept the nomination if tendered to him. They admitted, however, today that Roosevelt's acquiescence to the Hughes movement had made the colonel much stronger in the Republican party.

TWO STATES TO ELECT.

New York and Wisconsin will elect national convention delegates at direct primaries next Tuesday. What happens in these two states will be of tremendous effect in the Republican national convention. These two primaries and the Indiana Republican state convention at Indianapolis on Wednesday compose a trinity of impressive political events for the week.

Forty-two delegates to the Chicago convention were elected last week. All of them are uninstructed. The first big contest the national committee and the credentials committee at the Coliseum will be asked to consider had its start in Louisiana.

Up to last night 235 of the 985 Chicago delegates had been elected. Of these 161 are uninstructed. Fairbanks has forty instructed; Cummins has the twenty-four of Minnesota, and La Follette the ten from North Dakota.

Bridge Closed Today.

Service on the Eighteenth street car line will be interrupted today. The bridge will be closed by the city to remove piling.

A DELICATESSEN ROMANCE

Proprietor of the Little Store Around the Corner Will Elope to Crown Point with Druggist.

Miss Edna Peckham

Miss Edna Peckham, 1546 East Sixty-third street, yesterday called up THE TRIBUNE and asked about marriage regulations in Indiana.

Miss Peckham, a reporter discovered later in the afternoon, runs a delicatessen around the corner from the Hyde Park high school. For diversion she does some art work.

G. E. Kamm, a druggist who lives at 1501 East Sixtieth street, dropped in at Miss Peckham's shop about four weeks ago. He admired the proprietress' drawings. That started it.

An elopement to Crown Point, they figure, is the proper caper.

ELECTION HANGS ON WOMAN VOTE

issues that have developed in the city hall, according to reports received by party workers in the closing hour of the canvass.

WOMEN WETS A PUZZLE.

One of the unknown elements in the battle on Tuesday will be the women who have been organized by the United Societies for Local Self-Government to protest against the Sunday closing order of the mayor. Several large massmeetings have been held by the leaders of this faction, and through the activities of the officials of nearly 1,000 organizations affiliated with the United Societies, it is estimated that fully 200,000 women voters of the liberal class have been appealed to. It has been virtually a personal appeal to each one.

This entire voting strength among the women which will be thrown against candidates supported by Mayor Thompson since the attack on "dry" aldermen is coupled with a stinging assault on the mayor.

In wards where there is a close division as between the drys and wets, the wet leaders are predicting landslide victories. Such a victory is claimed in the Twelfth ward, home ward of A. J. Cermak, secretary of the United Societies. In this ward practically the solid vote of the Deneen forces is said to be pledged up to Novak, who is the "wet" candidate against Ald. Mulac, the city hall candidate up for reëlection.

VOTE FOR JUDGE ON A SEPARATE BALLOT TUESDAY

Chicago to Find New Law to Divorce Bench and Politics in Effect.

The new Illinois law for a separate ballot for judges, based upon the theory of nonpartisanship, becomes effective practically for the first time next Tuesday.

Voters at the municipal elections on that day will be handed a single ballot containing five party columns and the names of four candidates. They will also get a ballot carrying only the names of aldermanic nominees. In some wards there will be a third ballot for various bond issues or township officers.

The election for judge develops the advent of the new "nonpartisan" law, and politicians generally didn't seem to know what was coming until the sample ballots were issued.

Incidentally, the cost of printing the ballots for the April election is exactly doubled.

The Republican candidate, John A. Swanson, has been indorsed by a vote of the Chicago Bar association.

WOMAN PLANS CAMPAIGN TO CONSERVE VISION.

Says Much Blindness Can Be Prevented at Expenditure of 2 Cents a Baby.

It will cost 2 cents each to save the eyesight of babies who might otherwise be permanently blind, according to the estimate of Miss Carolyn C. Van Blarcom, who has become secretary of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

The society has begun a wide campaign. Miss Van Blarcum believes the best results will be attained through the efforts of other organizations, and especially physicians.

The use of a 1 per cent solution of nitrate of silver, which will be given free by the society for the use of physicians and midwives, is expected to reduce blindness greatly.

BRANDEIS RECOMMENDED BY SUBCOMMITTEE, 3 TO 2

Washington, D. C., April 1.—Three to two, the senate subcommittee which investigated the fitness of Louis D. Brandeis for a place on the Supreme court bench, today voted to recommend his confirmation.

While names would not be given, it was learned the unfavorable votes were cast by Works and Cummins, Republicans, and that the vote of Cummins was based on a view less adverse to Brandeis than that held by Works.

The report will go to the senate judiciary committtee Monday. There the Republicans, in view of the action of the two dissenting members of the subcommittee, are expected to make a fight to keep the recommendation delayed or indefinitely postponed.

YOUNG SOCIETY WOMEN CAMPAIGN FOR WALKER.

Lake Shore Drive Group Volunteers to Work in Precincts to Bring About Defeat of Dorsey Crowe.

Young society women are to do political work in the Twenty-first ward on Tuesday in the endeavor to defeat Dorsey Crowe, Democratic candidate for alderman. Among the women who offered their services in the campaign of Earl Walker, Republican candidate, are Miss Louise Herrick, Miss Virginia Pope, Miss Catherine Dudley, Miss Cornelia Conger, Miss Mildred McCormick, Miss Suzette Ryerson, Miss Edith Blair, Miss Marie Rozet, and Miss Mary Waller. All are being assigned to work in special precincts as watchers and to bring out the vote.

Others who will turn from the social whirl to the grind of political work to defeat the opponent of Walker are Mrs. George Higginson, Mrs. James Morrison, Mrs. J. H. Winterbotham, Mrs. Laird Bell, Mrs. H. T. Patrick, Mrs. C. W. Dempster, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. James Channon, and Mrs. Perkins Bass.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank is to be in charge of the work for the citizens' committee in Crowe's own precinct, the Forty-second. Miss Susan Burne will help. Mrs. Martha Farrand will be in the Thirty-ninth precinct, in which "Hot Stove Jimmie" Quinn resides.

According to the plans of Mrs. Farrand, there will be street speeches on Monday evening and women will take part.

Two Masses at Lakeside Theater.

Two masses are scheduled for today at the Lakeside theater, 4730 Sheridan road. The moving picture playhouse is being utilized for church services on Sunday mornings by Rev. Father Frank M. O'Brien, the "county jail" priest, who is inaugurating a new Roman Catholic parish in the Wilson avenue district. The first mass is set for 7:30 a. m. and high mass will be celebrated at 10:30.

HEAD OF M. V. L. DEFENDS WORK

F. B. Johnstone Replies to City Hall Attacks in Speech at Austin.

ADMITS IT'S "OCTOPUS."

Frederick Bruce Johnstone, president of the Municipal Voters' league, replied to the city hall attack that the league is "interfering" last night when he spoke to a massmeeting in Austin.

"It is the first time in the twenty years of the league," said Mr. Johnstone, "that the president of the organization has been called upon to defend its purposes. The charge has been made that the league has no legal standing and no right to act in a public capacity. I can only reply that the league obtained its charter in 1896 and has held it continuously since.

Its Work Its Answer.

"The endeavor of the league has been only to present facts and conclusions. These are open to discussion by any one. It makes no difference as to who are members or officers of the league. Its work is the answer.

"The purpose of the league has been to develop a nonpartisan organization in the city council, and the facts indicate that this form of transacting city business has been most successful over the United States. Its plan is to obtain the services of the aldermen most fit.

Admits It's an "Octopus."

"It is charged that the league is an octopus. This is true. The league is an octopus with a single eye—to the business of the people in the city hall."

A man arose in the audience and asked if Mr. Johnstone could be a good member of the league and attorney for the Pullman company. Mr. Johnstone replied that the clients of an attorney had nothing to do with his interest in the city. His record, said the speaker, is the best evidence.

R. R. UNIONS TO MEET HERE.

Executive Committee Will Plan Action Arising from Rejection of Demands.

The executive committee of the four railroad brotherhoods will meet in Chicago on April 29 to formulate a plan of action in view of the virtual rejection of their demands by the railroad managements. The men ask the eight hour day and time and a half for overtime. It was said at the Cleveland headquarters yesterday that, while all of the 458 roads involved had not replied to the demand, practically all the replies rejected most of the demands.

MAYOR SAYS "INTERESTS" ARE HIS CHIEF FOEMEN.

Declares Corporations Are Backbone of Opposition, in Midnight Address at Forum Hall.

Mayor Thompson was still speaking at midnight last night in Forum hall in the Third ward and attacking the corporate interests which he averred were the backbone of the opposition to him.

"A man cannot serve the people of Chicago and the newspapers," said the mayor. "He must do one or the other."

This was regarded as one of his "new" attacks and this he coupled with the statement that the women's massmeeting in the Auditorium was "planted" by the corporations. He said the women probably were not aware of it, but he, the mayor, understood that the corporate interests were behind the movement of a women's protest against his policies.

The mayor continued to attack Dr. Sachs' administration of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium.

WORRY CAUSE OF SUICIDE.

Worry over a threatened lawsuit is believed to have caused Michael Ludes, a retired truck farmer, to end his life yesterday by firing a bullet into his brain at 6532 North Clark street, Rogers Park. Ludes, who was a 54 year old bachelor, and his brother, Bernard, sold their truck farm a week ago for $50,000 to William L. Wallen & Sons, and the new owners ordered Nicholas Lowe of 6526 North Clark street, a tenant of theirs for twenty years, to move. Lowe threatened to bring suit against Michael Ludes, and according to his brother, he had brooded over the matter.

FARMERS RIOT; MILK DUMPED; FAMINE FEARED

Big Dealers Admit Gravity as First "Strike" of the Kind Ties Up Many Plants.

and North Aurora, 200 farmers set cans containing 22,000 pounds of milk on the streets, and told the citizens to help themselves.

Receipts Cut Way Down.

It was said the Borden plant at Alden which receives about 30,000 pounds daily received only 1,400 pounds. Only 2,000 pounds were taken to the Bowman plant at Crystal Lake, which usually gets 60,000, the farmers said. The plant at Dundee which generally receives milk from forty dairies, received a supply from only nine, and but nineteen of the usual hundred deliverers to the Algonquin plant appeared.

Only about 5,000 pounds were said to have been received at the Bowman plant in Poplar Grove, which usually takes about 50,000. Secretary Kittle claimed the farmers had fifteen of Bowman's seventeen plants "tied up tight," but Robert A. Bowman, treasurer of the company, declared they had succeeded in getting about half of their normal supply from the regular sources and had obtained more from other places.

May Become Serious.

"I do not want to disparage the claim that the situation is critical," said Mr. Bowman, "but we are very hopeful that we shall be able to supply our retail trade. We have enough on hand to supply our customers tomorrow and Monday, but after that the situation may become more serious."

It was said that the Borden company, failing to get the necessary milk at Marengo, attempted to send milk from its condensing plant at Belvidere, but most of this was turned back. Belvidere farmers and business men claimed they would force the dealers to stop doing this if further attempts are made to ship condensing milk to the bottling plants.

Comes In from Indiana.

More milk than usual was brought in over the Grand Trunk from points around Valparaiso, Ind., but this is milk that has been sold to can shippers who have met the farmers' demand of $1.30 for thirty-two quart cans or $1.95 f. o. b. Chicago for 100 pound cans, containing forty-eight quarts. Plans have been made by the railroad to extend the milk train service eastward to Willsboro and accept more than 100 cans more daily.

The farmers' contract for $1.33 1-6 per hundred weight expired Friday midnight. The producers are demanding $1.55 per 100 pounds for the six months' period beginning April 1. Both of these figures are based on milk grading 3.5 per cent butter fat. The dealers pay 3 cents extra for each tenth of a per cent of fat in excess of this average. A reduction of 3 cents per tenth point is also made for milk that grades less.

What They Offer.

Bordens have offered the producers a price of $1.35 1-6 for 3.5 milk. The Bowman company has offered $1.45 5-6 for 3.6 milk. Some of the smaller companies claim to have signed up at both figures.

The farmers contend they have been losing money by selling at $1.33 1-6. This amounts to about 2 5-7 cents per quart. The farmers want 3 1-3 cents and have been offered as much as a fraction slightly above 3 cents. They base their claims on the increased cost in feed, in land values, in live stock, and of complying with the sanitation rules of the Chicago health department and the milk ordinance.

It costs 2 cents per quart to feed a cow alone, they say, without taking into consideration interest on the investment, labor, depreciation, and overhead expenses. The cost of producing milk has been figured out, they say, at between 3 and 5 cents a quart.

Mix Gives Out Figures.

Ira J. Mix gave the following figures per hundredweight to back his contention that the increased price demanded cannot be met without raising the price to customers:

|---|---|
| Cost of milk (based on Bowman figures) | $1.46 |
| Cost of handling at factory | .20 |
| Lowest freight charge | .24 |
| | $1.90 |

"The farmers claim there are forty-eight quarts to a hundred pounds, but we get only about forty-six after the waste has been discounted in bottling," said Mr. Mix. "Divide this $1.90 by 46 and you get $0.413. That is what the milk costs us delivered to our bottling plant here in the city. It costs us 3 cents a quart more to deliver it. So you see it costs us 7.13 cents to put a quart of milk on your doorstep. That leaves us .87 cents per quart profit, from which we have to take out the cost of bottles and cans, bottling, office expenses, interest on investment, and depreciation, not to say anything of surplus and shortage losses.

Offers to Sell Out.

"Then, too, we have to sell bottled milk to the stores for 7 cents a quart and 4 cents a pint. If some of these farmers will buy out my business and put me on a salary basis to run it for them I'd take them up in a minute."

Mr. Mix said he had received 1,450 out of his usual daily 1,500 cans during the day and would not be inconvenienced.

"The only place we had any trouble was at Lisle and we don't anticipate a shortage unless these farmers get scared," he said. "Some of them called me up this afternoon and said they'd be afraid to deliver tomorrow if conditions weren't any better."

WANAMAKER TO TRY FLIGHT ACROSS ATLANTIC IN JUNE.

Hydroaeroplane of 1,000 Horse Power and Able to Carry Twenty Passengers Being Built in East.

New York, April 1.—[Special.]—In a 1,000 horsepower hydroaeroplane capable of carrying twenty passengers Rodman Wanamaker will attempt to fly across the Atlantic some time in June, according to an announcement made today by Alan R. Hawley, president of the Aero Club of America. The machine is now nearing completion at the Curtiss factory and is expected to be ready for a tryout within a month.

Mr. Hawley and Henry Woodhouse, editor of several publications devoted to the interests of aerial navigation, recently inspected the craft and expressed their belief that under favorable weather conditions the flight could be made in two days.

The airship will be similar in style to but much larger than the America, in which Mr. Wanamaker was about to attempt a flight to England shortly before the beginning of the war.

SECRETARY TO ROOSEVELT EVADES PRISON FOR TIME.

John McGrath Need Not Begin Service at Blackwell's Island, Pending Appeal of Case.

New York, April 1.—John McGrath, secretary to Col. Roosevelt, will not have to start serving his thirty day sentence on Blackwell's island pending an appeal on the assault charge on which he was convicted. Justice Scudder in the Brooklyn Supreme court today granted a certificate of reasonable doubt in the case of McGrath and his cousin, William Powers. They were released on $1,000 bail pending an appeal on the charge brought by Charles Lighte following a saloon mixup.

EDUCATIONAL

I Cure Stammering

By the most scientific—the most practical—the most effective method yet known. It is in no way embarrassing—is easily mastered—and positively removes the fear of stammering.

Endorsed by Prominent Educators. Read these letters:

Seattle, Wash., March [illegible], 1912.
Mrs. Wm. Smith,
Boise, Idaho.

Dear Madam: Your favor of late date, making inquiry about Mr. Hatfield, received. Mr. Hatfield conducted a school for stammerers in connection with the public schools of this city three or four years ago, and we considered him a very successful instructor along that line. Yours truly,
FRANK B. COOPER,
Supt. of City Schools.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 25, 1912.
Mrs. Wm. Smith,
Boise, Idaho.

Dear Madam: Mr. Hatfield has done good work with some of our boys, and I can recommend him.
Yours very truly,
J. H. FRANCIS,
Superintendent of City Schools.

Endorsed by Former Pupils.

Write to these for further particulars about my work, as a number of them attended one or more stammering schools before coming to me: Harold W. Smith, 1107 28th St., Boise, Idaho; Mrs. Minnie R. O'Neil (son), ex-County Supt. of Schools, Sacramento, Cal.; S. S. Peck, Santa Paula, Cal.; P. A. Martin, Jr., Wichita Falls, Tex.; Chas. Twogood, 416 National Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.; H. V. Roome, 940 W. 20th St., Los Angeles, Cal.; C. A. Tonneson (son), Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Tacoma, Wash.; Robert Grubb, Victoria, British Columbia; G. W. Van Meter (son), Goldfield, Nev.; B. D. Forbes, 2418 Edwin St., Los Angeles, Cal.; Andrew V. Ovall, 548 Mill St., Portland, Oregon; W. L. Bauer Tracy, Minn.; Herman Delano 1804 "Q" St., Lincoln, Neb.; Robert Chestnut, Graysville, Manitoba, Can.

CHANGE IN LOCATION

For the past six years my school has been located in Oakland, Cal. Have chosen Chicago for the permanent location of my Institute because of its central location.

Every stammerer should have a copy of my book, "How to Stop Stammering"—a treatise on "Scientific Talking and Psychic Training." This is the most helpful work ever published for stammerers. It is cloth bound, contains 117 pages, and stamped with gold letters. The price is fifty cents per copy. This merely pays for publication.

FREE TRIAL LESSON

Call and let me demonstrate the truth of my statements. Talk with my pupils and be convinced that stammering can be cured.

Seeing is believing. Get the burden of stammering off your mind.

It will improve your health; it will enable you to carry on your business, whatever it may be, more successfully.

Will give you a test lesson with good advice free. Both afternoon and evening sessions.

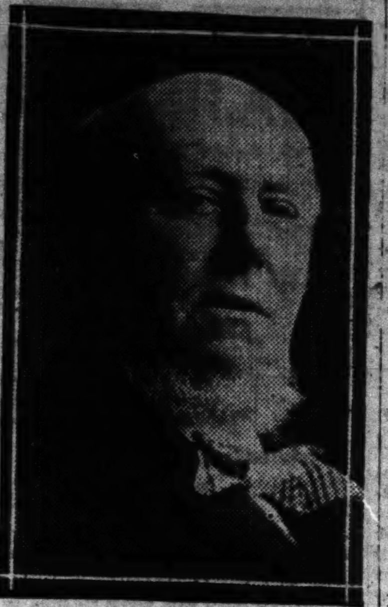
DR. ANGELL OF ANN ARBOR DIES; NOTED EDUCATOR

President Emeritus of University of Michigan Was 87 Years Old.

Dr. James B. Angell.

Born Jan. 7, 1829. Died April 1, 1916.



Ann Arbor, Mich., April 1.—[Special.]—President Emeritus James Burrill Angell of the University of Michigan died at his home here at 11:50 o'clock today, with his two sons, Alexis and James R. Angell, and his daughter, Mrs. A. C. McLaughlin of Chicago, at his bedside.

The aged educator passed away while in a deep sleep, which had lasted for several days. For weeks he had been hovering between life and death, rallying for a few days and again relapsing. His final breakdown in health was attributed largely to his attempts at personally answering a large number of congratulatory letters and cards received on Jan. 7 last, which was his eighty-seventh birthday.

Funeral services will be held at the Angell residence Monday afternoon, and burial will be made in the Forest Hill cemetery here. Dr. Lloyd Douglas, of the Congregational church will officiate.

Was Leading Diplomat.

Through the death of Dr. Angell, America has lost one of its foremost educators and diplomats. Since the latter '50s he had been most active in university work, and since 1880 he had, on several occasions, served this government in many complicated foreign relations.

Dr. Angell was active president of this university from June, 1871, to June, 1909, at which time the honorary degree of president emeritus was conferred upon him. He continued to teach classes in international law until March, 1913, and since that time he had served the university in the capacity of special adviser.

Born in Rhode Island.

Dr. Angell was born in Scituate, R. I., Jan. 7, 1829. In 1845 he entered Brown university and was graduated in 1849 with the highest class honors. Thereafter he served as assistant librarian at the university and then spent some time in Europe studying and traveling.

While abroad he was appointed a professor of modern languages in Brown and he began this work in 1853. Among the students in his classes were Richard Olney and the late John Hay. While teaching he contributed editorials to the Providence Journal, then owned and edited by Henry B. Anthony. When the latter went to the United States senate in 1860 Mr. Angell became editor of the Journal. It is said that when Hay contributed some articles in 1860 on Lincoln Mr. Angell slashed them unmercifully, telling Hay to "give us facts, without embellishment."

Becomes University President.

He continued his editorial work during the civil war and gave the government unqualified support.

In 1866 the University of Vermont called him as president and he served in that capacity for five years, during which time he was asked several times to go to the University of Michigan. In 1871 he at last consented to go. The university then had but thirty-nine professors and 1,207 students, but President Angell was so impressed with the desire for education in the middle west that he plunged into the work with the greatest enthusiasm.

Made Co-educational.

The university became co-educational and the first woman student entered during the first year of his presidency. In 1874 he induced the legislature to give the university a grant for its support. This sum was about $31,000. Late appropriations have amounted to many hundred thousands, and in 1909 when President Angell resigned there were over 5,000 students enrolled.

Under his administration the institution made wonderful progress, and its work and methods influenced education throughout the whole middle west. He established the first chair of pedagogy in 1879 and he added many new departments, such as the study of naval engineering, insurance, and government.

Minister to China.

His work as educator and administrator and his writings and speeches attracted the attention of the government and in 1880 he was sent as minister to China. While there he acted on the commission to negotiate treaties with that country concerning trade and immigration. In 1887 he was one of the commissioners to negotiate the north Atlantic fishing treaties with Great Britain; and a few years later he was chairman of the commission on deep waterways. His last government service was as minister to Turkey, but because of ill health he was obliged to resign after a year at Constantinople.

Beloved by Students.

He then returned and resumed his place at Ann Arbor. In spite of advancing years he administered his duties and continued to show the liveliest interest in everything connected with the university. The loyalty of the faculty and the affection of the student body was his to the last. These were shown on many occasions both at Ann Arbor and elsewhere.

In 1909, after many attempts to resign, he finally secured his release from the trustees, who made him president emeritus. In April of that year the Chicago alumni gave him a banquet which was the scene of a touching farewell. After that his health was seriously impaired and on several occasions he was near death. One of these times was when he was in Russia. On his way back he had a paralytic stroke in Germany.

In 1915 the alumni of the university began to collect the sum of $1,000,000 for the purpose of erecting as a memorial to him a magnificent clubhouse at Ann Arbor for the use of the students.

Mr. Angell was married in 1855 to Sara Caswell of Providence. She died in 1903, leaving three children, Alexis C. of Detroit, Lois Thompson, the wife of Prof. Andrew C. McLaughlin of the University of Chicago, and Prof. James R. Angell of the University of Chicago.

Dr. Angell had conferred upon him the degree of LL. D. by Brown, Columbia, Rutgers, Princeton, Yale, Johns Hopkins, the University of Wisconsin, and Harvard.

Peonies Should Be Planted Now

By setting out your Peonies now you will be able to secure blossoms from them this spring. For border planting or for the old fashioned garden there is nothing more attractive than a choice selection of Peonies. They are not only beautiful, but produce a profusion of flowers and are easy to cultivate.

Let us advise you as to the assortment of Peonies suitable for your grounds.

The plants can be dug and transferred from our own nurseries in Glenview to your own garden within a few hours, thereby assuring successful planting.

Write for our illustrated peony folder or tell us what would interest you in the way of gardening and we will send you our literature on the subject. Phone Central 2770 and 2771.

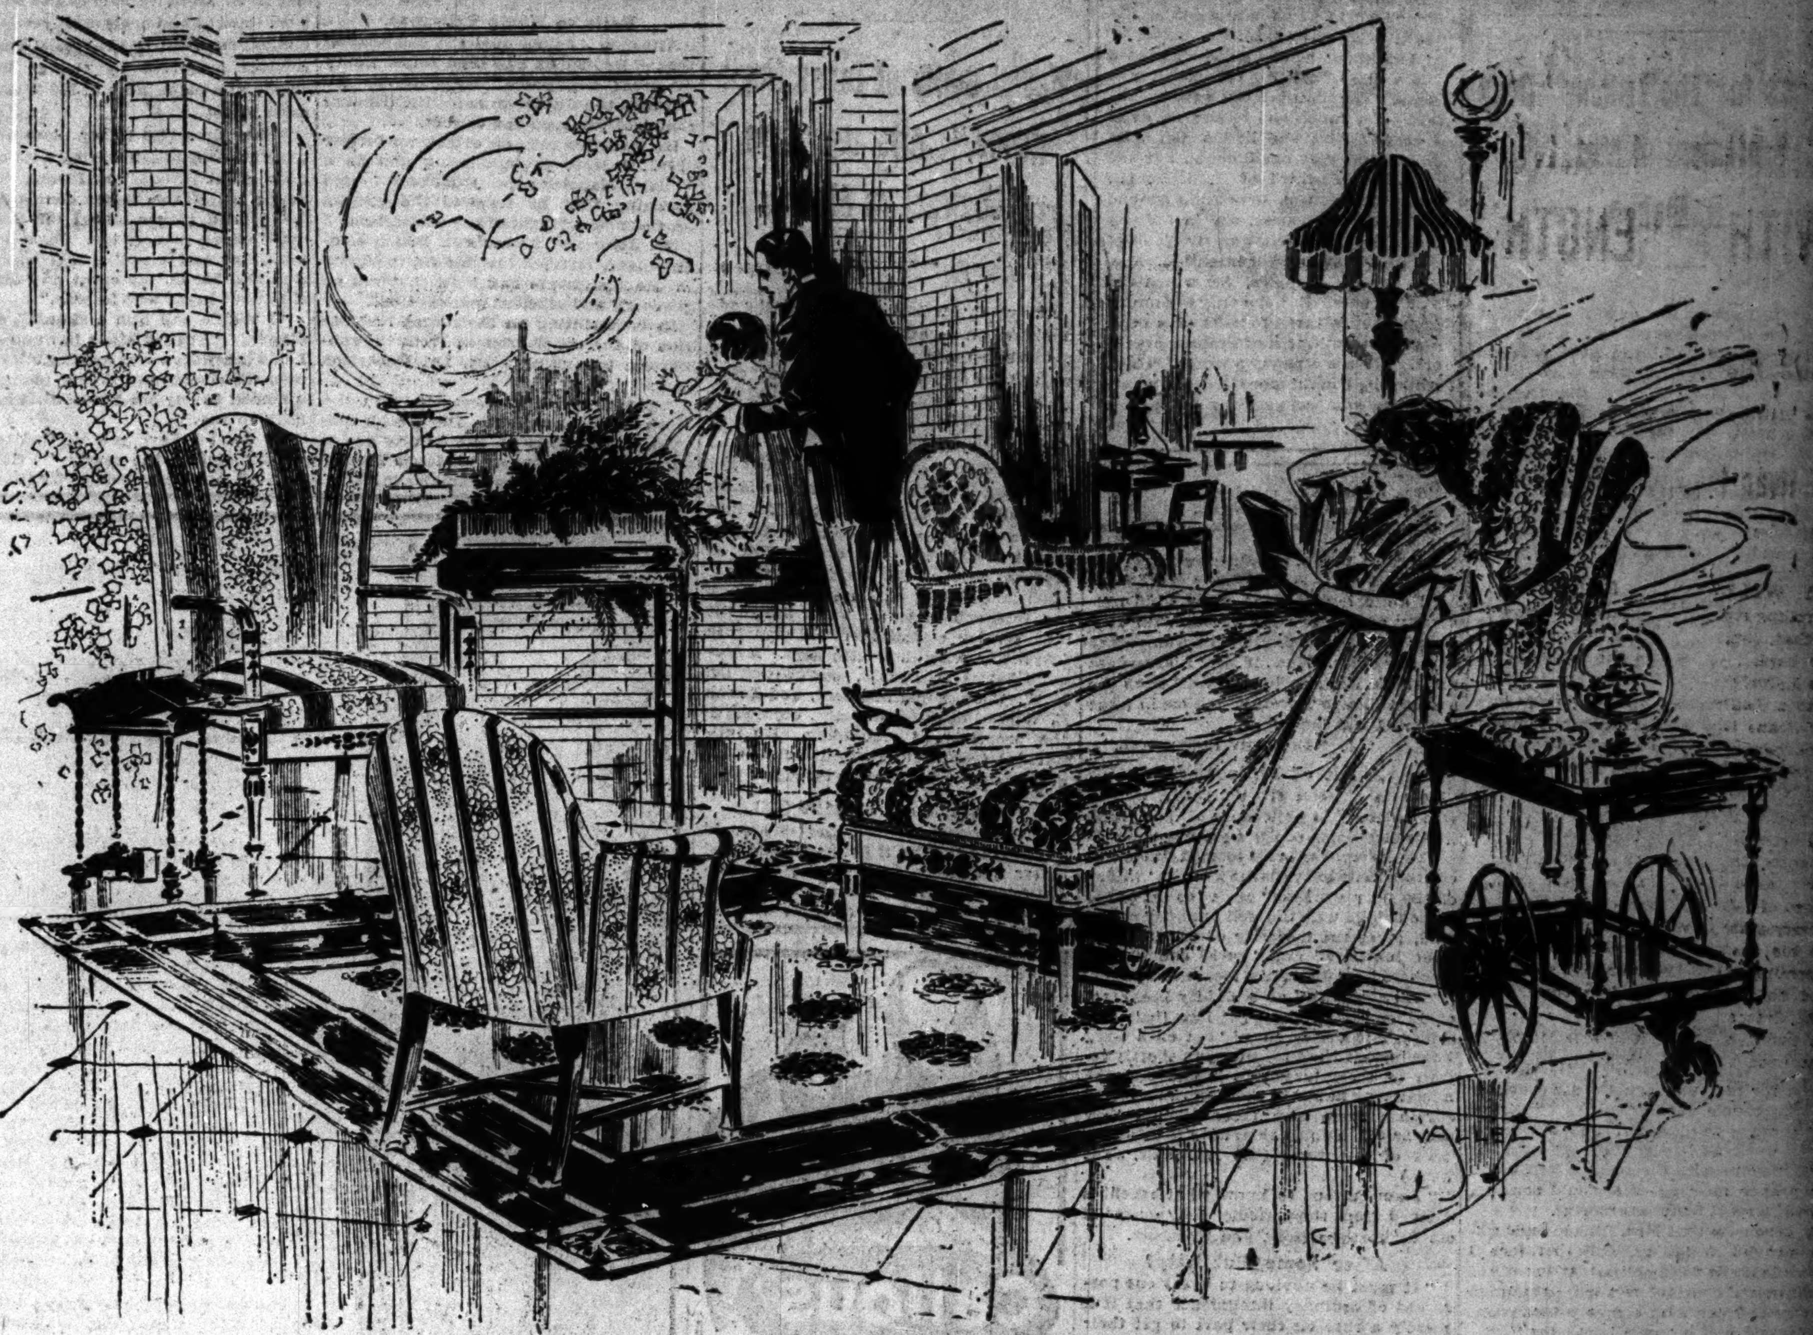
Scholle's Specials for Sun Parlors, Breakfast Rooms and Summer Homes



This illustration shows a Sun Parlor furnished with inexpensive furniture within the reach of all and artistic to the last degree. Ivory enamels, Cane, Reed, Rattan, Willow, Chintz, Cretonnes, etc., etc., give you wonderful opportunity for beautiful effects and luxurious comfort.

YOU probably are interested in furnishings for Sun Parlors, Breakfast Rooms and Summer Homes: There are few families who aren't greatly interested in at least one of these subjects.

The modern demand for more light, more air, more cheerfulness, and less of the "indoor" life has put manufacturers on their mettle to make the most attractive furniture for these light, airy, popular rooms, and each year the sales of this furniture have increased.

We anticipated a big demand in 1916 and last fall we investigated the products of the best factories and made extensive contracts for spring deliveries; we weren't sure of the big advance in furniture prices, but we protected ourselves, and you, on prices. So now we are able to offer you these new things at prices quoted last summer, before the advance.

It's easy enough to find furniture for Sun Parlors, Breakfast Rooms, Summer Homes and such things, but you should be sure to buy the best; this is true of other furniture, but is especially true of furniture which is to be inspected by your friends in the brightest light, where inferiority is sure to be conspicuous.

It is also important that furniture subjected to sun light and outside air pouring in through open doors and windows should be substantially made, well seasoned and well put together; the kind that will last—the Scholle kind.

We have a wonderful assortment of the very best kinds, and we invite you to visit our store for the purpose of enjoying these new things even if you have no idea of buying.

Please note this about the furniture list we submit here:

It is impossible to select individual pieces for this list, because there are hundreds to choose from, and so we give you a range of prices on each item; if you want to furnish for the least money, follow the first figures given; the other figures are on goods where nothing has been omitted to make them the best obtainable. Between these two is a wide variety for every taste and every pocketbook. And every piece a Scholle piece.

Oriental Rugs

Oriental rugs require no advertising today; everybody is buying against the day when present supplies will be exhausted and no more coming in. Dealers are more anxious to buy than ever before; they realize how the supply is vanishing.

Look at the list; the prices are old prices made possible only by our old contracts. You get the benefit.

GIRLS ASSAIL 33 CENTS A DAY FOR THREE MEALS

Letters to "The Tribune" Deny Statement of Mrs. L. B. Bishop.

Mrs. L. Backett Bishop's experiment of living for a week on 33 cents a day continued yesterday to bring forth a storm of statements from working girls.

The declaration of Mrs. Bishop, who lives in the Chicago Beach hotel, that 33 cents a day, used for food to be "eaten in the right spirit," is sufficient, is denied wholesale.

Out of most of the complaints of the working girls arises the suggestion that Mrs. Bishop should try out her experiment not for seven days but for one year—365 days.

Working Girl Views.

Scores of working girls took occasion to state their attitude on the 33 cent schedule in letters to THE TRIBUNE. For instance:

"Mrs. L. Brackett Bishop says if there is any girl who does more work in a day than her good self, she would like to see her, and I don't know whether to send that hard working lady my picture or call on her personally.

"I consider that I do more in one day than Mrs. Bishop does in a week, but, as I am only one of the vast army of working girls who can say this, I refrain from giving my schedule. While my work as a stenographer is very strenuous, my salary enables me to eat well, as well as appreciate the fact that it is always the fat and well fed who talk most about living in the spirit.

"Mrs. Bishop's leisurely breakfast would permit me time to consume that meal and trim a hat, while in the time allotted for her luncheon I could probably make a couple of shirtwaists. In fact, if the average working girl could schedule a day's work as leisurely as set forth by Mrs. Bishop—with three and a half hours for prayer meeting—she would consider herself a most fortunate mortal.

"I also note that Mrs. Bishop finds riding around fatiguing, and therefore I presume if she were obliged, at the end of eight hours' continuous work, to stand in a crowded car with scarcely foot room, she would call it 'most harassing.'

"MAUDE E. SMITH."

Here's One Girl's Schedule.

This is from a girl who offers her working schedule as against that of Mrs. Bishop:

"I noticed in this morning's TRIBUNE that Mrs. Bishop wants to see a girl who does more work in one day than she does. The following is my schedule and you can judge for yourself:

MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, AND FRIDAY.

7 a. m. to 8 a. m.—Toilet and breakfast.

8 a. m. to 8:10 a. m.—Straighten my room.

8:10 a. m. to 8:30 a. m.—Riding downtown to office.

8:30 a. m. to 1 p. m.—Working as stenographer and law clerk in busy law office.

1 p. m. to 2 p. m.—Lunch hour, one-half of which is devoted to study.

2 p. m. to 5:30 p. m.—Back again at office.

5:30 p. m. to 6 p. m.—Getting ready for school.

6 p. m. to 6:20 p. m.—Study.

6:20 p. m. to 6:30 p. m.—Walking over to school in Tower building.

6:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.—School.

9:30 p. m. to 10:15 p. m.—Getting home from school, reading paper.

10:15 p. m. to 11 p. m.—Eating a light lunch and speaking to mother.

11 p. m. to 11:30 p. m.—Preparing to retire.

TUESDAY AND THURSDAY.

Schedule same up to 5:30 p. m.

5:30 p. m. to 6:15 p. m.—Riding home.

6:15 p. m. to 6:45 p. m.—Dinner.

6:45 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.—Study.

9:30 p. m. to 10 p. m.—Practice my music lesson.

10 p. m. to 10:30 p. m.—Study again.

10:30 p. m. to 11 p. m.—Prepare to retire.

"I am a law student of De Paul university and attend the same in the evening. During the daytime I am employed in a law office. Now, if Mrs. Bishop does not think I am as hard a worker as she I would like to have her tell me in what respect I am lacking.

"DOROTHY ROSENTHAL."

A Bit of Philosophy.

Here is a letter from a young woman who not only is philosophical, but frank in the discussion of life's problems:

"The descent of our esteemed club women from their lofty planes into the 'wilds' of the poor working 'gurls' to eat of the same trough with the well known common herd, gives the majority of us '15 and 20 cent lunchers' and 'ex-15 and 20 cent lunchers' a 'distinctly localized' pain.

"They partake of a dainty breakfast at 10 or thereabouts, get into their machines, and decide to go 'out on a tear,' knowing all the time they can shortly return to their luxurious homes and the ministering hands of their servants to find surcease from any inconvenience they may suffer in doing their duty to the other half of the world (the left half, as it were.)

"I am curious to know what benefit is derived from the periodic 'debauches' of our highbrow sisters, and by whom.

After Some Publicity?

"It must be obvious to every one possessed of ordinary intelligence that it is merely a ruse on their part to get their names and pictures in the papers, and I'll venture to say almost any shop girl with an equal amount of time (or less) could think of a more ingenious and original method of obtaining the same result.

"If any individual or community is interested in getting an authentic report on the correlation of vice and hunger, why not ask some of us who have been hungry; not hungry for a day or a week, but for one, two, or even ten years, and I mean hungry morally, mentally, and physically.

"AN EX-MAGDALEN."

["But now a highly respected private secretary."]

MRS. BISHOP EATS

Keeps to Schedule by Devouring Penny's Worth of Five Cent Onion.

Yesterday Mrs. Bishop clung to her schedule of 33 cents a day with strict yet elastic tenacity.

In buying her breakfast she was compelled to pay for more than she really wanted to eat. For example, at breakfast she had a dish of prunes and a cup of coffee. This cost her 15 cents. The limit is 9 cents for breakfast. For lunch she had two eggs at 4 cents. Also she had a Bermuda onion that cost her 5 cents, but she only ate one-third of it, hence the cost of onion was something around 1½ cents. Of course, she had to pay the nickel, but that was the fault of the price and not her intention. Also she had four apples, for which she paid 5 cents. But she only ate one of them—hence three-fourths of a cent. Also 5 cents' worth of graham crackers. She ate a penny's worth. Thus, while she bought more than she wanted, she compromised by eating the cost limit.

HEADS TRADE SCHOOL BODY.

George H. Miller, employment manager for Sears, Roebuck & Co., was elected president of the Vocational Education Association of the Middle West yesterday at the closing session of the convention in the Hotel La Salle. The other new officers are: Vice president, Paul C. Stetson, principal of the South High school, Grand Rapids, Mich.; secretary, Albert G. Bauersfeld, instructor in the Lane Technical High school; treasurer, Wilson H. Henderson, professor of industrial education in the University of Wisconsin.

M'COID 'CONVICTS' SACHS AT INQUIRY BY MERIT BOARD

"Found Guilty of Gross Negligence," Attorney Says Contractors Show.

Arthur B. McCoid, retained by the administration as attorney for the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium, yesterday waived the formalities of trial and "convicted" Dr. Theodore B. Sachs, former president of the board of directors, of "gross mismanagement."

Mr. McCoid's evidence consisted of the testimony of John J. Brittain and M. B. Bushnell, members of a contracting firm that is suing the sanitarium for $65,000, a suit which he is now defending as representative of the board of trustees.

Mr. McCoid not only produced Brittain and Bushnell as his witnesses before the civil service commission but conferred frequently with their attorneys. Attorney Charles H. Hamill, representing Dr. J. W. Coon, superintendent, and Frank E. Wingo, business director, objected to the propriety of proceeding. He intimated the contractors would be enabled to get their $65,000 without a struggle.

Charges Loss of $126,000.

Mr. Brittain testified the city could have saved $126,000 if Dr. Sachs had used better judgment in directing the construction of eighteen cottages. The cost, he said, was $21,000 a cottage, whereas it should have been nearer $14,000. He also asserted the cottages are insanitary and ill adapted for the treatment of tuberculosis patients. Mr. Bushnell's testimony was similar.

"We will show there is nothing in these charges," said Attorney Hamill after the meeting. "The cost per cottage was about $14,500. In spite of Mr. Brittain's 'expert' testimony to the contrary, I think we can prove the cottages were constructed according to the best medical knowledge."

Fails to Name Tribunal.

Attorney McCoid told the commission that "Dr. Sachs has been found guilty of gross negligence," although he did not take the trouble to name the tribunal that had returned the verdict.

He launched into an attack on former Gov. Deneen, characterizing him as a "little Napoleon of Quackery" and charging that he inspired the attacks on the management of the sanitarium.

Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner, testified that his entire efforts in the sanitarium had been centered on economy and efficient management.

In commenting on the recent resignation of the six physicians from the sanitarium consulting staff, Dr. Robertson said:

"These men are connected with the Rush Medical school. Dr. Frank Billings is the dean of the faculty and is known to be an enemy of Mayor Thompson and myself. That explains it all."

JOHN V. STEGER FINED; "LOOKING FOR TROUBLE"

Piano Company Head Convicted of Disorderly Conduct in Threatening Dealer and Thumping Him.

John V. Steger, president of the Steger & Sons Piano Manufacturing company, and S. E. Moist of 2546 Logan boulevard were fined $2 and costs each yesterday by Judge Prindiville on charges of disorderly conduct preferred by George B. Dow, owner of a piano store at 352 West Sixty-third street.

"They drove up to my place in an automobile and began asking a lot of questions about pianos," said Dow. "Steger asked me if the Steger company didn't make good pianos, and I told him they made cheap pianos, too. Then he called me a liar and a skunk, and pounded his clenched fist on my chest and asked me if I didn't know who he was."

"I didn't call him a skunk," retorted Steger. "I called him a liar and a faker. I had heard Dow was making unfavorable remarks concerning Steger pianos and I intended to buy one to see what he would have to say."

"I don't believe you wanted to buy a piano," replied the court. "I think that both of you were looking for trouble."

TORRENS SYSTEM OF TITLES GROWING IN POPULARITY.

City Joins Other Bodies That Indorse County Recorder's Abstracts in Purchase of Land.

Official recognition by the city of Chicago of the Torrens system of land title registration has greatly pleased County Recorder Joseph F. Connery, and he is of the opinion that it is only a matter of time before the system will supplant that of the old abstract method entirely.

The finance committee of the city council has ordered that in future all property purchased by the city, including land purchases of the school board, must be registered under the Torrens system.

"The city's adoption of the Torrens system is significant of its efficiency and practicability," said Mr. Connery, "and we expect the county board and the trustees of the sanitary board to adopt it, also, as far as it is possible."

The city's approval is the fourth of importance the Torrens system has received. The Chicago Bar association, the Chicago real estate board, and the Cook county real estate board are all giving it support. Each of these organizations had a representative investigate the system and its workings in the recorder's office before it was approved.

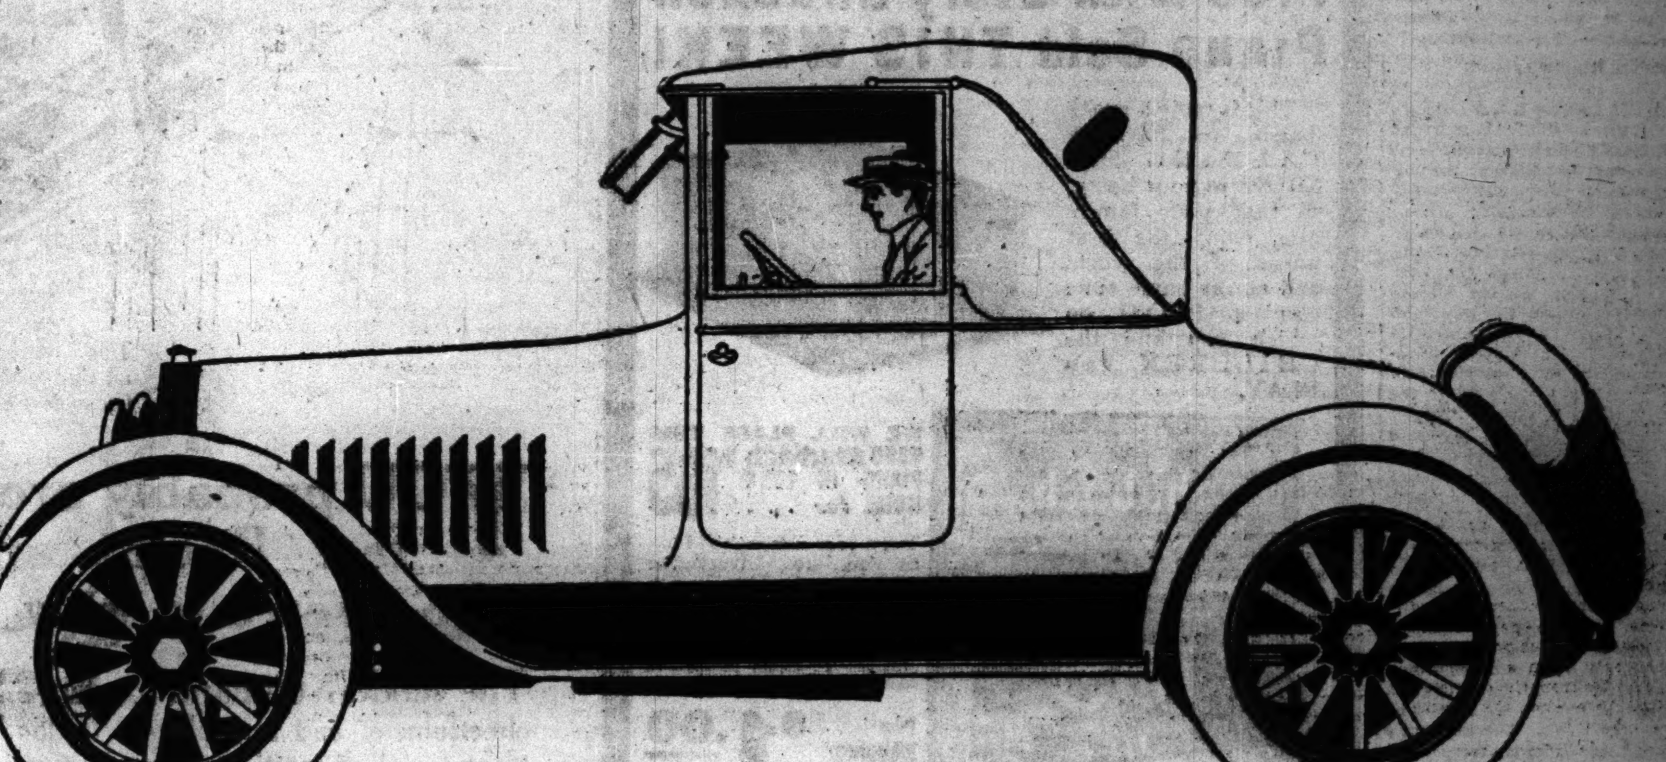
Quality First



Now Comes the Stunning 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers Cabriolet

Last autumn the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers was unveiled.

Recognition of its amazing merits was instant.

It proved the star performer at all the great automobile shows.

Now comes the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers Cabriolet, and supreme engine speed weds closed-car comfort, elegance, and distinction. The performance of this new 3400 r. p. m. model is matched by the charm of the closed-car builder's art.

The enduring might of her 3400 r. p. m. motor puts speed where it belongs—in the clasp of almighty acceleration and singular fuel-economy.

The cataract of power from her speedy engine is held in sensible restraint—yet she'll go 60 miles an hour any time you say, while delivering 18 miles of marvelous going for every gallon of gas.

She's the season's favorite with women of taste for shopping jaunts, matinees, teas, and calls. So easy to drive that it won't wear out your wife or daughter to sit at the steering wheel. There's an uncommon amount of room, not only under the wheel but all around the wheel. Room for free swing of the elbows.

The heavy French plate glass windows are easy to adjust.

The top comes down for spring or summer use, giving you a handsome Six-30 Chalmers Roadster, and again a Cabriolet when another autumn rolls around. And so distinction weds utility.

This is a car that most families of taste cannot afford to be without.

I've stood at the curb watching closed cars of every make and kind, and there's none that goes about your business with lighter heart and surer step than this new 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers Cabriolet.

There's a mighty lure to every line. Folk turn to look at her as she passes proudly by. Body by Fisher. Either leather or cloth trim without extra cost.

It's the car you'll want your wife to have.

VERDUN DRIVE STEADY GAIN FOR GERMANS

French Must Keep Teuton Progress Costly, Declares Expert.

"If the Germans can continue their attacks as persistently and with such steady gains as they have been making, it is only a question of time until Verdun will be evacuated or surrendered by the French. The whole question hinges now on the ability of the French to make the German progress so slow and so costly that they cannot keep up their attacks."

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

What the Germans Have Done at Verdun.

1—Direction of first general attack from the north almost due south until outer line of permanent fortifications was reached.

2—Attack from the east across the plains of the Woevre to the heights of the Meuse, along which are the permanent fortification of eastern front.

3—Attack across the Meuse on the western bank to drive back the French, thus stopping the flanking fire with which they were taking the Germans to the east of the Meuse in the flank and rear.

4-5—Directions of recent German attacks to straighten out their line between Cheppy wood and the Meuse.

Note—The short lines between the two long ones indicate the progressive advance.

The attack on Verdun, which has now been under way since the twenty-first of February, is one of the decisive actions of the present European war. The taking of Verdun or the failure to take it may mean the winning of the war by Germany or its loss.

After the war of 1870-71 the committee of defense, acting upon a recommendation of Gen. de Rivieres, established a plan of defense for France. This plan included a line of fortifications along the northern frontier and another along the eastern frontier.

By 1885 this plan had been carried out with respect to the eastern frontier and the intrenched camps of Langres, Dijon, Besancon, and Paris, but only partly executed with respect to the northern.

INTO THREE CLASSES.

In this year the invention of high explosive shells showed the necessity to increase the protection against gun fire in all the forts which had been built. The cost of this transformation being large, the chamber of deputies decided to divide the French forts into three classes, only the first class of which would be completely rebuilt.

In the original project the eastern front was divided into four parts—from Mesieres to Verdun, from Verdun to Toul, from Toul to Epinal, and from Epinal to Belfort. Forts had been built from Verdun to Toul and from Epinal to Belfort.

These were brought up to date, with the consequence that when the German invasion came the main movement was directed through Luxembourg and Belgium against that part of the frontier along which the forts had not been brought up to date.

Verdun, being at the northern end of the fortified line, occupies the most important and most dangerous position. It is valuable not only from a defensive point of view but also from the offensive, should the time come when the French may be able to assume it.

HELD UP AT VERDUN.

In the beginning of the war when the Germans advanced into France, the first thing which held up that advance was the fortress of Verdun. As their advance continued, it not only moved to the south but was compelled to swing to the east because pivoting on Verdun.

Verdun had a great deal to do with the French victory on the Marne, because as long as the French held it they had the means of making flank attacks on the German eastern flank. They made these attacks with the consequence that the Germans, finding themselves in danger of having both flanks turned, due to Verdun on one side and the fortress of Paris on the other, were compelled to retire.

Cross the Meuse.

When the Germans had retired from the Marne to the Aisne, they made an attempt to pierce the Verdun-Toul sector of fortifications, with the result that they broke through at San Mihiel, where they succeeded in crossing the Meuse. They have held this position ever since.

About this time the dispute is supposed to have taken place which led to Von Moltke going back to Berlin and Von Falkenhyne becoming chief of staff.

Von Moltke is said to have favored an attack on the eastern barrier forts. This would have meant an attack on Verdun. Von Falkenhyne is said to have favored an advance on Calais. The attempt on Calais was made and failed the middle of November, 1914.

From then until the beginning of the present attack on Verdun, the Germans have made no general offensive along the western front. After Serbia had been conquered, there was a pause during which it was evident that the Germans were preparing another offensive somewhere; where, it was impossible to tell.

About the middle of February they started heavy local attacks, generally successful, at various points along the British and French lines. These attacks finally culminated in a heavy offensive against Verdun.

Verdun is surrounded by a ring of detached forts, covering a total circumference of about thirty miles. The object of this ring of forts is to compel the presence of a large army if an enemy wishes to regularly besiege Verdun. In other words, an invading army could not possibly pass it by, but would have to leave a large force. This was the reason why the crown prince in his advance into France was stopped by Verdun.

From the southernmost part of this ring of forts there are only single forts along the Meuse until Toul is reached, which, like Verdun, is surrounded by a ring of forts.

In other words, if Verdun falls it will be a comparatively easy matter for the Germans to capture all of the barrier line down to Toul.

Thought It Impregnable.

This would open a line of invasion from the east which would take in the rear all the positions now held by the French, from Verdun to in front of Compeigne, just north of Paris.

Gen. de Rivieres, who designed the defense, considered the eastern side too strong to be carried. This because of the Hauts de Meuse, a line of hills which rise from the plain of the Woevre. He also considered the northern side too strong to be carried.

He thought the western front the most vulnerable. However, in his day the ability of modern field artillery to smash all types of fortifications had not been foreseen.

From the 15th of February the French staff had foreseen an attack on the fortress. The Germans had brought up artillery of all calibers and placed them along a front from Montfaucon in the Argonne to Etain in the Woevre. Throughout the 20th and 21st these guns heavily bombarded all the French positions, and also the town of Verdun, which is the citadel of the fortress.

The first infantry attack was made the evening of the 21st against the center of the northern front, and resulted in a loss to the French of the first and second line trenches along a front of about two and one-half miles.

The 22d the attack was continued along the same front with still further gains for the Germans. The 23d and 24th the German attacks continued from the north and resulted in steady gains.

These same days the Germans commenced to shove in from Etain on the eastern front. The night of the 24th and 25th there was a heavy snow storm. This, however, did not stop the German attacks, which, according to French accounts, were continued with the utmost violence, along all the eastern front and with considerable gains for the Germans.

The 26th violent attacks were made along the northern sector with considerable gains for the Germans, and from the northeast, resulting in the capture of Fort de Douaumont. The 27th the Germans continued their attacks from the north and northeast with some slight gains.

They had now reached a point where they had advanced about five miles from the north, and were within about five miles of Verdun itself. On the east they had advanced about seven miles, and were about five and one-half miles from Verdun itself.

During this time they had made no advance on the left or western bank of the Meuse, with the result that the right flank and rear of their northern advance was exposed to fire from the French artillery to the west of the Meuse. This flank fire compelled an attempt to bring forward their line to the west of the Meuse.

Consequently they started a series of attacks, in general from the eastern bank of the Meuse across it to the southwest. These attacks have steadily gained, and have resulted in pushing their line steadily forward until it now occupies a line through Cumieres in front of the two hills called Le Mort Homme and through Bethincourt.

Their next attack was made from the west against the French line in front of Avocourt and Malancourt. This attack also gained considerable ground, with the result that the French line between Avocourt and the Meuse was left sticking out to the north like a peninsula.

The latest German attacks have smashed in some of the head of this peninsula and have carried the German line into and beyond the village of Malancourt. During this time they have made several gains on the eastern front, having captured the village of Fresnes, advanced north of Eix, and gained a foothold in the village of Vaux.

Thus from the beginning the Germans have steadily progressed in their attacks. They have already gained considerably more territory than the French gained in their September offensive. Every position captured gives them a better chance of forcing the evacuation or surrender of Verdun.

Willing to Pay Grim Price.

The most noticeable points are the persistent manner in which the Germans keep up their attacks and their willingness to pay the price in dead and wounded.

On the east and north they have captured all the trenches built by the French in advance of the line of permanent forts. On the west they have shoved back the French line so that the German positions east of the Meuse can no longer be flanked by the French artillery.

They have advanced far enough to bring the northern half of the forts along the western sector under the fire of their heavier guns.

While it is too early to tell yet whether or not the conditions are the same, the fact remains that when the Germans had succeeded in capturing all the Russian trenches built in front of the permanent forts surrounding the Polish fortresses, it was never long until these outlying forts fell, and with them the whole fortress.

If the Germans can continue their attacks as persistently and with such steady gains as they have been making, it is only a question of time until Verdun will be evacuated or surrendered by the French.

The whole question hinges now on the ability of the French to make the German progress so slow and so costly that they cannot keep up their attacks.

HOYNE WANTS HEALEY OUSTED, WORD TO MAYOR

State's Attorney Says Reign of Chief Is "Disgraceful"; Praises Hunt.

State's Attorney Hoyne yesterday issued a statement indicating the price of peace may be the ousting of Chief of Police Healey by Mayor Thompson.

In his latest blast Mr. Hoyne declared Chief Healey to be "incompetent and inefficient," adding that the "mismanagement of the police department under the present chief has been disgraceful." The inside history of this "mismanagement," he said, doubtless could be given by First Deputy Schuettler, Chief of Detectives Hunt, and Second Deputy Funkhouser, if silent discipline did not prevail.

City Hall Split Denied.

Both Mr. Hoyne and the mayor, however, denied a state of war exists between the city hall and the Criminal court building.

Bulletins from both camps were the outcome of Mr. Hoyne's investigation of graft collections in the Twenty-first ward.

Francis A. Becker, Thompson lieutenant in the ward, who has been marked for indictment by the state's attorney as "the man higher up," said he was "shocked and distressed" by Mr. Hoyne's accusations. His statement, somewhat less sizzling than was expected, asserted the state's attorney was "misinformed and misled," presumably by Jimmie Quinn and his lieutenants. Becker issued his statement after a conference with Corporation Counsel Ettelson and Maj. Clinnin.

Mayor Not Perturbed.

Mayor Thompson expressed confidence in Becker earlier in the day and at the same time refused to make Mr. Hoyne's attacks on the chief a "casus belli."

"Do you think Mr. Hoyne shows a spirit of coöperation when he raps your chief of police across the knuckles at every opportunity?" the mayor was asked.

"I am not criticizing; I will coöperate with Mr. Hoyne as long as I can," was the reply.

"However, warm political battles are being fought in the Eighteenth and Twenty-first wards between my friends and friends of Mr. Hoyne."

"Do you believe Mr. Hoyne desires to name a chief of police?"

"No. The mayor appoints the chief. Any man who reduces crime as Chief Healey has done in one year looks good to the mayor."

Here's Hoyne's Statement.

Mr. Hoyne enumerated what he had to say:

"First—I absolutely disclaim any intention or desire to control the police department or any part of it.

"Second—I never have and would not if I could name or recommend anyone for chief of police.

"Third—I never requested Mayor Thompson or any other mayor to appoint anyone chief of police.

"Fourth—From my knowledge of Chicago gained in this office I have assumed to mention that certain men who should not be in command of the police department and had subsequently the corroboration of my views by obtaining sentences of some policemen to Joliet from the Criminal Court building.

"I did not request the appointment of Nicholas Hunt as chief of detectives. I did insist that P. D. O'Brien, who was made chief of detectives by Chief Healey, was not a proper man to head the detective bureau in view of what was stated above.

"I did say when Hunt was appointed and I now repeat that it was a splendid appointment, and that he is thoroughly qualified for the position.

Hunt "Public Blessing."

"Subsequent developments have proved that his appointment was a public blessing and that he has accomplished more in a few months than his predecessors in six years. Records in the department show this and to such a marked degree that the present incompetent chief of police has seized all the credit for all that Hunt has done. Chief Healey's only contribution to the cleanup of Chicago has been the giving of appointments and preference to favorites and pets, the harassing and nagging of competent police officers.

"Disgraceful Mismanagement."

"I have no doubt that if discipline did not prevail that such men as Schuettler, Hunt, and Funkhouser could give a very complete history of the disgraceful mismanagement and inefficiency which prevails and has prevailed under the Healey-Luthardt-O'Brien régime.

"In conclusion let me emphasize and repeat that I have no suggestions to make for chief of police, but in the interest of the public I do hope that the present gang in control and which was in control before Mayor Thompson's election may be cast out of the department, boots and breeches."

"As to this Becker of the eagle eye, who went out to 'clean up' the north side and was prevented by this office, my answer is that the evidence against Becker is complete. Like other persons in the same boat, he must be given a lot of latitude to shout his innocence.

"I have a report from several citizens of the Twenty-first ward, who formed a committee to investigate conditions and hired detectives. A copy of the report was given me today. I don't care to mention the names of the men."

The report was dated Aug. 27, 1915, and Mr. Hoyne stated that it corroborates his investigation in every detail.

As to Becker.

A detective, according to the report, Mr. Hoyne said, found a witness who said that Morris Hennessey, brother of "Spike" Hennessey, and Tony May, a bondsman, were in a conspiracy with certain policemen of the Chicago avenue station to have women arrestsed.

Then May and Hennessey would sign bonds for them, obtaining $5, of which the bondsman would retain $3 and the remaining $2 would go to the policeman who made the arrest.

One woman, according to the report, was dismissed in court through the connivance of an assistant city prosecutor, then assigned to the Chicago avenue court.

Healey Explains Revocation.

Chief Healey explained his revocation of the saloon license of Paul Schoop. Hoyne had asked Healey through the press whether Schoop's license was revoked because he had violated the Sunday closing law or because he had made the "confession."

"If Schoop's name had not been brought out so prominently in the newspapers," said Chief Healey, "I would not even have remembered it. His license was revoked last Monday. I did not know he had made a 'confession' to Mr. Hoyne until Wednesday.

"I am anxious to assist Mr. Hoyne in every way. I do not believe the public should be made to suffer because of any misunderstanding between the chief of police and the state's attorney."

MONTREAL BANK ROBBER THOUGHT HELD BY POLICE

Lieut. Burns' Fiasco and Daring Escape Recalled by Suspect's Arrest.

"Big Charley," as he is known to the police of all large cities, and who for several years has been sought for alleged complicity in the robbery of the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster, B. C., is believed to be locked up at the South Clark street station under the name of C. J. Fitzgerald. He denies that he is the man wanted for the Canadian bank job, but detectives who saw him last night at the "show up" declare he is "Big Charley."

Sensational Escape Recalled.

"Big Charley" in September, 1912, escaped from Lieut. Bernard J. Burns, in the saloon of James Sidias, 1149 South Wabash avenue. Burns was sent to the saloon to arrest a man suspected of being one of the Westminster bank robbers. Burns was attached to the Maxwell street station. Capt. John J. Mahoney had been given a tip by an attorney that two men were spending large sums of Canadian money at the saloon of Sidias.

Burns went to the saloon and attempted to arrest both men, who were drinking in a rear room. One of the men, said to be "Big Charley," hit Burns over the head with a chair, knocking him unconscious. He was then kicked and beaten.

Sidias Turns Over Money.

Later $10,000 of the money stolen from the bank was turned over to the police by Sidias, who got it from the two men who escaped from Burns. One of the pair, J. C. Stacey, alias "Doc" Dalzell, was afterward captured in St. Louis and brought back to Chicago.

Burns and Capt. Mahoney were tried by the civil service commission and discharged.

Since then the Chicago police had heard nothing of "Big Charley." He—or his double—and a man who gave the name of Harry Murphy were arrested by Detective Sergt. Michael Mullen and other officers, who found them at Twelfth street and Wabash avenue. When the sergeant accused Fitzgerald of being "Big Charley" he retorted:

"I'll bet a new hat that Burns don't rap to me."

A. E. Cummings of Downers Grove Traced as Far as Chicago by Police.

The Chicago police were asked yesterday by Martin Whit, chief of police of Downers Grove, Ill., to search for A. E. Cummings, a wealthy stock farmer, who has been missing since Thursday afternoon. Cummings was traced to Chicago.

OLD HOME OPEN FOR DIVORCEE

Agreement About Right to See Children Sets Gossips Chattering.

MADE OUT OF COURT.

A decree of divorce is usually regarded as sounding the knell of the children. But one separation of an estranged pair at least is different.

Before Dr. C. O. Young, owner of the Washington Park hospital, and Mrs. Young agreed to disagree they made plans that their three children might not suffer.

Since a divorce had been granted to Mrs. Young in the first days of March she has been seen in her former home at 5488 Everett avenue. The neighbors misunderstood her presence there, according to Mrs. Johnson.

"Mrs. Young stayed with them for several days. In September they will all three come to her for nine months.

"My sister's three children mean the whole world to her," said Mrs. Johnson. "When their welfare or needs call she is ready for any sacrifice. So when the two boys, Stanley, 9 years old, and Roy, 7, were threatened with pneumonia she hurried to their bedside, as any mother would. She nursed them through the crises and is ill now from loss of sleep."

ROSEHILL MAN DESCRIBES DEAL WITH LA SALLE

Ground Value of Cemetery Lots Placed at a High Figure, Reynolds Declares.

Affairs of Rosehill, once the Munday-Huttig "boneyard," were introduced into the trial of William Lorimer yesterday through the testimony of James J. Melvin of Peoria and F. L. Reynolds of New York, the latter a member of the cemetery company board of managers under the Munday-Huttig regime.

Under direct examination by Assistant State's Attorney Hayden N. Bell, Mr Reynolds described how the name of Lorimer came to be tangled up in the Rosehill venture. In February, 1913, he said, he saw Charles B. Munday and Joseph P. Gallagher in New York. Mr. Gallagher was Mr. Lorimer's partner in the Lorimer & Gallagher company, then engaged in building the line of the Southern Traction company.

According to Mr. Reynolds Mr. Munday proposed at that time that the Rosehill board of managers loan Lorimer & Gallagher a large sum from the cemetery perpetual care fund to help build the traction line.

Brought Up to Board.

Later, Mr. Reynolds said, the matter was brought before the board of managers, it being proposed to lend the construction company $250,000 from the fund with $250,000 of Southern Traction bonds as collateral security on the note. Because of the unsatisfactory condition of certain contracts covering the work on the road and the bond issue, Mr. Reynolds testified, consideration of the loan was postponed.

Mr. Melvin declared that the unsold burial lots at Rosehill were carried on the books of the cemetery company at $11,000,000 after June, 1913, when the federal income tax law went into effect.

2 CENSUS TAKERS ACCUSED.

Enumerators Charged with Playing Politics While Gathering Data.

Superintendent of Compulsory Education William L. Bodine, who is conducting the school census, is investigating charges against two of his census enumerators. Mrs. Walter Koch, 2819 Fullerton avenue, is alleged to have spoken in behalf of W. H. Blencoe, Republican candidate for committeeman from the Twenty-eighth ward, when she visited the home of Mrs. Catherine Murphy, 2530 North Mozart street.

Mrs. Charles Nelson, 1215 Oakdale avenue, complained that Nicholas Wellstein recommended William Elsfeldt, Republican candidate for ward committeeman in the Twenty-fourth.

Over 800 Used Cars Advertised Sunday—But Not One Jeffery

Why?

Jeffery

AROUND the borders of this space are a few of the 800 and more classified offers to sell used automobiles which appeared in The Chicago Tribune of last Sunday.

With the exception of two cars offered by ourselves, taken in exchange for other Jeffery cars, you do not find a single Jeffery in all this list.

This is just typical of Chicago's papers week by week.

Certainly this unique condition is not because of lack of Jeffery owners. Our business last year set a record for the Centaur Motor Co.

This year's figures thus far are ten times as great.

The answer is simple—small depreciation—that means of necessity supremacy in quality.

A check-up of a thousand Jeffery owners in this territory shows more than 97% of all those to whom we have sold Jeffery cars in the past three years are today still driving their original Jeffery or a new car of the same manufacture.

What few Jeffery used cars there are offered from time to time are those we have taken in on other Jeffery models.

They bring high prices.

That car shrinks less in value which is worth most to start with—that's the answer.

The Jeffery Light "Six" Is Unmatched at Its Price.

NO other six sold at $1800 or less can match this new Jeffery in actual road performance and power.

We say, select your own test. Make it flexibility, performance through sand or mud, hill climbing, or whatever you wish—and this car, in a side by side test, will as far outdemonstrate any other car in its class in performance as it does unquestionably in appearance.

The Jeffery "Four" Is the Best Car $1000 Will Buy.

It is a fact that there is not one other car selling at $1000 which can match the Jeffery "Four" in flexibility, in power, in economy, in durability, in the grade of materials and quality of workmanship which enter into its construction. There is no other "Four" which can match it—no, nor any "six," "eight" or "twelve"—sold at the price.

It is absolutely unequaled at its price, in appearance, in style and in finish.

This advertisement appeared last Sunday. Because of last week's weather conditions you may have overlooked it, BUT ITS MESSAGE IS JUST AS GOOD TODAY. Out of about the same number of used cars AGAIN advertised last Sunday, March 26, AGAIN there were no Jeffery used cars mentioned except two we advertised ourselves. Draw your own conclusions.

BUNGALOW BUILDERS!

You Can Have 7 or 8 Rooms at the Cost of 5 or 6 by Using Murphy In-A-Dor Beds

Each Murphy Bed in Any Home Adds a Room Without Expense

This five room bungalow has seven room efficency living room, dining room, kitchen, sun parlor-breakfast room and three bed rooms.

There is not even the hint of a bed in the living room, but merely a door just like any other door, which might lead to another room or to a closet. Yet when this door is opened a made-up, standard size, brass bed can be swung into the room. Another similar bed may be let down into the sun parlor-breakfast room, converting it into a sleeping porch.

Don't Overlook

the fact that Murphy In-a-Dor Beds are just as useful in houses and bungalows as they are in apartments.

Because of the phenomenal rapidity with which they have been adopted by apartment house builders (6,000 having been installed in Chicago alone within two years) some people seem to forget their value in residences.

Sleeping Porches

The Murphy In-a-Dor Bed is the only one that can be used with entire satisfaction on sleeping porches—the only one that is kept out of the dust all day, yet is perfectly aired, DRY and WARM when you want to use it, no matter what the weather.

Remember This

—each Murphy In-A-Dor Bed means an extra room without the expense of building it.

—it is MORE ECONOMICAL TO FURNISH either a house or apartment equipped with Murphy In-A-Dor Beds.

—it is LESS WORK TO CARE FOR either a house or an apartment equipped with Murphy In-A-Dor Beds.

—the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is really and truly CONCEALED behind an ordinary narrow door, just like any other door.

—the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is VASTLY superior to any substitute—and gives the same benefits to those who own their homes that it does to apartment tenants.

BUILDERS: We will be glad to send our booklet, "How to Use the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed," to any one contemplating building either a house or an apartment.

TENANTS: Don't sign a lease until you have inspected the Murphyized apartments or homes near where you wish to locate. Ask your real estate man or look in the classified columns of the daily papers. Look for our sign on new buildings, "Murphy In-A-Dor Beds Used Here."

CABBY STUNNED BY GIDDY CODE AT PALM BEACH

Loop Dean, Just Back, to Drop Reins If Bob Gets a Good Home.

BY CAROLYN WILSON.

One of our latest returning citizens from Palm Beach professes himself disappointed in the general outlook of society there. This is Mr. Henry Howard—to be found almost any day on the corner of Clark and Madison streets turning a kindly, careful eye on his horse at the curbing.

Henry Howard

For Mr. Henry Howard is a cabman—the last of the old guard—and he has just returned from a little vacation at Palm Beach.

"Clothes take the place of brains," was one of his comments, and another, "Women who push dogs around the beach have been spared children."

Looks Out for "Bob."

Mr. Howard is about to leave the cab stand forever—just as soon as he can find a kindly owner for Bob, his horse.

"I haven't got any one else," he said. "There's only Bob. I haven't any wife, nor any brothers, nor nephews. There's never anything in all my life but my horse. And I can't leave him now. I couldn't hold up my head if he wasn't well cared for. I've saved up enough to travel some now."

Henry Howard has been on that corner for forty-two years.

"Anyway," he resumed, "I'm going to enjoy my life from now on till I die. I've been to Berlin and London and Paris when I was young. I only wish the war wasn't on, so I could go now. Don't believe you could guess my age to within twenty years."

Nearly Four Score.

And you couldn't. For he is 79 years old—a straight, alert optimist, with cheeks red and fine blue eyes that look at you with a gentle sense of humor.

Born in New York, he was in the audience to which Horace Greeley said, "Go west, young man," and Howard went. He came to Chicago in 1867. And from that day he became a part of Chicago.

"There are very few of them I don't know. I've known mayors since the beginning of the city. The last one is the only one I don't know. I remember when John Walsh was selling papers at a stand there across from THE TRIBUNE."

And then the unconscious tragedy of his next remark:

Never Had Home Dinner.

"I've never had a dinner in a home in my life. My life here hasn't encouraged me in a belief in women. You see, I've never had the chance to meet the fine big hearted one. All I've seen have been tricky and cheating. They come out of a café with a fellow, hop into my cab, and say, 'Now drive like the dickens to Clark and Adams'—just two blocks—and then they hop out and say to the man standing there waiting, 'O, dearie, I had to come such a ways—give the man two dollars.'"

BEGIN RAZING OLD MORRISON FOR A NEW SECTION MAY 1.

Second Part of Mammoth Hotel Expected to Be Completed by Dec. 15.

On May 1 the work of razing the original Morrison hotel, at the southeast corner of Madison and Clark streets, will begin, preliminary to the construction of the second section of the Hotel Morrison, which, independent of the furnishings, is expected to cost about $1,500,000.

The building will have a frontage of 90 feet on Madison street and 100 feet on Clark street; it will be twenty-two stories above ground and four below and will contain 490 rooms. Together with the first section to the east, there will be about 1,000 rooms. It is expected to have the building completed about Dec. 15 next. Work probably will be begun on the third section of the hotel, to the east of the first section, May 1, 1918, on the expiration of existing leases.

The old Morrison is one of the landmarks of the loop district. Originally the building was a four story structure, and preceding the addition of three stories and its conversion into a hotel in 1898 the store floor was for many years occupied by the famous old time clothing firm of Willoughby, Hill & Co.

The new building will conform to the present first section in architectural appearance and in general interior arrangements.

SEEKS REVENGE ON CUBAN CONSUL IN A FISTIC DUEL

Wilder Challenges Garcia to a Bout with Gloves to Settle Row Over Wife.

Tired of the law's delay and the alleged insolence of the office of the Cuban consul, Samuel M. Wilder adopted an older method yesterday. He challenged Calixto Garcia to a duel.

This duel, as proposed by Mr. Wilder, is not to be the old time meet-me-at-dawn-in-the-hollow-vale scrap to the death with pistols at so many paces. Mr. Wilder proposes a six round bout in a South State street gymnasium, with gloves. He will have his revenge, he says, after failing to get the Cuban consul, and Mrs. Wilder arrested for living together in what he says is an illegal manner.

But the Cuban, who says the attractive Mrs. Wilder is only his 26 year old housekeeper, refuses to duel. Scorning all duelistic precendent in the well known fighting Latin family, he will not fight. He will not thrown down the gauntlet nor knock the chip off his opponents shoulder.

Knows of Husband's Prowess.

Perhaps he has heard from his housekeeper of the pugilistic prowess of her husband. Wilder maintains that he is no slouch when it somes to a left hand jab to the jaw. He said that it was with money he made in the fighting game he sent Mrs. Wilder to Europe, where, in Hamburg, she met Garcia, and precipitated Wilder's troubles.

The challenge was issued in Wilder's room in a hotel at State and Harrison streets.

"I'm no mollycoddle," he announced as he opened up a trunk and pulled forth two pairs of boxing gloves. "I told the copper that pinched me last night that this fellow Garcia couldn't fight. I could tell it from the way he held his hands. I haven't been in a gymnasium in six years, but I ask you, am I muscle bound?"

Muscle Bound? Not He.

He placed the palms of his hands on the floor without bending his knees. Then he sat down and raised himself off the floor with his hands.

"Am I muscle bound?" he repeated.

His interviewer admitted he was not.

"There's a gymnasium down the street where Charlie White trains, and we could pull this fight down there. I'll bet him $100 I can stop him in six rounds. Or I'll give him $25 if I don't. And he weighs fifteen pounds more than I do."

But the Cuban consul, who has had the better of the legal argument since the two first clashed in December, is satisfied to let things rest.

Wilder was made to sign a peace bond before Judge Graham. He was given a jury trial for the disorderly conduct charge against him made by his wife. The hearing was set for April 7.

ARMY BILL SENATE DEBATE WAXES WARM; NO PROGRESS

No Indication of Date When Work Will Begin on Mass of Pending Amendments.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—The senate debated the army increase bill again all day today without any indication as to when work would begin on the mass of pending amendments.

Senator Borah told the senate he had found an insurmountable constitutional barrier against the proposal in the bill for federalization of the national guard.

Senator Cummins and Senator Lewis sharply disagreed with Senator Borah.

Senator Lewis attacked the senate bill provision for a force of federal volunteers, saying it was aimed at the national guard and would destroy it if enacted.

Senator Pomerene defended his amendment proposing creation of a national guard section of the army general staff. While regular officers looked with disfavor on the guard, he said, no accurate report as to the guard's condition and fitness could be expected from them.

Senator Brandegee added to the mass of amendments now pending a proposal to make the maximum peace strength of the army 250,000 instead of 180,000, as proposed in this bill.

Senator Gore submitted as an amendment his bill proposing that a military training course be provided for any high school with an attendance of more than fifty boys above 16 years of age, the government to pay two-fifths of the salary of a military instructor.

CHILD GIVEN TO FATHER.

Mother Had Possession of Girl Until the Judge Ruled Otherwise.

George F. Sandstrom, a mechanical engineer, was awarded the custody of his daughter, Ruth Dorothy Sandstrom, by Judge McDonald in the Superior court yesterday. Mrs. Mildred Sandstrom has had possession of the child since her divorce two years ago. A stipulation by which she agreed to relinquish her right to the child was produced in court. She also accepted $565 as alimony in gross. The divorce decree allowed her $80 a month for the support of herself and the child.

HOT IRON VICTIM SUCCUMBS.

Mrs. Christine Jacobsen, 81 years old, of 7246 South Campbell avenue, died yesterday. Her right leg was severely burned March 20 by a combination of flatirons and liniment she was using. Several weeks before she had fallen from a chair and injured one hip.

ART INSTITUTE SECRETARY AND GUARDS SURRENDER

Give Themselves Up to Detectives to Answer Charges of Expelled Artist.

Director Newton H. Carpenter, Secretary W. F. Tuttle, and Thomas Waller and John Christopher, guards at the Art institute, accompanied by Attorney Thomas McCall, went to the detective bureau yesterday to surrender themselves on warrants sworn out by Charles A. Kinney, 926 Margate terrace, who was expelled from the institution some time ago.

Mr. Carpenter found, however, that there was no warrant for him, though there were for the other three men, who are charged with assault and battery.

Kinney was ejected by the guards at the institute recently after he had been barred from appearing there following his expulsion. On Friday Kinney went before Judge Caverly and swore out the warrants for Tuttle and the two guards.

"CUT OUT PORK," MADDEN PLEA IN PREPAREDNESS TALK

Charges South Is Doing Its Best to Hamstring Defense Measures—Wants It Ousted from Saddle.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—[Special.]—Representative Madden today made a sensational speech in the house on the question of preparedness and "pork."

The Illinois congressman asserted that the southern Democrats who are doing their best to hamstring the preparedness measures are attempting to reach their hands deeper into the public treasury than ever before.

"It is time," he said "for some of the members on this floor to devote themselves to the consideration of national questions and not to an attempt to 'get things' for their districts."

Mr. Madden closed his remarks with the observation that it is about time the people pitch the south out of the saddle for the nation's good.

The Wonderful Cadillac Performance Is Widely Imitated But Never Equaled

Big cars and little cars, cheap cars and extravagant cars, cars with all kinds of engines—one and all, their makers recognize the superperformance of the Cadillac Eight and aim or claim to approach it.

As a result of Cadillac leadership most cars have been improved. They ride better and handle easier and make less noise. The obvious and spectacular points of Cadillac performance are now claimed by every car. But claimed is not equaled.

What is this wonderful Cadillac performance? What is there about the behavior of the Cadillac Eight so different that all the world now wants it? It must be highly desirable or it would not be so feverishly imitated.

Does "velvety smoothness" mean anything to you? Can you imagine the "aeroplane thrill"? Would you enjoy just one day of life without jolts or jars, without delays or disappointments, without noise or interruptions?

It is only by such appeals to your imagination that you can understand the Cadillac performance. Even after you experience it you cannot describe its comfort. You merely know there is nothing else like it. Everything seems tame beside it.

The Cadillac Eight is a wonderfully human car, eagerly responsive, quietly dependable. If you feel the pulse of youth, your Cadillac feels it, too—and does things, conquers heights, beats everything in sight, "follows through." Over hills that are steep, through mud that is deep, your Cadillac goes on just the same.

If you need a restful ride and utter comfort, your Cadillac is always ready. Smooth and quiet, soft and soothing, self-effacing—it serves you without your knowing how or caring.

To have such service at your beck and call every hour, all day, all year for many years—that is what the Cadillac performance means to you. And to know you have the only car that gives such service—and that you got good value for your money—these are the satisfactions that only the Cadillac owner is sure of. The wonderful Cadillac performance is widely imitated but never equaled.

SHERMAN WARNS OF DESIGNS UPON CHINA BY JAPAN

Says Administration Is Openly Submitting to Encroachments Upon Open Door.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 1.—[Special.]—Senator Sherman of Illinois today made public a letter which he addressed to the nonpartisan Saturday discussions committee of the New York Republican club, in which he asserted that the administration is openly submitting to Japanese encroachments upon the open door in China and upon Chinese soverelgty itself.

On Jan. 28 Senator Sherman introduced a resolution in the senate declaring that the senate looks with profound concern upon the demands of the Japanese government in regard to China.

Refers to Notes of 1908.

Although no action was taken by the senate on the resolution, Mr. Sherman has heard from it from all parts of the country. Recently he received a letter from A. B. Humphrey, vice chairman of the New York club, asking him to discuss his resolution there tomorrow. The senator felt that he could not leave Washington now, so he wrote his views and decided to make them public.

In his letter to Mr. Humphrey he said in part:

"The notes exchanged between Japan and the United States Nov. 30, 1908, declared the policy of the two governments in the far east. Japan's note refers to the common aim policy and intention of the two governments respecting their outlying insular possessions in the region of the Pacific ocean. It is declared further to be the wish of the two governments to encourage the free and peaceful development of their commerce on the Pacific ocean. This is followed by declaring for the maintenance of the existing status quo in the regions above mentioned and to the defense of the principle of the equal opportunity for commerce and industry in China and for the preservation of independence and integrity of China by all pacific means at their disposal.

Policy of the Japanese.

Senator Sherman said that inasmuch as the exchange of notes between Japan and the United States occurred Nov. 30, 1908, and abundant time to digest and understand the situation preceded the exchange of notes, it must be considered a deliberate and intentional expression of either public policy on the matters concerned, or be classified as oriental diplomacy." On behalf of our government, it must be considered a bonafide declaration of national purpose and policy," he said.

"The demands recently made by Japan on China would have given Japan such commercial advantages as to exclude the quality of commerce guaranteed by the notes of 1908. It would have led the way to the dismemberment of Chinese territory."

CRITICIZED CONGRESSMAN; HE'S ARRESTED AS OBSCENE

Konop of Wisconsin Causes Trouble for Chicago Man Who Wrote Views on Postal Card.

Because he criticised Congressman Thomas F. Konop of Wisconsin for the latter's vote on the McLemore resolution, and in doing so wrote the criticism in uncensored language on a postal card, Joseph Kohout of 2423 South St. Louis avenue was arrested yesterday on a charge of sending obscene matter through the mails.

The postal card was dated March 9 and reads in part:

"Dear Sir: I am ashamed of a Bohemian-American voting with the kaiser as you did in your vote on the McLemore resolution, and you a Democrat at that. Your Bohemian constituents ought to give you a good swift kick at the next election. Even Sabath, a Jew, and a friend of Germany, voted with the administration. JOSEPH KOHOUT."

HUSBAND BARES QUARREL AFTER HIS WIFE'S DEATH

Tells of Cabaret Lure at Inquiry Into Supposed Suicide—No Poison Trace Found.

Mrs. Minnie Urban, 1022 Newport avenue, died yesterday. She told Dr. R. M. Roach, 2932 North Clark street, Friday night that she had taken carbolic acid. Police investigated and Dr. Roach said he didn't believe the woman had swallowed the poison. He said he found no trace of acid about her mouth or throat, and that she was about to become a mother.

Paul Urban, the husband, at the inquest told how he and his wife had quarreled.

"A little over a week ago we quarreled and we broke up on March 20," he said. "She had been drinking heavily and going out to cabarets at night. I'm a waiter in a west side café and work from 11 to 1 o'clock in the morning."

Note a Few of Its New and Helpful Features

¶ Of all the magazines that come to your library table, how many of them really help you in ACTUALLY GETTING AHEAD? How many CASHABLE ideas and suggestions do the best of them contain? WHICH, IF ANY, SHOWS YOU HOW TO MAKE MONEY?

¶ REALTY & HOME will!!

¶ That is its principal mission.

¶ Learn something about this breezy, entertaining, helpful little monthly. See what it offers.

* * * * *

¶ More money is made out of intelligent real estate investments than any other kind.

¶ And this is especially true in Chicago, where property is cheap and where its future is both SECURE and teeming with all kinds of possibilities.

¶ Real estate is a form of investment that all may enter upon. The man of small means stands as good a show for profit-making in real estate as the man of money.

¶ How and where to invest money most advantageously in real estate is the only question to decide.

¶ REALTY & HOME, in its monthly visits to you, will help you intelligently answer that question. It will not only bring you the best offers of the biggest bargains from the most reliable realty firm in the city—it will assist you in many other ways to make money out of Chicago real estate.

¶ To those planning or contemplating new residences, two-flats, and other building activities, the building plans and the advice and information contained in each monthly number of REALTY & HOME will be found invaluable. All its articles of this nature are based on the results of our own practical experience in the handling of our properties. You will save money by thus capitalizing our experience.

* * * * *

¶ But that isn't all—

¶ REALTY & HOME contains a variety of features—good stories, authoritative articles on gardening, flower growing, poultry raising, arrangement and decoration of homes. In the next, or May, issue will begin, also, a Woman's Section. This will be edited by one of the most popular women writers in the city. We shall be adding to the present strong features of the magazine from time to time.

¶ Here are a few of the many interesting and unusual features found in the April issue—just off the press:

Successful Gardening on a 30-Foot Lot

¶ Never before has this feature been covered in such a complete and practical manner. Many articles have been written on the subject, but never before, that we know of, has an authority on gardening laid down the actual instructions necessary to follow in planning and growing a back-yard garden on an average city lot.

¶ This feature begins in the April issue, and is illustrated with complete and authentic plots, sketches and detailed information which show you just how to lay out your garden and when to plant it; tells you what to plant; itemizes the seeds and the few necessary implements you will require. The May installment of this series will explain fully how to care for these growing plants; and the treatise will be completed in June REALTY & HOME.

¶ If you live on a 30-foot lot and will begin right now with the author, Mr. Heide, and follow his instructions, you can have as fine a little garden this summer as any expert ever created.

An Article by State Senator George F. Harding, Jr.

¶ Mr. Harding is one of the largest real estate owners in the city. In his article, "The Aladdin's Lamp of the Twentieth Century," he tells some startling facts about Chicago real estate values. Think of a corner lot in this great metropolis jumping from a market value of twenty dollars to an assessed valuation of two million dollars in eighty years. Read about it in Senator Harding's article.

Department of Home-Building

¶ This very valuable and helpful department is a permanent feature. Inspect the plans and get the detailed and itemized estimate of costs for construction of our this month's model $2,300 five-room bungalow. All this in the April issue. Read also the articles on poultry, the latest treatment for dining room equipment and decoration, the cartoon by King of The Tribune staff, and many other timely contributions.

The Coming Big Serial

¶ In the May issue the publication of a great 10,000-word serial by Delos Avery begins—"The Story of Chicago." This is something no Chicagoan should miss.

¶ What do you know about the early history of this, your home city? What happened after the great fire? What about the Chicago of the present? Surely you will follow this dramatic and historical serial—a work destined to become a classic among the historical books of the day.

JOSEPH N. FIELD SILENT DOER OF GOOD IN CHICAGO

Gave More than Half Million to Various Institutions, but Evaded the Limelight.

AID TO NEEDY EMPLOYES.

This is the fourth of a series of articles on the gifts and bequests of Chicago rich men.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

A strange career in many ways was that of Joseph N. Field, who was a brother of the late Marshall Field. In the '60's Joseph Field was clerk of the courts in Sioux City, Ia. Then he became associated with the business of his brother and the last forty years of his life were spent in Manchester, England, as a European representative of the firm.

He was a man of homely dress and retiring manner. He made comparatively few acquaintances and was always careful to avoid publicity of any kind. Through his business connections he grew rich, and, though living far away from Chicago, he always felt and recognized his obligation to the employés of the firm whose faithful work had helped to build up his fortune.

$500,000 to Chicago.

During his lifetime he gave more than half a million dollars to various Chicago institutions. It was typical of the man that when he contributed $100,000 to the Y. M. C. A. he should make the condition that the money should be credited merely to "A Friend." Other large gifts were announced in the same way. During his frequent visits to Chicago he was accustomed to make discreet inquiries as to the welfare of his old friends among the employés of the firm, and where misfortune had overtaken them he would put them on their feet again in some indirect way so that his own identity should not be revealed.

In his will Mr. Field left a fund of $500,000 to his son, Stanley Field, and Arthur B. Jones as trustees. His instructions were that both the principal and the interest on this fund should be used within twenty years of his death for the aid and relief of employés of the firm of at least ten years' standing and "who shall be in need of assistance by reason of sickness, age, disability, or other cause."

$42,000 a Year.

The money has been invested so that $42,000 shall be available each year during the twenty for which the trust endures, so that the total amount of the fund to be distributed will really be $840,000.

Already allowances from the fund have been made to employés or the families of deceased employés to the number of nearly 100. One unusual and desirable feature of the trust is that there is no limit on the amount which may be appropriated to a single purpose. Thus, in one instance, where an employé had died leaving a mortgage of $2,500 on his home and a family of four children and a widow it proved fortunate. The eldest boy was only 15 years old and had still two years to go before completing the high school. It was possible for the trustees of the Field fund to pay off the mortgage and to guarantee the widow a living allowance of $75 a month for two years, at the end of which time, if necessary, it may be continued.

Crane Ideas Carried Out.

Many big firms and corporations in Chicago have established pension and sick benefit funds for their employés. Some of them have adopted various methods of profit sharing. The Crane company, for instance, had before the death of its founder done something along all these lines. The late R. T. Crane had planned to establish a substantial endowment for the pension and disability benefits to employés. He died, however, without changing his will to cover these plans.

Shortly after his death his sons and chief heirs announced that they would carry out what they knew to be their father's intentions along these lines.

To put the fund, out of which pensions and disability allowances to employés are paid, on a sound basis they announced that they would set aside $1,000,000. Another plan which the late ironmaster had in contemplation they have also carried out, though there was nothing in the will of R. T. Crane to make it necessary.

Deserted Wives and Widows.

One of the difficult problems in a big town like Chicago is to provide in some way for the support of deserted wives and widows who are left without means and with small children to take care of. Mr. Crane had planned to make a start in working out the solution of that problem. His sons have set aside a fund for the purpose, the annual income from which is about $30,000, and the experiment is already well under way.

On Buffalo Creek farm, which lies near the village of Wheeling, some thirty miles northwest of Chicago, a colony of widows and their children is growing up. The work is under the general direction of Mrs. Frances C. Lillie, a daughter of the late R. T. Crane. Each of the ten or more families occupies a cottage of its own; there is a community school for the children and a community council, of which all the mothers are members.

In selecting the members of the colony preference is given to families in which there are four or more children. Medical care and dental attention are provided and the children are given all the advantages of a healthful life in the country.

Another notable bequest is that of $2,000,000 left by the late James C. King as the foundation for a home for old men. The commodious and handsome building of the home stands on the south side and from seventy to eighty old men there spend their declining years in peace and comfort.

SAVED BY A PERMIT

How Mrs. J. T. Harahan Kept Herself from Durance Vile.

Mrs. J. T. Harahan came near going to jail yesterday as the result of a tiff with a policeman. She is chairman of the publicity committee of the White Elephant sale, and in pursuit of her duties she pasted a huge white elephant on the sidewalk in front of 171 North Wabash avenue.

"You'll have to take it away," said a policeman.

"I will not," replied Mrs. Harahan. "I have a permit coming from the city hall. It isn't here yet."

"Then you'll have to be under arrest," said the policeman. Just then the permit arrived and Mrs. Harahan was saved.

PRIVATE BANKER SENTENCED

William R. Forsberg, part owner of the Brookline Commercial and Savings bank, who was indicted on a charge of embezzlement in connection with the failure of the institution a year ago, was sentenced to one year in the bridewell by Judge Marcus Kavanagh in the Criminal court yesterday.

WIFE AND COOK COME TO BLOWS OVER HIS KISS

Housekeeper Says They Bussed to Avoid Shocking the Neighbors.

SPOUSE THINKS OTHERWISE.

A cave-womanly kick, encased in vici kid, and a prehensile clutch at a six-story coiffure nearly put the solemn pretensions of civility in Justice Thomas Appleton's Lake Forest court on the fritz yesterday, when Mrs. Carrie Jordon disagreed with Miss May Bruder at the close of judicial business.

"Mealy mouthed excuses!" shouted Mrs. Jordon aiming a foot at a flounce on Miss Bruder's skirt.

"Jealous!" snapped Miss Bruder, maneuvering at a hop on her uninjured limb, to a position from which she could make an effective swipe at Mrs. Jordon's hair.

The man in the case, Fred J. Jordon, abstractedly jingled a bunch of keys while court attendants tried to restore a Blackstonian equilibrium to the situation.

All Over a Kiss.

A perfectly proper kiss, designed to carry out a connubial masquerade as told in court, precipitated the row. It will be remembered that Mrs. Jordon, who lives at 3518 North Kolmar avenue, went to Lake Forest a few days ago and brought home her husband, who was living at 116 Wisconsin avenue, with Miss Bruder, while he was engaged on a contract in the suburb. Yesterday Mr. Jordon and Miss Bruder were given a hearing on charges of disorderly conduct.

"I was his housekeeper and cook," said Miss Bruder, who is 19. "We occupied separate rooms—a portiere divided them. I posed as his wife because Lake Forest folk might be shocked. I kissed him several times to make the deception good. That was all there was to it."

Admits His Innocence.

Mr. Jordon admitted he was innocent. It was all as Miss Bruder said. Mrs. Jordon was so sensitive, so jealous! Why, once before, when he employed Miss Bruder in Chicago, Mrs. Jordon had come to the office and had made a scene, during which she emptied a pot of ink on Miss Bruder's dress!

Justice Appleton said that while Mr. Jordon's sensitive care for the feelings of Lake Forest folk did him credit it would be necessary to hold him and Miss Bruder to the grand jury. His bond is $500, hers $100.

JUDGE ORDERS ACQUITTAL.

Finds Fault with United States Attorneys' Frozen Egg Prosecution.

Another case was taken from a jury in the United States District court yesterday when Judge J. Otis Humphrey instructed a verdict of not guilty against William Zuckerman and Joseph Ginsberg, South Water street merchants, and Armour & Co., who were charged with selling frozen eggs, in violation of the pure food and drugs act.

The government endeavored to show that the defendants were in a conspiracy to sell the eggs to bakers, while the defense maintained the eggs were sold to Zuckerman as tanners' eggs.

"Wouldn't it be a monstrous doctrine if the seller of tanner eggs could be held responsible for the use to which the buyer puts them?" Judge Humphrey said.

"Witch" Beat Man to Cure Paralysis Son Tells Justice

Describe Strenuous Treatment Used on Man Now Dead.

IN MELROSE PARK

Mrs. Carmela Vosella has been styled the witch of Melrose Park. Her specialty, it is reported, is the exorcising of devils. Samuel Gugliuzza thought a considerable number of imps possessed him and caused his paralysis.

His widow alleges that he paid $107 to Mrs. Vosella to drive the demons away. His son, James, 16 years old, testified about the treatments his father received from "the witch" before Justice of the Peace W. Stevens Lewis yesterday.

Son Describes Treatment.

According to the boy, Mrs. Vosella confined her activities largely to punching and clubbing his father, stepping on his toes, pulling his hair, and kicking him. Her medical theory, according to the testimony of the innocent bystander, was that a "spell" must be produced in the patient before the cure could be accomplished.

On the stand Mrs. Vosella denied having received money from Gugliuzza. She said she had not beaten him and that her cure consisted only of a charm she had learned in Italy.

Jack Larrocco, a cement worker, said that while repairing a sidewalk he saw Mrs. Vosella pursuing Gugliuzza three times around her basement, until she caught him and began to whip him, whereupon Gugliuzza cried:

"Leave go of my shirt. It cost a dollar."

Sometimes, the son recorded, Mrs. Vosella slapped his father's hands with the flat of a knife; at other times she clubbed him to the floor and then kicked him firmly in the ribs.

"Pa Was Little."

"Why did your father stand for these things if he thought they were doing him no good?" the son was asked.

"Well, pa was little," was the reply, "and he was paralyzed on one side, and look at her," he answered, pointing to Mrs. Vosella, who is tall and heavily built.

MRS. BOOTH SAYS STICKNEY LEFT LITTLE BUT DEBTS.

Nothing Left for Charity, She Says, After "Terribly Involved" Estate Is Cleared.

That the payment of the late Charles Stickney's debts probably would "not leave $5 for a legacy of any description" was the assertion last night of Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, who under the terms of the New York attorney's will was made beneficiary of an $80,000 bequest. Mrs. Booth, who had just finished an address to the women prisoners of Joliet penitentiary, expressed the greatest repugnance to publicity concerning the bequest.

"He was a friend since my girlhood, more than thirty years, and I think the matter is one that can fairly be kept from the public," she said.

"Spend it for charity! I doubt if there will be $5 left. My friend's estate was terribly involved. It will be the duty of the executor, Attorney James Stuart of New York, and myself to pay all debts before honoring any of the bequests."

Mr. Stickney gave liberally during his life to the work of the Volunteers of America and the Y. M. C. A.

The Maestro [that's what he calls himself] is shown in laughing defiance—but of whom or of what is not known: perhaps, of Pavlowa, to whom he refused to rent the week of April 24 in the Auditorium.

N.B.: The Pinkertons, at right and left, are not sad: they're simply trying not to laugh!

LIFE IS SAVED BY A GIRL.

Notices Gas Escaping While Playing, and Woman Finds Man Overcome.

Frances Mathie, 10 years old, of 3406 West Twelfth street noticed escaping gas yesterday while playing under his bedroom window and probably saved Edward H. Walters of 3414 West Twelfth street. The girl called his landlady and she found West Twelfth street noticed escaping gas jet open. He was revived.

TOY SHOP CHARGES FEE.

Large Crowd at the French Benefit Lead to New Policy.

Because of the large crowds that visited the French Toy shop at Lincoln parkway and Huron street yesterday it has been decided to charge a small admission fee. It previously was announced that there would be only a charge for tea, but the number of visitors has caused the directors to charge a small fee which will add to the fund for the French war sufferers.

NEW YORK OPERA SUCCEEDS

Season Ends with Directors Gratified by Results from Financial and Artistic Viewpoints.

New York, April 1.—The Metropolitan Opera company closed tonight its most successful season in many years. The directors expressed themselves as highly gratified by the results of the season, not only from a financial, but from an artistic viewpoint. A repertory of thirty-four operas was produced with a total of 128 performances.

PAMPHLET 'KIDS' SIG. CAMPANINI FOR OPERA WAR

His Home at Parma, Italy, 'Where Cheese Comes From,' Declares Mysterious Foe.

BOOSTS RIVAL CONDUCTORS.

Cleofonte Campanini thought that he had ended the "war" on the opera company, and his direction when he announced the engagements of Mary Garden and Lucien Muratore for next season. Yesterday appeared a prospectus of the Rabinoff-Pavlowa opera and ballet season at the Blackstone theater after Easter, carrying with it a supplement picturing Mr. Campanini and his detectives as they held the Auditorium against the enemy.

Mr. Campanini was referred to as "Sig. Campanini of Parma, where the cheese comes from," and smaller type proclaimed his refusal to rent the Auditorium to a rival opera company.

Disclaimer from Power.

Before these prospectuses had had time to circulate, there came a disclaimer of responsibility from the manager of the Blackstone theater, Harry J. Powers. It is as follows:

"The management of the Blackstone theater deeply regrets that a scurrilous pamphlet and card announcing the forthcoming engagement of the Boston Grand Opera company and the Pavlowa Imperial Ballet Russe has been published and sent through the mails.

"This has just been brought to our attention. The photograph on the card and the subject matter are, in our opinion, entirely unethical and show poor business acumen.

"We wish to protest emphatically against such methods. The Chicago engagement is under the management of Messrs. Guy Hardy, and Frederick Donaghey, who, we fear, are the authors of the publication."

Sting in Foot Note.

But the picture supplement of the announcement was not the only fusillade against the doughty director of the opera. Another paragraph, embodied in the official prospectus, suggested that the chief conductor of Mr. Rabinoff's staff was a joy and a pride to Italian art, and that others were not. This is the text of that "foot note":

"Italy regarded the departure of Mr. Moransoni as a loss to the cause of Italian music; Italy laughs her loudest when she contemplates the pose and pretense of others of her subjects who have found berths here as conductors."

As to Maggie Teyte.

Speaking of Maggie Teyte, the prospectus remarks that she "will come at length into her 'Chicago own' as Mimi." Again, "As to ensemble, the season has furnished Chicago with proof—positive proof, and, later, negative proof—that the Pavlowa troupe is beyond compare."

And still another: "Chicago heard two glorious performances of the work ['L'Amore dei tre Re'] by the Boston company. Of certain subsequent attempts in the season by another company to perform Montemezzi's masterpiece Chicago opera goers are well informed."

Evidently somebody is still gunning for Campanini's scalp.

Motorman Dies Wreck Victim.

John Maloney of 2087 West Garfield boulevard, motorman, died yesterday of injuries received in the collision between Sixty-third street cars in Clearing Thursday morning.

"STEP LIVELY"

I advertised last Sunday under this title and am SWAMPED with inquiries. These are being listed, and, as soon as possible, all of you will learn about this investment of $300 to get an income of $300 a month from the SAFEST BUSINESS ON EARTH; in the meantime please be patient.

Hundreds of Tribune readers evidently desire such an investment and wish to see the bank, business, and commercial indorsements and the government reports behind this one; and they also want to know why some rich man doesn't take all of it. Just be patient.

I thank you for your inquiries. A few tried to be sarcastic or funny, but they will receive courteous treatment from me, for I assume that they mean well, anyhow.

"Don't trifle with Opportunity; she comes to you seriously; and she will pass on to the other fellow if you try to make fun of her."

Address K L 407, Tribune.

CAPITAL—A YOUNG COLLEGE MAN WITH 5 years' farming experience and now operating a 2,100 acre farm in an ideal section of Western Canada, would like to co-operate with some gentleman in acquiring and developing an additional tract of 640 acres in same neighborhood. The tract is partially all tillable, is within 3 miles of elevator and railroad, and can be purchased for $2[illegible] per acre on terms of $3,000 cash, balance to be paid by turning over one-half of crop each year. It would require $1,500 to break and double disc 300 acres this year. With this improvement the land would be salable at $35 per acre, giving a profit of over $5,000. Will pay for itself within five years or less and would then yield a net income of $5,000 per year. Am willing to merge this property and take ½ interest with some acceptable party who is able to put up the $4,500. Summer fallowed land in this district over a period of five years has averaged 35 bu. wheat per acre, and the average price has been 85c per bu. This will stand any kind of investigation desired and the best of Chicago, Ohio, and Calgary references can be furnished. Expect to be in Chicago during April and meantime would be glad to communicate with interested parties. Address F. HAGENBUCH, Rosebud Ranch, Calgary, Canada.

CAPITAL WANTED—WE HAVE CREATED, perfected, and patented a wonderful, legitimate, new specialty. [Not a household utensil or specialty.] A similar though inferior company earned nearly $400,000 NET for its company in 1915. Our product can be manufactured complete for $2 and retailed at $6.75, or 75c less than the successful, inferior competing product mentioned. All experimental work has been completed and paid for. We are absolutely free from debt. The merit and superiority of our product can be conclusively proven by actual comparative demonstration. Market is unlimited. Because we lack sufficient capital we will sell for $12,500 CASH and $12,500 in stock the following assets: Two patents, free and clear of any royalty or other liens; secret formula, which is impossible of analysis; two complete and perfect models; complete office equipment and files containing valuable data covering product and market; all stock in a $50,000 Illinois corporation; complete drawings and specifications for factory equipment. If you can qualify, give phone number and we will arrange for immediate appointment. Address H T 281, Tribune.

CAPITAL—WE WANT ONE MAN WITH $1,000, or 10 men with $100 each, to join 2 reputable business men, who have already subscribed $500 each for new contract deal; for each $100 subscribed you stand to get your money back in 90 days and for the use of your $100 you get $625 in common stock that has earning possibility of $2,500 in the first 70 weeks. Don't answer unless you have the money ready now and are willing to invest in a highly speculative field that has reasonable assurance of success and returns; quick, tremendous profits. Write for interview. Give phone. Address K G 819, Tribune.

STATE BANKERS VOTE HEAVY FOR PREPAREDNESS

Result of Poll Sent to Mann Shows 96 Per Cent Favor Bigger Forces.

The committee on preparedness of the Illinois Bankers' association has sent to Congressman Mann at Washington the result of a poll taken in the organization on the preparedness issue.

Three questions were put to the members dealing with increasing the army, enlarging the navy, and the advisability of congress being guided in its plans for both by the advice of military and naval experts.

The results were overwhelmingly in favor of all three propositions.

Text of the Letter.

Below is the text of the letter:

"James R. Mann, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. Dear Sir: As indicative of the intelligent, sober judgment of the central west we call your attention to what we believe to be the first poll with respect to the subject of national preparedness, which has been fairly taken by a representative organization covering a wide area.

"The poll is particularly significant, as the majority of the members of the association are small institutions owned and controlled by local farmers and business men intimately in touch with the sentiment of the public they serve, and for the further reason that the poll was taken without making any reference to the present international situation, the urgent need for better defense, or an appeal to patriotism.

Poll Ordered as Guide.

"The referendum was ordered by President Woodruff in the current number of the Association Bulletin as a guide for the action of this committee.

"The results are so overwhelmingly in favor of a larger army and navy and the adoption by congress of the recommendations of the army and navy officers, that this committee feels obligated to bring the matter to the attention of the members of congress from Illinois.

"The nonpartisan character of the inquiry and the intimate relationship between the men in the small banks and the public justifies the assertion that the expression is that of public opinion in the agricultural, and other communities in which the banks are located.

Details of the Vote.

"The details of the poll are shown in the following tabulation:

"Question 1. Do you believe our navy should be enlarged and strengthened?

"The vote was 572 ayes and 23 nays.

"Question 2. Do you believe our army should be enlarged and strengthened?

"The vote was 569 ayes to 28 nays.

"Question 3. In adopting any plan for army and navy enlargement, do you believe that congress should be guided by the recommendations of our navy and army officers, who are experts on the subject of army and navy matters?

"On this question 558 voted yes, 24 voted no, and 16 qualified their answers by saying 'to a certain extent.'

"It will be seen that to question No. 1 96 per cent voted in the affirmative, to question No. 2 95 per cent voted in the affirmative, and to question No. 3 96 per cent voted in the affirmative, 3 per cent qualifying their vote.

"Emphatic comment as to the urgent need for action appears on numerous ballots, while opposed to this are several explanations of the votes against an increase. In only one case is reference made to international disarmament. The 'peace at any price' propaganda seems to have few, if any, adherents.

OMAR H. WRIGHT, Chairman,
N. M. HARRIS,
JOHN W. THOMAS,
Committee on Preparedness.

HAY'S DEFENSE FIGURES GROSSLY WRONG—GARDNER.

Says Virginia Man Misstated Number of Men Deemed Eligible by War Department.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—[Special.]—Further evidence that Chairman Hay of the house military affairs committee grossly misstated the number of men whom the war department deems sufficiently trained for immediate military service was made public here today by Representative Gardner of Massachusetts.

Mr. Gardner cited as his proof a report which was sent to the senate by Gen. McCain in answer to a resolution submitted by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts.

In his report Gen. McCain said that only 294,182 men in civil life have in the last ten years received military training equivalent to a single enlistment in the national guard or a military course in a land grant college.

In presenting the army bill to the house, Mr. Hay estimated that besides the regular army and the national guard there are 1,055,790 men "who have had military training and are now in the country."

On March 16 Secretary of War Baker in a letter to Representative Gardner made an estimate of 244,700 men, not including 100,000 now in the regular army and 120,000 now in the national guard. Now comes Gen. McCain with an estimate of 294,482 men, even below that of Secretary Baker, who was far below Mr. Hay.

BISHOP LUCCOCK IS DEAD.

Head of Methodist Church of Montana and the Dakotas Succumbs in La Crosse, Wis.

La Crosse, Wis., April 1.—Bishop Naphtali Luccock, head of the Methodist Episcopal churches of Montana and the Dakotas, died in the Lutheran hospital here early this morning. Death resulted from Bright's disease, following an attack of pneumonia. Bishop Luccock was on his way from Helena to a conference in Brooklyn, N. Y., when he was taken ill in this city.

Bishop Luccock was born Sept. 28, 1853, at Kimbolton, O. He was graduated from the Ohio Wesleyan university. He was the cousin of the Rev. George N. Luccock, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Oak Park, and was a frequent visitor in Chicago. He was elected to the episcopacy four years ago at Minneapolis.

The funeral services will be in St. Louis, Mo., on Tuesday.

COL. DODD'S FEAT.

The brilliant feat of Col. Dodd is characteristic of our regular army. Col. Dodd seems to have made a record for hard riding and to have lived up to his high reputation in the service as a resolute and resourceful officer. But, although indifferent civilian America knows little or nothing of our regular army's records, the achievement of Dodd and his command is exactly the sort of thing American officers have been doing for generations.

When there is criticism of the army in informed quarters it is directed against the system which politics has imposed, against the inadequacies of size, equipment, and organization which congress, reflecting the ignorance and indifference of the public, has been responsible for. But the annals of the regular army are thickly starred with feats of swift and daring courage, of devotion, of soldierly efficiency of the kind developed under our narrow and restricting conditions.

Col. Dodd's feat is the more important and inspiring because it comes as the climax of a long record of hard soldierly work—work of brain and brawn—persisted in under the discouraging circumstances which American regulars have to combat. Col. Dodd is that rare combination in any army, a critical student of method and a commander of men. He is not only a hard rider, a beau sabreur, an officer who keeps his command in crack form for hard service, but he is the reorganizer of our cavalry tactics. He is the sort of man who on the basis of hard work in peace quickly makes himself felt when war comes.

But, though we must applaud Col. Dodd and his men, as the house of representatives did when the news of their fight came, we shall do neither them nor ourselves justice if we overestimate their feat or draw false conclusions from it. We shall hear plenty of pacifist twaddle to the effect that Col. Dodd has shown that the difficulties of dealing with Mexico are being exaggerated by alarmists and the inadequacies of our army overstated by militarists. That would be an ironic return for a difficult achievement.

As a matter of fact the Pershing expedition is, according to modern standards of war, a minor operation. It is being carried out with the spirit and ability which our regular service has always shown, but against a modern military force trained and equipped as armies of powers of our own rank are and in numbers such as we must expect, the gallantry, brilliancy, and devotion of such men as Dodd would be sacrificed in vain.

Congress did well to cheer Dodd. It would do better to listen to him and men like him. It is to be hoped his service, not merely the feat of yesterday, but the long years which prepared it, will be generously acknowledged and rewarded. But the best acknowledgment by congress of the merits of the American army officers which Col. Dodd so admirably represents is to give them an army and an organization adequate to meet the responsibilities we ignorantly place upon their shoulders.

JOSEPHUS, O JOSEPHUS!

Years ago Josephus Daniels, now secretary of what there is left of the American navy, was the poet of Blowing Rock. Blowing Rock used to be somewhere near Raleigh, N. C., but later they moved it up to Washington, D. C., where it remained just as rocky, but blew harder. Well, this here Josephus we're telling you about was the poet of the Blowing Rock we have told you of.

Josephus does love pansies and the tall, graceful gladiolus. That is why in a perceptive administration he was made secretary of the navy. Rather that was partly why. He also loved politics. Gosh, how Josephus loved politics and pansies and poetry and peace. Some day, just naturally, Josephus, like the rest of us, has got to die, and we want to recommend for his epitaph—he'll outlive all of us and we'll never see it—the beautiful expression—"He loved politics, pansies, poetry, and peace."

It would seem an outrage against nature that a poet who loved politics, pansies, poetry, and peace should be put in charge of the navy of any other than the Swiss nation, or possibly of Montenegro. It would seem so, but in fact it was an outrage against the navy. If Josephus had loved merely pansies, poetry, and peace this would not have happened, but, fortunately for him but unfortunately for the navy, he loved politics.

The loves of Josephus all begin with P, which includes piffle. Josephus also dearly loves piffle; also prunes and prisms. He loves everything that begins with P except projectiles and preparedness. How Josephus does hate preparedness and projectiles, and also powder. It takes preparedness to get powder and powder to propel projectiles.

We do not say that Josephus likes all the "Ps." We merely say that everything he likes begins with "P," such as politics, pansies, peace, and poetry. It is a pity that Gilbert and Sullivan were not Americans and are not now alive. What a poor thing "Pinafore" is, anyway, now that we know Josephus. But Josephus, O Josephus. There's richness. He did not rise to be an admiral of the queen's navee by polishing the knob of the big front door, but he came to be head of the U. S. navee by minding his "Ps."

We love Josephus and his cute little ideas of how a navy can be kept from being a navy by teaching the men to plant pansies in window boxes. We may have to pay for Josephus later, but certainly he is worth the price, and no one can deliver the delegates of North Carolina in a Democratic convention better than he can, and no one hates the real purposes of a navy more than he does.

Leave Josephus alone another three years and our sailors will be the best horticulturists and worst shots to be found in any navy, including the Swiss. Josephus, in addition to running the navy, and running it down—runs a journal of civilization and progress known as the Raleigh, N. C., News and Observer. It is called the News and Observer because Josephus never observed anything and would not know news when he saw it in another newspaper. The News and Observer subscribes for the syndicated stuff of old Uncle Walt Mason of Emporia, Kas.

Uncle Walt occasionally writes what they know in Emporia, Kas., as hogwash. He wrote some the other day about making the navy big and strong but teaching it not to kill. How Josephus, head of the navy and editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, did fall upon that perfect expression of his hopes! Black face type at the head of his editorial column!

If we could all be as sweet and good as Josephus we'd all be glad to know that the American navy could take first prize for embroidery in any county fair.

MISINFORMATION—OUR DANGEROUS ENEMY.

We do not believe it is with the consent of the people of the United States that the defenses of the American republic are neglected. The people have been imposed upon by the easy method of withholding information and cultivating illusions.

For years it has been the American policy to maintain a navy equal to any other than that of Great Britain. The people were told that their navy was second in strength. It was at one time, but, as Assistant Secretary Roosevelt of the navy department said to the house committee on naval affairs, it has been declining in relative strength for ten years.

Now Germany far outclasses us and Japan has, or soon will have, passed us. It will require a great building effort to catch up with Germany within the next three or four years. "We must adopt a great program to do that," said Mr. Roosevelt. There is little disposition in congress to adopt such a program.

Our own experts tell us that the Japanese navy is superior to the American navy now. It has now, if not greater strength, greater efficiency. Efficiency comes in part from organization. The Japanese navy is better organized and better administered. It is, therefore, a better fighting force.

Let the American people understand that there is danger in this. The American republic ranking fourth among the naval powers is in an unsafe position. We do not believe that the American people know that the United States ranks fourth and we do not believe that it is with their consent that it is being outclassed on the sea.

There is more danger if, having the fourth instead of the second navy of the world, we do not modify our policies to conform to our strength to execute them. If we are a fourth navy power we must act like a fourth navy power.

Some of our policies are provocative. We think they are just and essential to our well being, but without strength back of them they become so dangerous that they had better be abandoned. Germany does not concede that the Monroe doctrine is a fair doctrine. We had better concede that it is a dangerous one unless it is properly supported.

Japan does not concede that the discrimination against Japanese citizens is fair and we had better understand that it is dangerous unless the United States is strong enough to back its words. If three nations have more efficient navies than that of the United States this republic must choose its words carefully and its policies modestly.

The United States has no defense but its navy. The people knew that, but they have thought that the navy was able to undertake any duty which within reason might be given it. It is not able and it is not the fault of the navy.

A better organization would make it the equal of the Japanese navy. For that purpose it does not so much need capital ships as it needs men and the auxiliaries and complements of capital ships. It is not organized for efficiency.

The people would be wise to demand information. They might be satisfied with conditions as they are, but satisfaction ought to be based on facts and not on illusions.

The army, as might be expected, is in even worse condition than the navy. It was another illusion in the American mind that the small American army was top grade, small but perfect. The expedition into Mexico has substituted a few facts for many fallacies. The other day it was officially admitted in Washington that the aviation service had only eight aeroplanes, all of which were antiquated and six of which are now out of condition.

That is one fact. All the facts are discouraging, but they ought to be known. If the United States is weak it ought to know its weakness and not think itself strong.

Misinformation is the most dangerous enemy the nation has at this moment.

ENTER THE DUAL PERSONALITY.

We have had the brain storm as a successful excuse for murder. Are we to add the duplex personality to the ample resources of the gentle art?

Dr. Waite says he has had a dual personality and has been "possessed," if we may use the ancient term in vogue before the scientists discovered the subconscious self. A "Bad Man from Egypt" compelled Dr. Waite to do away with his wife's parents and otherwise comport himself in a manner deplorable and disapproved by the real Dr. Waite.

It is doubtless a mere coincidence that the Bad Man, though often wrestled with in the past, gave up the struggle he had so successfully waged against the virtuous personality just at the moment that the harsh hand of justice was about to fall upon him. Dr. Waite is sure he is expelled and never will return. No wonder!

The only question now is whether Dr. Waite can find an advocate eloquent enough to induce a jury to believe that the virtuous personality should not be punished for the evil, especially as the latter has now vacated the premises—according to the report of the virtuous ego, which is, of course, incapable of deceit.

American criminal justice has sufficient difficulty running down and pinning conviction on gross single minded offenders. What will it do if it has to pursue guilt through the subterranean chambers of multiple personality?

THE HOME.

[From the Farmer's Review.]

In the spring of the year Nature sets a good example. She steps forth in a beautiful dress of green that is fresh and clean. Her action is infectious and people generally put forth efforts to dress up and make more beautiful and tasty the homes in which they live. Too bad these efforts cannot always last. On most farms spring field work rushes and things about the house and garden suffer more or less neglect. But a beautiful home pays. It not only adds to the market value of the farm but it, with others, adds to the attractiveness of a community, and so to its prosperity. It is a good sign—a sign of a happy, industrious, contented household within. It is an inspiration—to neighbors, to passersby, and especially to the children it shelters, whose whole lives are greatly influenced by surroundings in childhood. And it means the outlay of very little cash—good judgment and a small amount of persistent effort are the main requirements. Try it.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

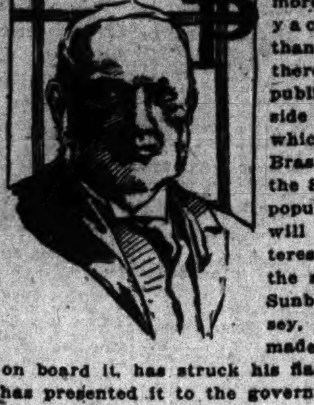
[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood company.]



PROBABLY there is no more celebrated steam yacht in existence than the Sunbeam, and there is assuredly no public library on this side of the Atlantic in which the late Lady Brassey's "Voyage of the Sunbeam" is not a popular book. Many will therefore be interested to learn that the aged owner of the Sunbeam, Lord Brassey, now over 80, has made his last voyage on board it, has struck his flag at Bombay, and has presented it to the government of India for use as a hospital ship.

Lord Brassey is at Bombay for the purpose of staying with his son-in-law, Lord Willingdon, who is governor of Bombay, Lady Willingdon being the "Marie" who is referred to so often in the pages of "The Voyage of the Sunbeam" by its author, her mother, the late Lady Brassey.

The only occasion when the boat was out of Lord Brassey's possession was during the few weeks in 18899, when he lent it to the late Lord Tennyson, the poet laureate, for a cruise in home waters.

Since the beginning of the present war Lord Brassey has been using the Sunbeam for convalescent officers in carrying the wounded back from France to England during the first few months of the campaign, while from the spring of last year until December he was engaged in carrying hospital stores to the Dardanelles and in conveying sick and wounded from the field of operations at Gallipoli to the hospitals at Malta and Alexandria. Too old to fight, Lord Brassey determined to serve his country in this fashion, and has done so, regardless of inconvenience and fatigue, in the most whole-souled fashion.

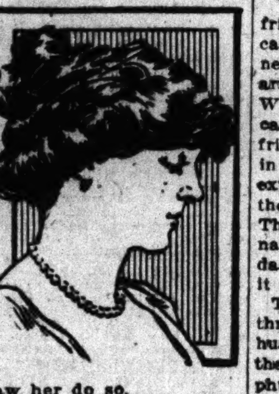
The present Lady Brassey is the old earl's second wife and is a sister of Lord Essex. The former Lady Brassey, and whose memory is more particularly identified with the Sunbeam as the author of the book on the subject, disappeared from the yacht in the most mysterious fashion in 1887 while on a voyage from Bombay to Melbourne.



She left Lord Brassey and her children on deck after luncheon, announcing that she was going down to her stateroom for a siesta, was seen to disappear down the companionway, and was never seen again. She was in perfect health and good spirits at the time, the Indian ocean was as smooth as a mirror, and it was broad daylight. She must have jumped overboard. Yet no one saw her do so.

No mention of the Sunbeam would be complete without a brief reference to another mystery of the Indian ocean. One day when the yacht was on its way from Melbourne to Bombay and a thousand miles from any land, outside the ordinary steamship lanes, the sea being without a ripple, a beautiful toy boat, schooner rigged, was seen floating idly by. Lord Brassey had the Sunbeam stopped, a boat lowered, and the little schooner brought on board.

It was one of those boats such as children are accustomed to sail on the waters of Central park in New York or on the Hyde Park Serpentine in London. Although there was no trace of its maker, it was evident from the cut of its jib that it was an English toy boat. How it ever came to be sailing on the Indian ocean at that distance from land proved a mystery which Lord Brassey never has been able to solve. It now occupies a conspicuous place in the wonderful museum at his house in Park lane, London.

Lord Brassey is the son of a self-made man, for his father, the late Thomas Brassey, started life as a navvy or laborer and died as a multimillionaire railroad contractor, leaving enormous fortunes to his three sons, of whom Lord Brassey was the eldest. Old Tom Brassey was a delightful man, without an atom of affectation, who used to be fond of reminding his wife of how when he was a boy, absolutely starving, at Liverpool, and unable to find any work, she, touched by his misery, had bought him a meal from the pennies which she was earning as a barefooted little girl selling matches. The acquaintance thus begun developed into friendship and culminated in a singularly happy marriage.

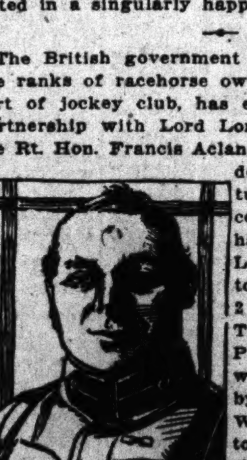
The British government has now lined up in the ranks of racehorse owners and, becoming a sort of jockey club, has entered into a racing partnership with Lord Lonsdale. According to the Rt. Hon. Francis Acland, who represents the department of agriculture in the house of commons, the cabinet has arranged with Lord Lonsdale to lease to him several of the 2 year olds from the Tully and Russley Park stud farms, which it has acquired by gift from Col. Hall-Walker, and they are to be entered for races this year and the next on the condition that Lord Lonsdale turns over to the government half of their winnings.



It is not yet decided whether the horses in question are to be run under Lord Lonsdale's colors or under those of the government. Just what racing colors the administration is going to adopt is unknown, but it has been suggested that they should be coalition colors.

The excuse given by the government for thus embarking in racing and for going into racing partnership with Lord Lonsdale is that racing is necessary for the testing and establishment of the stamina required of horses used as sires for stud purposes. Mr. Acland in furnishing this information to the house of commons was subjected to a considerable amount of chaff and banter, the more so as he is serious and is known to entertain a profound horror for racing, which, as he explained to the house, he regarded as "a very low form of sport."

This is the first stud farm owned by the British government, whereas in France the system of stud horse breeding was established as far back as in 1639 and has continued to this day. In fact, in France there are six great government stud farms, with twenty-five stallion depots and 4,000 sires, maintained by the state for breeding purposes, the money needed for the purpose being derived partly from the returns of these stud farms and partly from the "pari-mutuels" and "totalisers" on the French racecourses.

MALADY PERILS IN MEXICO.

THE climate of Mexico is determined by the altitude rather than by the latitude. The northernmost portion is south of the frost belt. On the other hand, in the southernmost state there are elevations on which there are ice and snow at times. The land has three climates. Running south from the United States there is a narrow strip along the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific ocean which the Mexicans know as the tierra calientes, or hot country. Along this strip the temperature rarely goes below 60. The mean temperature is 72 to 82. In summer time the temperature frequently goes to 100 and sometimes to 104 and even higher.

Inland the elevation divides into the tierra temptadas and tierra frias. The elevation of the tierra temptadas varies from 3,000 to 6,000 feet. The mean temperature is 62 to 70. The temperature of this section is nearly the same summer and winter. The elevation of the tierra frias is over 6,000 feet. The mean temperature is 59 to 63.

The rainy season in Mexico starts in the latter part of May and lasts until October. The rainfall varies greatly. In the highlands of northern Mexico it is about twelve inches and in places even less. In the City of Mexico it is about thirty inches. In the hot country the rainfall is very heavy. In the city of Vera Cruz the number of rainy days varies from 64 to 108 and the rainfall from twenty-seven to sixty-six inches. Two-thirds of the total year's rainfall occurs in June, July, and September.

Seventy-five per cent of the population lives in the tierra frias, 15 per cent in the tierra temptadas, and 7 to 10 per cent in the tierra calientes. The population is distributed as follows: Whites, 19 per cent; mixed, 43 per cent; Indians, 38 per cent.

Villa has always lived in the tierra frias. Rarely has he carried any of his campaigns into the tierra temptadas and never has he had personal direction of any armies fighting in the tierra calientes. We can safely say that the campaign to capture him will be waged in the tierra frias. The United States troops engaged in this campaign will not be subjected to extraordinary health hazards. Much the greatest hazard will be typhus fever. The danger from this disease, under ordinary circumstances, will be less than the danger from bullets, but it is possible that it may be much greater.

Typhus fever is spread everywhere throughout Mexico. The cities of Chihuahua and Torreon and the country between them and around them are a hotbed of typhus. In 1911, when the Diaz troops surrendered to the Madero forces at Juarez and the Red Cross corps were given a chance to visit the troops, it was found that typhus abounded in both armies. Since that time outsiders have had few opportunities to look behind the scenes. They have always found typhus present. It has been with considerable difficulty that typhus has been kept out of American cities along the Rio Grande.

Tyhpus is spread by the bite of lice. To prevent the spread of typhus, the body must be kept free from lice. To do this there must be facilities for bathing the skin and hair with preparations of kerosene, or gasoline, or some other preparation capable of killing lice. There must be facilities for killing the lice in the clothing. There must be facilities for bathing. Possibly it is wise to vaccinate with typhus vaccine.

This seems easy enough, but there are practical difficulties. Two months ago a commission to fight typhus went into Mexico from the United States. Two of the physicians in that expedition contracted the disease, one dying. Dr. Ricketts, who discovered the relation of lice to the spread of typhus, died of the disease. The American commission which went into the Balkans to control typhus in the Balkan armies succeeded in eradicating the disease, but we must remember that in spite of their efforts the disease put the armies out of commission for several months.

If our troops are to be spared infection by this disease it will be because the commanding officers recognize the menace and give their medical officers the fullest support.

There is plenty of typhoid fever in the parts of Mexico in which the campaigning is to be done. Under ordinary circumstances the troops would have to pay a heavy toll to typhoid. Most of the country through which they will go is very poorly watered. The people are compelled to drink any water they can get. The towns are built with reference to the supply of water. Most of the water is polluted. A Mexican general has warned the American commanders that they are to keep out of the Mexican cities and towns. It is difficult to see how that can be managed in certain parts of the country, since the only water is that in or by the towns.

The danger from typhoid should prove of little consequence. The army of the Rio Grande has been free from typhoid fever for five years. Never before in the history of the world has an army been so free from typhoid. All of the soldiers of that army are vaccinated and therefore immune to typhoid. There is some danger that among the recruits rushed into Mexico there may be some, and perhaps a considerable number, who have not been vaccinated against typhoid. If so, there will be trouble. In the Cuban war we made about the worst typhoid record ever heard of. There will be nothing like that this time, but we will not escape some typhoid.

In spite of the splendid organization of the armies fighting in central Europe a certain proportion of the troops have not been vaccinated against typhoid and in consequence that disease is exacting a small toll.

Smallpox is always everywhere present, or nearly so, in Mexico. Our troops will be brought into contact with it. Vaccination against smallpox is obligatory in the army. Theoretically our soldiers will be in no danger from the disease. Practically, under the stress of war, or what amounts to war, the machinery is liable to break at isolated points. Some unvaccinated soldiers will slip by. Some vaccination with impotent vaccine will be done. It happened at least once among troops sent to the Philippines soon after 1898. It is likely to happen in Mexico.

There is some danger from malaria. Generally speaking, the plateaus of Mexico are not malarial, but there are exceptions. Dr. Chico, the health officer of Guanajuato, says that in his city "malaria is one of the more frequent complaints met with." Guanajuato is in the tierras frias. Before 1882 malaria was mild in its manifestations and not frequent in occurrence. Since that date things have altered and malaria has become more frequent and of a more serious nature. You all know that the Mexican territory is an immense table land, flanked by two narrow strips of coast, and that on account of its altitude above sea level that table land, though within the tropics, is practically not tropical. Formerly—that is, before 1882—for the state of Guanajuato, communication with the coast where the climate is decidedly tropical was slow to a degree. It required a week to get from Guanajuato to the nearest point of coast. Now an average of thirty hours is the time needed for it. Railroads have brought nearer to one another the coast and the highlands, and malaria has increased apace with the railroad net; 1882, the year when malaria began to change for the worse, is the year in which the state of Guanajuato was tapped by the railroads."

Dr. Chico relates that a carload of bananas carried the mosquitoes from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico. In this way the City of Mexico became infested with mosquitoes. Through traffic and travel other portions of the cold country have been infested with mosquitoes and infected with malaria.

In spite of these opinions from a health officer of reputation, malaria cannot be regarded as one of the major hazards of this excursion against Villa. Some of the soldiers will be infected, no doubt, but the number should not be great.

The danger from yellow fever is very slight. In 1910 Dr. Liceago, head of the national board of health, reported: "Yellow fever has not presented itself in Vera Cruz since Feb. 11, 1909, but isolated cases still exist in the state of Yucatan. These daily become less frequent and were reduced to the city of Merida, and some small towns in the state. But from Dec. 20, 1909, not a single case of yellow fever has been observed either in the state of Yucatan or in any other part of the Mexican republic. The sanitary service is not directing its energies especially against malaria. This disease we hope to extinguish within the near future."

In the fall of 1910 there was yellow fever in Campeche, and in 1911 in Yucatan. In 1912 Dr. Liceago reported two small outbreaks, one in Yucatan and the other in Tabasco. It appears that during the last seven years there has been no yellow fever anywhere in the republic except in two states far to the south of the City of Mexico. There is no chance that the United States troops will follow Villa into any yellow fever infected portion of Mexico if any part of the republic is infected. Our expedition is in no danger from yellow fever.

Bowles, in his report on sanitation of the city of Vera Cruz, says: "Dysentery is the principal disease to fight in the army." In Vera Cruz during the five months before the American occupation there was an average of twenty-seven deaths a year from dysentery. However, the death rate from dysentery is not a fair index of the importance of the disease.

Dysentery keeps soldiers in the hospital, on sick call, and invalided home. It is of importance because it disables rather than because it kills. Bowles tells us that when the soldiers and marines landed in Vera Cruz many were suffering from dysentery. Some of the cases were due to amoeba and some to bacilli. Other cases developed during the occupation. However, the disease was held in check.

Bowles says: "The great reduction and control of dysentery shows the results of the efficiency of the general sanitary measures instituted to prevent it. The anti-fly campaign is probably the most important. This was brought about by the proper collection and burning of all garbage, street cleanings, and manure screening of foodstuffs, city meat, and fish markets, also the disinfection and isolation of all dysentery cases; fly traps around where food was sold."

Tropical Hygiene gives the following as the measures necessary to prevent dysentery: Boil all water and milk. Eat no raw vegetables or raw fruit.

Dysentery will be an important menace to our expeditionary force.

There will be some danger from plague and perhaps a little from kala azar. It is certain that plague is spread by rat fleas. It is possible, or perhaps a bit more than possible, that kala azar is spread by bedbugs. We learn that our troops are not to be allowed in cities and towns. This has its compensations. One is that the slight danger from plague and the slighter danger from kala azar will be lessened.

There is a general understanding that venereal diseases are exceptionally rife in Mexico. I do not know what is the basis of the opinion. Dr. Huici of Mexico City reports that of 10,888 cases of sickness in prostitutes in the federal district, 7,778 were cases of venereal disease. Bowles reports that in Vera Cruz there are 300 licensed prostitutes and 1,200 who are not licensed. Two per cent of the former and 4 per cent of the latter were found to have venereal disease, presumably in an actively contagious stage. In addition to these professionals, there are the clandestines, about 90 per cent of whom—that is, among those examined—were found to have actively contagious venereal disease.

For several years the noneffective rate from venereal disease in the army has been going down rapidly. The probability is that this expedition may stop the improvement for the time.

The tierras frias has a reputation for pneumonia. When the well to do inhabitants contract pneumonia they get to the coast if it is possible. Pneumonia is exceptionally fatal with them. I have known well informed Mexicans traveling overland to sleep in the open air rather than run the risk of pneumonia from sleeping in the interior of Mexican huts.

As our soldiers are to be in the open practically all of the time and as the campaign is to be conducted in the spring and summer, the pneumonia hazard will not be great.

All in all, the dangers from disease to our expeditionary force will not be great. They are not headed for any such disasters as those which befell the American army in 1898 or to the Serbian army a year ago. The dangers are not to be compared to those to which the American army was subjected in 1848.

WILL NOT USE MACHINE AT NIGHT.

Chicago, March 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—At the East Thirty-ninth street pumping station they have installed a new machine for incinerating ashes to save the hauling of them. The result is that the ashes are pulverized and blown with the steam all over the neighborhood. The steam alone is a great nuisance. The noise is horrible and tenants and boarders are threatening to leave. The machine works at all hours up to 12 o'clock at night. R. P. B.

Chief Engineer G. M. Wisner of the sanitary district says that the ash conveyor is of the most up to date type. The apparatus will doubtless work with less noise after it has been in use a while. Instructions have been given that it shall not be used at night.
WILLIS O. NANCE,
Chairman City Council Anti-Noise Subcommittee.

WALLER AVENUE PAVING.

Chicago, March 27.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise why Waller avenue in Austin has not been paved and when it is likely to be. It is by far the worst cross street between Austin and Laramie avenues.
C. W. PORTER,
5959 Race avenue.

Waller avenue, from Madison street to South boulevard, was paved with asphalt last year. It is expected that Waller avenue, from Lake street to Chicago avenue, will be paved next summer. [The case will soon be tried.] This portion of the street will also be paved with asphalt.
EDWARD J. GLACKIN,
Secretary.

OWNER MUST REPAIR GUTTER.

Chicago, March 27.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Next door to me is a cottage and the gutter is all rusty and full of holes which let the water pour down on my sidewalk every time it snows or rains and it soaks into my basement. What can be done to make the owner put a new gutter on this cottage?
M. J. LUCEY, 2741 Monroe street.

An inspection was made and notice served to properly repair roof gutter on east side of the building.
JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

PAVE MONROE STREET THIS SUMMER.

Chicago, March 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Can you advise me when Monroe street, west of Cicero avenue, will be paved?
L. C. HARNETT, 4828 West Monroe street.

Monroe street, between Cicero and Laramie avenues, will be paved during the summer. The Standard Paving company has the contract for the work. The pavement will be asphalt.
EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary.

DIVIDING AN ESTATE.

Chicago, March 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A father died leaving property and no will, also a wife and children. The wife was appointed administratrix. According to the laws of the state of Illinois, how and when is the estate to be settled? X. Y. Z.

Your question as to "how and when" the estate in question is to be settled is a little vague as to meaning. If by how you mean the method of division of the estate—the widow will take one-third of the personal property and a dower interest or a life interest in one-third of the real estate. If the real estate is occupied by her as a homestead she is entitled to a homestead right therein to the value of $1,000, and a sum decreed to her for the support of herself and children during the time the estate is being settled in the Probate court. She is also entitled to fees as administratrix of the estate. All the rest of the estate, after the payment of all just claims allowed against it, descends in equal shares to the children or their descendants.

An estate is supposed to be closed up within a year after the granting of letters testamentary and admission to probate.

MARRIAGE WOULD NOT BE LEGAL.

Oak Park, Ill., March 27.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I was divorced in the state of Illinois in May of last year. I would like to marry next month. If I go to Indiana to be married will my marriage be considered legal in Illinois? If I did so and returned to Illinois to live would I be subject to arrest, and would my marriage be considered void? G. V. B.

Unless you remarry the man from whom you secured the divorce in Illinois, you cannot contract a marriage that is legal in the state of Illinois in less than a year after the entry of your decree of divorce. The fact that you go to Indiana to evade the Illinois law will not avail you, and such a marriage, upon your return to Illinois, will be held absolutely void.

CHILDREN SHARE IN MOTHER'S ESTATE.

Chicago, March 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—In a case where the mother dies, having married the second time, do her children receive her share from the stepfather at his death? He also has children by his first wife. There are no children by the second marriage. C. D. E.

The stepchildren do not receive any share in the stepfather's estate upon his death, but do receive their child's share of their mother's estate upon her death.

GONE, BUT NOT FORGOTTEN.

Springfield, Ill., March 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Since and during the days when the great editor, Joseph Medill, directed the course of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE I have been a daily TRIBUNE reader. Up to the last several months I have regarded its news and its usual treatment of general topics as good. Not so any longer. THE TRIBUNE has degenerated, both as to its editorial policies and news.

Inconsistency on the part of THE TRIBUNE in its editorial and news columns is deplorable. In one column of THE TRIBUNE of March 16 it said in big, black type that it would be one or more weeks before the American troops would be doing anything in Mexico. On the same page there appeared the statement that the American troops were already in Mexico, and that Carranza was aiding the American soldiers. This is only one sample of a kind that appears almost daily in THE TRIBUNE since the daily prevaricator, Arthur Sears Henning, and others of the same kind have been writing for your paper.

I am an American. I love and revere our great and good American government, founded and maintained by Washington, Jefferson, Decatur, Lincoln, and our patriotic fathers. As an American I do not care to read THE TRIBUNE any more. Its efforts to supplant the United States government and establish in its stead a military oligarchy for the rich and their interests is absolutely un-American, and worse, against which every lover of his country should and will protest. Please discontinue my subscription for THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE.
EDW. L. MERRITT.

PAY DAY COMING.

Peoria, Ill., March 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I wish to congratulate you on the consistent, manly, and patriotic stand you have taken on the European controversy, the Mexican situation, and the question of preparedness. In the next general election I do not believe that our countrymen will be slow to rebuke Democratic insolence and incompetency. The shame of it is that many Republican senators and congressmen have shown no more vision and patriotism in dealing with the question of preparedness than have the Democrats.

Millions in American property have already been destroyed in Mexico. Hundreds of innocent American lives have already been forfeited, and yet congress and the president vacillate and procrastinate. Each day brings the dark clouds of war nearer. If it cannot now be averted, and I do not believe that it can, we will pay dearly in money and men for our past indifference and folly.
A. T. COMPTON.

GERMANY AND MEXICO.

Chicago, March 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In a recent editorial you say: "We began at Vera Cruz, to go back no further. We began by informing Americans that they would not be protected in Mexico, by ordering them to surrender their property to looters and to escape across the border if they could.

"We began by surrendering the principle, sacred to every important nation, that peaceable people of our nationality must be secure in their lives and their property rights wherever they might be, whether it were in Tibet, Morocco, the south Pacific islands, Mexico, or elsewhere."

As I understand it, you favor defending the above principle and protecting our rights in Mexico. Tell me, would you advise surrendering the same principle in our controversy with Germany? Surely you cannot hope to gain much honor and glory by being aggressive with Mexico because it is weak and yielding to Germany because it is strong. J. F. [illegible]

WELL, IT'S SOMETHING TO BE THAT.

Urbana, Ill., March 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your recent editorials on congress are to be [illegible] in the most emphatic way possible. They are no longer ridiculous; they are pathetic. Instead of supporting the administration in this crisis you [illegible] with your petty and sordid kind of politics.

Of course, your editorial policy ever since 1912 has been "wabbly." You began to denounce [illegible] intemperate language as you [illegible] be hurling against any group of congressmen who do not [illegible]. Fortunately, [illegible] whole, still possess some sense of moderation—both of which [illegible] known to you.

I think the remarks of a friend of mine sum up your case correctly. He said that the editorial columns of [illegible] were the best [illegible] country today.
G. N. NORTHRUP.

WHEN THE TRUTH PREVAILS.

Hopkinton, Ia., March 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial [illegible] Shameless Deliberative Body in the World" makes [illegible] therland more than ever. [illegible] stand fully why [illegible] placed by the [illegible] why no law was [illegible] icans to sail on belligerent [illegible] is a vast chasm between [illegible] and the American people [illegible] Mr. Works' and Mr. Bryan's [illegible] cerning the two [illegible]

WILSON DISMISSES TIRPITZ

By Edward Goldbeck

GRAND ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ has resigned. That is nothing to wonder at, one might say, as he is 65 and was a sick man before the war. But why shirk the facts? It has been a fact for about a year that the foreign office and the marine department did not agree. They even disagreed very bitterly. At the head of the foreign office there is Mr. Von Jagow, a descendant of one of the oldest Prussian families, a man of delicate constitution, reserved, cautious, a diplomatic chess player. The dictator of the marine department has been for fifteen years Alfred von Tirpitz, who was born as the son of a lawyer in a small Pomeranian town, no Junker, a giant, frank mannered, breezy, a creator. (Personal antagonisms have their part in politics: Russia would have fared better at the congress of Berlin if Bismarck had not detested Gortschakoff. In 1866 and 1870 Bismarck was at loggerheads with the "demigods," as he called the members of the general staff.) What Roon under William I. did for the Prussian army Tirpitz under William II. did for the German navy. So his resignation is a date of importance. American papers call Tirpitz the father of the campaign of "frightfulness," and they use signs of quotation to insinuate that the expression was "made in Germany." I do not think it was, and, anyhow, the theory is not originally or exclusively German. Some quotations may show that:

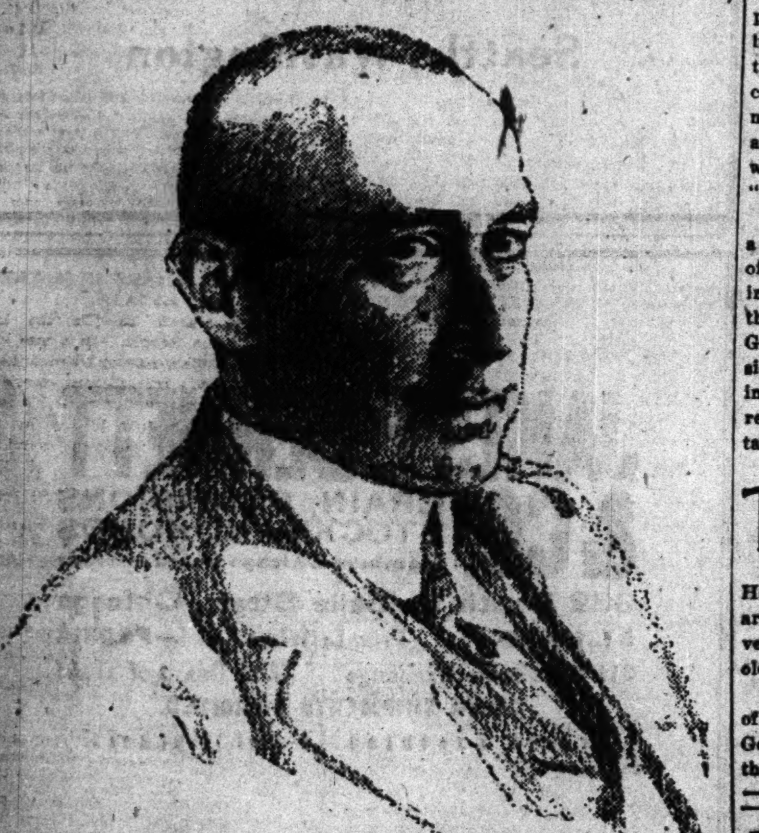
ABOUT 250 years ago Lord Albemarle, Cromwell's admiral, when a reason was to be found for a renewed attack on the Hollanders, said: "Any reason will do. What we need is a portion more of the commerce which Holland has now."

The London Saturday Review of September, 1897: "If Germany were extinguished tomorrow, the day after tomorrow there is not an Englishman in the world who would not be the richer." And, starting from this very assailable statement, the Review reached the conclusion of old Cato that the new Carthage ought to be destroyed.

Sir Arthur Lee, the civil lord of the admiralty, in a public speech on Feb. 3, 1905: "If, unfortunately, it should come to a war, the English fleet could, properly stationed, deal the first blow, before the other party will have time to read in the newspapers that war has been declared."

Lord Roberts in his preface to the book, "The Peace of the Anglo-Saxons": "It cannot be too clearly stated that international law is no protection except to the strong, and that the only laws which great powers recognize as binding are those of power and expediency. (p. 44.) . . . The worst error in war is a mistaken spirit of benevolence. It was not in such a spirit of weakness that we wrested the command of the sea from the Dutch, that we fought the great struggle against Napoleon or seized the Danish fleet at Copenhagen in 1807 to avert its possible use against us." (p. 48.)

Sapienti sat. This will be sufficient to any one who tries to be fair. The spirit of "frightfulness" is not originally and exclusively German; it is not originally and exclusively English. It would not be difficult to find French, Russian, Spanish utterances of the same kind, and, what is more conclusive, it would be easy to dig up historical facts which support the theory. It is the spirit of the strong, imperialistic nation. It is European, but not the invention of the Huns. Tirpitz is not the initiator, at the worst he would be an imitator.



Von Jagow

SO much for the theory: how about the practice? Mr. von Tirpitz, who has done more for the German navy than any other man, has done comparatively little for the submarine. In December, 1905, he grudgingly admitted that "it is important for certain narrowly limited purposes." A young retired officer of the marine, Mr. Persius, differed from the great expert. He said in the Berliner Tageblatt (1908): "In England one thinks that a blockade is impossible if the enemy has a considerable number of torpedoes and submarines. The fact that we are so much behind with submarines seems very serious to me. Our battleships will hardly have any opportunity for action against our presumptive adversary. Our only chance is in the attacks of torpedoes and submarines." In 1910 he said: "That the submarine will supplant the torpedo is only a question of time. If it is possible to build a fast vessel which can assail the enemy under water it would be nonsensical to do the same with a boat which must remain in sight."

Mr. Persius repeated again and again that the German navy in case of a war with Great Britain would be kept blockaded in the harbors and have no opportunity for a battle on the high seas. It might be better, he suggested, to build eighty or ninety submarines instead of one dreadnaught.

After the experts a layman to whose voice the world was wont to listen. In 1897 Bismarck said: "I believe that we need new cruisers, but I am very suspicious about parading warships, which serve only for purposes of prestige. No stinginess, but, on the other hand, no fantastic idea which will end by getting us into a quarrel with other people who are important for our international situation." A little later he repeated that "an un-German prestige policy and a hasty naval armament which could be interpreted as a symptom of enmity might create a coalition against us." Mr. von Tirpitz answered: "I know that battleships are not popular. It is difficult to make it clear that the battleship has to be a strong, big ship. If we get a navy as I am demanding it now then Germany will have a fleet against which even a naval power of first rank will hesitate very long to take the offensive near our coasts." In the official naval paper, Nauticus, he went on reiterating that battleships are the best means for defense.

So Tirpitz is not the originator of submarine tactics and it is probable that his successor will be just as much given to the tendency of "frightfulness," simply because it seems the only weapon against England. Whether Tirpitz or Persius was right cannot be decided till after the end of the war. The issue is of the highest interest for America, too. One thing is sure, that the German navy will fight. The Germans will prepare a combined attack in the air and on the sea, they will wait for the psychological moment and a good opportunity; perhaps they will wait very long, but they will fight.

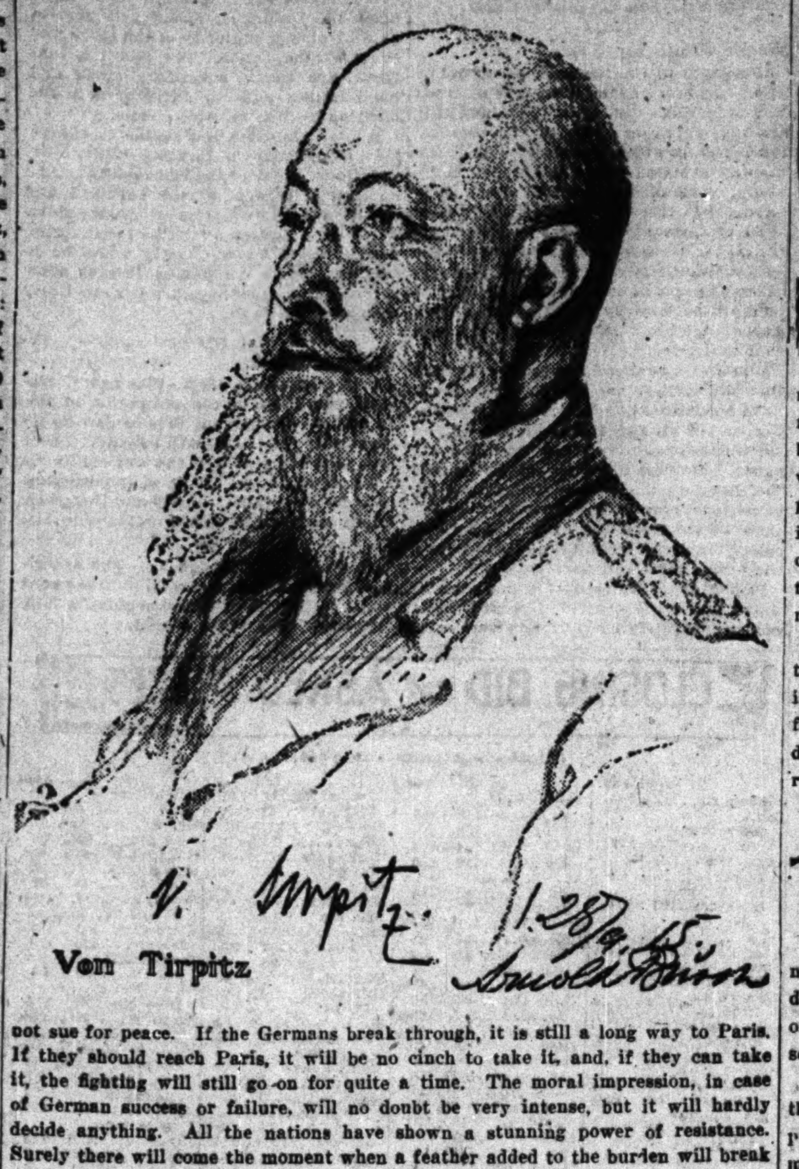
IS Tirpitz's "downfall," as the esteemed contemporaries put it dramatically, a sign of weakness, or is it due to the kaiser's moderation? One might call it a sign of weakness if there were other symptoms to corroborate the hypothesis. I cannot see any, but we must not forget that we know very little of the nervous condition of the belligerents. A sudden breakdown is possible in any of the warring nations. One idea is widely spread in this country which seems absolutely erroneous to me—i. e.: that Verdum means the beginning of the end.

Verdum, however the fight there will turn out, is an episode and nothing else. If the Germans are definitely repulsed they will not feel beaten and will not sue for peace. If the Germans break through, it is still a long way to Paris. If they should reach Paris, it will be no cinch to take it, and, if they can take it, the fighting will still go on for quite a time. The moral impression, in case of German success or failure, will no doubt be very intense, but it will hardly decide anything. All the nations have shown a stunning power of resistance. Surely there will come the moment when a feather added to the burden will break the back of the camel—but who can fix this moment?



v. Tirpitz. 1.28/9.15.

Von Tirpitz

The only fact which may be stated with safety is that the United States protects English very efficaciously. Mr. Wilson is granite toward Germany, biscuit toward England. If England tries to starve Germany, changes arbitrarily the rules of international law, seizes the American mails, damages American commerce, tout est pour le mieux dans le meilleur des mondes possibles. If Germany sinks ships which convey ammunition to England she commits a "crime" and indulges in "willful murder," and the Germans are expected not to interfere with American traveling, as there are some people in this country who like the "thrill" of the experience.

American neutrality, as Mr. Wilson interprets it, is a fake. The policy of a great country may be based on well weighed self-protection, but not on the art of blurring and muddling issues. That is a very dangerous game, apt to spoil intellect and character. I take it that I am prejudiced and beg leave to quote the New Republic of March 11, a magazine which can hardly be accused of pro-Germanism. There we read: "Mr. Wilson has ranged the United States on the side of the mistress of the seas. He has thrown the national interests of America into the balance in the way most calculated to maintain British sea power. He remains technically neutral, but the import and the consequences are unmistakable."

THE Americans of German origin are very patient. They have done nothing to prevent Mr. Wilson from being reëlected. They are not thinking of organizing themselves against a policy which endangers the future of America and Germany. And a famous professor, Hugo Münsterberg of Harvard, has even advised the German-Americans to vote for Mr. Roosevelt, arguing that nobody takes him seriously, and that therefore he would make a very good president. If somebody spits into our face we are told to smile benevolently and to declare that the rain will stop soon.

President Wilson has dismissed Tirpitz, and that is certainly a great success of English diplomacy; but the policy of "frightfulness" is no personal issue; Germany's strategy and tactics are prescribed by dire necessity which is stronger than the strongest monarch.

POLITICIANS AT WAR

(From the London Daily Mail.)

MR. OLIVER has rendered a national service by issuing a cheap edition of his famous book, "Ordeal by Battle," now in its twenty-fourth thousand. It is a perfectly calm, impartial examination of the conduct of British statesmen by a man who has always stood aloof from political controversy and who can be claimed neither by Liberals nor by Unionists. It is, in fact, such a verdict as posterity will one day render.

The present edition differs from its predecessors in that it contains an entirely new introduction of forty pages, which brings this penetrating study of our politicians up to date and completes the analysis of the methods by which Mr. Asquith makes war. As a typical instance, the Gallipoli campaign is cited:

> A certain project is undertaken upon a hasty impulse, in ignorance of its actual nature and without a thorough consideration of its probable consequences. . . . Not unnaturally things soon begin to go wrong. Then upon another hasty impulse the general plan is suddenly changed, with the result that things shortly take a further turn for the worse. Then, when the crisis is at its very height, when delay is fatal, when swift decision and resolute action alone can save the situation, the great importance of sitting down to deliberate is at last recognized. . . . Meanwhile we drift and drift.
> The current of events carries us past one possible landing place after another until at last—in a panic lest we be carried out to open sea—we run the boat upon the rocks and congratulate ourselves upon the success of our expedition if we are lucky enough to escape drowning.

We have read of "the Nelson touch" which won victories; future historians may tell of "the Asquith touch" which invited failure.

To such misfortune had "the Asquith touch" habituated the British nation that the news of a safe retreat was received with almost as much joy as victory:

> This is perhaps the most tragic aspect of the whole affair. England had been dragged by her politicians to so low a depth that she was prepared to accept and even to welcome the consummation of an unparalleled and humiliating failure. For all those sunken ships, for all that loss of life, for all that suffering and incalculable waste of money and material what was there to show? . . . Nothing. For all that eagerness and courage of youth poured out ungrudgingly, what? . . . Nothing. Nothing whatever.
> . . . . . . . . . . .

And this is traced to the bad judgment and indecision of our politicians. As Mr. Oliver reminds the nation:

> Many of them are now in office engaged in conducting a war (which they had pronounced beforehand to be inconceivable) with exactly that measure of success which it was reasonable to expect. None of them has withdrawn into penitential seclusion. Their foreheads of brass still gleam in the Westminster tournament.

The multitude of field graves, the packed hospital wards, the list of casualties (of which 210,000, including cases of sickness, were incurred in the tragically unsuccessful Dardanelles expedition), bear testimony alike to the foresight and economies of our rulers before the war and their capacity in the conduct of the struggle.

While the ministers continue to be entirely pleased with themselves, the country, Mr. Oliver thinks, is in a very different humor:

> The greater part of the press has been telling the country for the last eighteen months to trust the government. The country has tried very hard to do this and it has failed. It feels that there is something very wrong at the top.

The reasons for its distrust are the government's delays and want of frankness. And the remedy for the unhappy position is simply to act on Bagehot's principle, replace the pilot of the calm by the pilot of the storm. It is admitted even by the politicians that unsuccessful soldiers may properly be removed—and blamed. Even Sir John Simon has accepted that doctrine.

But if soldiers may be punished for blunders, why not [asks Mr. Oliver innocently] also politicians?

And it is, he thinks, vital to remove blunderers at the top:

> If the highest command of all is right, the high commands in every sphere will speedily become right, even if they have not been so at the beginning. . . . If the highest command of all is not right . . . then the high commands in every sphere will remain wrong or will become wrong very speedily. . . . For reasons which are sufficiently obvious muddlers are always very timid of getting rid of muddlers; blunder keeps blunder in countenance, and indecision calls to indecision.

He dismisses as fatuous nonsense the pretext that there is no alternative government:

> When a surgeon has to deal with a case of paralysis and finds that the mischief is caused by a bony growth which is pressing on the brain, he proceeds at once to remove the bony growth; he does not stop to ask himself "What am I to put in its place?" And we are dealing now with the paralysis of a nation.
> There is always an alternative government, though it may not become clearly visible till the old one has disappeared. How can we see the sun till the fog is blown away?

BUILDING A HOME

By Robert Herrick

MUCH building has been going on along the city street where I live. All during the autumn and winter lofty apartment buildings have been shooting up with a rapidity that is marvelous. A few weeks ago some shabby brick buildings were being scooped into dump carts, revealing a cellar hole in which steam drills became busy cutting away at the solid rock underneath. Already some of these new undertakings have been draped six or seven stories high in brick or stone, while the steel frames are climbing on spiderlike into the heavens. Shadows begin to fall across the broad avenue where once there was sun all day long. The street is a rivulet of noisy traffic between two high walls.

The lightning change process of modern construction in these new buildings has fascinated me. The gang of rock drillers had hardly left the premises before the steel erectors arrived; great metal trusses were dumped alongside the hole, and the song of the steel riveter began. While that still zipzipped like a giant locust there were dumped steel wires and bars, rough planking, and ashes and cement, out of which floors and partitions were made. Then came the bricks and the stone slabs for the building's skin, which were slapped on in layers as a sculptor rounds out his figure in clay. By this time the pipe men got ready to string all sorts of pipes from floor to floor; the electricians arrived, and the wooden window frames; and before one realized that the steel frame was done they were fastening on a copper cornice.

The steam plant was in place, the electric motors for the elevators lowered to their caves, and with glass sashes in the windows the outer building was finished and modestly closed to public view. A huge wooden sign decorated the façade: "Modern Apartments, Eighteen Rooms and Five Baths, etc.," with a diagram showing that nine-tenths of the twenty story building had already been rented to tenants!

THE extraordinary amount and variety of material required in close sequence within a few weeks' time suggests the incredible specialization and coördination of modern industry. In order not to lose time, which means interest on the investment, all these multiform activities must dovetail nicely without any delays. The steel must be designed, rolled, transported, and delivered on a certain close schedule. One realizes how complete the organization of modern industry has become. Strikes and delays in transportation must entail serious wastes.

Of course in this country there are many such avoidable wastes: we have the capacity but not the discipline for fine organization. We must all pay the price for lack of discipline in an increased cost of material, of rent. In like manner the allies found when they got well into the war business that their industrial machines were poorly organized for speedy, certain production. The English were too loose and careless, the French were not accustomed to doing things on a larger scale. Surely we should be better fitted in a like emergency. At last we know how it ought to be done, if we could control strikes and misunderstandings, if we could all pull together in an effort literally to "deliver the goods." The potentialities for a magnificent industrial organization lie within us.

THERE is the human instrument in all this building. I see the great gangs of laborers standing about, smoking and warming their hands over bonfires, on frosty mornings when I go by. Like this, in the early morning, they seem more human—joking each other in every tongue except English—than later in the day when they are shoving barrows of material, or lifting bags of cement, or fitting marked pieces of stone into place on the false front. Then they become so many claws in the giant labor machine. Mornings there is always a man with coarse cotton gloves to sell to the laborers. In the evening I see occasionally somewhat better dressed men, fat and prosperous looking, who hold whispered conversations with some of the dirty laborers as they come from the building. I take it that these sleeker citizens are officers of labor organizations, supervising the interests of labor. It would seem to be more profitable to organize labor than to labor with one's own hands.

During the day, while the building hums with work, energetic, red faced, big boned, youngish men drive up in motor cars and talk with the foremen: they may be the engineers, the architects, the superintendents of building—petty officers of the employing class. They seem to have a technical and practical knowledge of the intricate machine that is being set up—the modern home. Like all technically and practically equipped men, they give an impression of power and alertness, as if they knew very well the machine could not exist except for them.

THE building is a great nuisance for all those who have to use this street as a thoroughfare. I do not know what the laws of the city are in regard to obstructing streets and sidewalks with building operations, but if there are any regulations these builders of big buildings disregard them all shamelessly. The street itself is used as a convenient dumping ground and storage. Passage along the sidewalks is constantly interrupted by the stream of material going into the building. Either they are dumping something off a dray or a gang of laborers is pushing across the walk. The wooden tunnels built over the sidewalks, presumably to protect pedestrians from such annoyance, serve merely as excellent reservoirs for melting snow and filth, which trickle down on the passerby.

But these annoyances, these little impertinences with our liberties, are so common in our free, easy going country that nobody seems to think of objecting to them. Policemen lounge about, watching the building go up, chatting with the bosses, and never think of enforcing the laws, which would interfere with the enterprice of creating American homes on the large scale. That is not what they are paid for, as we say!

In a very short while this building will be finished and the obstructions will be moved farther up the avenue, to the next block selected by capital for similar exploitation. Then will come hither the movers with carloads of old and new furniture to be installed in the finished and highly decorated apartments. Then there will appear a number of gaudily uniformed men and boys to stand about the doorway to run for cabs, answer telephone calls, and attend to the elevators; and thus all the appurtenances of a first class, strictly modern apartment building will be installed. Last of all will arrive the new tenants to start the new homes. And thirty or forty American families will set up homes where only a few short months ago there was a mere hole in the ground.

FRANCE AND GERMANY

By Alphonse Aulard

Alphonse Aulard, professor of the history of the French revolution at the University of Paris and author of the "Histoire Politique de la Revolution Francaise," has made a career out of the defense of the tradition of the French revolution against the attacks of the reaction, notably of Taine. Since the opening of the war he has had a considerable calming influence on the more violent French opinion and has done much by his articles in the Parisian daily press to soothe useless, wasteful hatred and to direct French energy into more effective channels. He has stimulated the courage of citizens by bluntly telling them the truth about the military and diplomatic situation.

M. Aulard is widely known to American history students for his conviction that the French revolution came from America to France, so to speak. He attaches the greatest historical importance to the influence which our practical demonstration of violent revolution against absolutism in government had on the French liberal movement immediately preceding the outbursts of 1789. M. Aulard is a tremendous admirer of the United States and of Americans, whom he regards as the pure, uncorrupted liberals of the earth.

IS it true, as many Germans assert, that France hated Germany, thought of nothing but a war of revenge, and underhandedly prepared an attack, which Germany, thus menaced in her very existence, only anticipated?

No, it is not true.

If there are among the Germans who say this some who believe it, and if there are among the citizens of neutral countries some who accept this theory and thereby fall into error regarding the responsibility of the belligerents, it is because they have only a superficial knowledge of French affairs and the French spirit, because they mistake a few manifestations of individuals for an expression of our public opinion as a whole.

It is certain that immediately after the war of 1870-1871, which bled us and mutilated us, we felt hatred for German victors and conquerors. It is certain that at first the treaty of Frankfort was considered by us as only a truce document, and another war appeared to us to be rapidly inevitable.

But this hatred cooled off quickly, making place for a feeling of admiring astonishment at the powerful economic development of Germany; we even came to admire her philologists. The notion of almost immediate war came slowly to a point where it was put off indefinitely. Gambetta himself, the true chief of our national defense, the man who has stood out for a struggle to the bitter end, gave the example of resignation and awaited the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine as the fruit of peaceful negotiation only.

It was Germany who twice appeared to be seeking an excuse for attacking us; it was Germany's continual menaces and her enormous military development which obliged us to be ready for war against our will.

She forced us to prepare, too, by the tyrannical brutality with which she treated the inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine.

THE German annexation of Alsace-Lorraine, so threatening to the peace of the world, could have obtained a sort of voluntary resignation from the French people only under the condition that the conquered provinces should have been content under German rule. Now they are unhappy and their state of suffering was known to everybody. The odious stupidities of the Germans in Alsace-Lorraine have had almost as strong an influence as the act of annexation itself in making a cordial reconciliation between France and Germany impossible.

However, our love of peace was so strong that our intellectuals and our leaders of opinion came to avoid any expression which bore any relation to the possibility of an offensive war against Germany.

If I may speak of myself as an example, I remember that soon after the war, in which I had fought as a volunteer, I published a biography of Danton for the use of primary schools in which I proposed to the children for their civic motto the phrase of Danton, "Do all our disputes kill a single Prussian?" A few years later I cut the phrase out of a later edition, for I thought that we had got out of the danger of war into normal life again, and I hoped strongly that pacific measures would secure a just organisation of Europe.

Similarly our most important educational association, the Ligue de l'Enseignement, suppressed its motto, "By the Pen and by the Sword," which it had adopted immediately after the war.

Even the Nationalists, as we call our most burning patriots, contented themselves with not believing in the pacific intentions of Germany and with calling for increased armaments in order the better to protect ourselves. They wished that France should arm herself to the teeth against a possible German attack, especially during these last years. Never did they ask for a French attack against Germany.

The ardor with which these same Nationalists supported and developed France's colonial policy showed clearly that at bottom they did not wish to attack Germany. For the effort necessary to conquer and develop Tonkin, Tunis, Madagascar, and Morocco removed the possibility of a simultaneous preparation for the conquest of Germany, and at the same time these colonial successes, in satisfying national pride, made the memory of our humiliation of 1871 less bitter.

In reality French republicans came to put all their confidence and all their ardor into the spread of liberal and democratic ideas. They hoped that by creating in Europe an atmosphere of democracy they would little by little induce the establishment of free institutions in all the nations, so that war might be prevented and national injustices be repaired—the restoration or the independence of Alsace-Lorraine included—by the mere force of the functioning of these free institutions.

In short, we wished to establish in France a model democracy whose influence would win over, among other peoples, the Germans, influencing them to substitute a liberal, modern, and pacific government for their absolutist, old fashioned, warlike government.

AMONG French democrats the Socialists went so far as to believe that the German people were on the point of entering or had already entered into the democratic condition. Taking seriously certain speeches and certain acts of the German Socialists, they candidly believed that the Germans were at one with them to oppose, even by revolt, any war whatsoever, and even that these German Socialists would destroy the absolutism of the government of their own country.

The talks between French and German Socialists came to be frequent. The illusion of a German socialism as the brother of French socialism, the friend of peace at any price, the friend of France, capable of disobeying the kaiser in, so far as he might be inclined to make war, got control of even clear heads in France. Thus the leader of French Socialists, the strongest and most enlightened mind in French politics since Mirabeau, the late Jean Jaures, not only dreamed of a reconciliation with Germany but actually believed that such a rapprochement was practically realizable, and not far away, as he frequently told me himself.

It was not only the Socialists of France who showed their love of peace in conferring in a friendly spirit with the Germans, but even the republicans who were not Socialists did not hesitate to undertake such relations; in the spring of 1913 more than a hundred French parliamentarians conferred with some German representative legislators at Berne.

AS for the increase in our armaments, they were never undertaken except in answer to sudden and enormous German increases, as an indispensable, vital necessity, and always with the strongest hope that the increases would never be of any use.

Also, the insufficiency of our military preparation should not be attributed to any negligence or weakness, but, above all, to this illusion of ours that there would not be any war. Our lack of adequate military preparation, which has been such a bane to us, is only another proof of our pacific intentions.

Even during the critical days of the end of July, 1914, French opinion weighed on the government and influenced it not to precipitate a decision tending toward war, for France wanted peace, and not war, so profoundly, not from fear, but out of wisdom, that up to the very last moment she persisted in believing peace still possible.

France accepted war because it was imposed upon her, she could not have avoided war without dishonoring herself by accepting the odious crushing of Serbia, prelude to the crushing or subjugation of all the free nations, prelude to the tyrannical hegemony of Prussianized Germany. In accepting this war France felt herself to be the champion of the right of peoples to independence; she has accepted it with all her soul, and she will carry it through to the end, to the triumph of liberty over despotism, to the victory of the principles of the future over the principles of the past.

WHEAT FUTURES SCORE ADVANCE; PUBLIC BUYING

Crop News Is Bad, Stimulating Outside Support—Coarse Grains Higher.

The market Saturday was strong and buoyant most of the day, the crop news being mostly of a bullish character, while cables were steady, and there were indications of some improvement in the cash trade at the seaboard. The crop news at the present is being closely watched, with the market sensitive to any news confirming early reports of serious damage. Final prices were 1⅞@2c to 2½c higher.

There was a hesitating tone early, but commission houses were fair buyers, while the local professionals were apparently willing to stay on the bull side. The reports from Illinois, Indiana, and Oklahoma were decidedly bullish, and from parts of Missouri reports were bad. Inglis finds conditions bad in southwestern Ohio, and Le Count discovered poorest outlook so far in the Vandalia section of Illinois. With these reports apparently confirming damage claims of a serious kind there was steady buying.

Cash Sales Are Larger.

The cash prices here were strong. Omaha reported 100,000 bu taken for export and Winnipeg said exporters were good buyers of wheat there. Russell's of New York wired that government buying was expected to develop on a fair scale. Local cash sales were 225,000 bu. The Oklahoma report shows a drop in condition during March of 6 points, but late rains have improved the outlook to some extent. Good rains were shown by the weather map all through northern Texas, Oklahoma, southern Kansas, and Missouri. These rains are expected to improve the outlook materially. However, where wheat has started growing in many sections the outlook is still poor, the expected improvement not showing, according to many reports. A new feature was the Montana reports indicating serious losses to the winter wheat crop in that state. Weather is still cool in the Canadian northwest.

Cables Come Unchanged.

Cables were unchanged. Shipments for the week were disappointing and the spot market, while dull, were steadier than recently. No confirmation was received of political reports to effect Turkey was suing for peace. Receipts west were 1,050,000 bu and for the week were 7,160,000 bu, against 2,992,000 bu a year ago. Continued liberal receipts are expected in the spring wheat country. Northwest points had 376 cars, against 304 cars a year ago. Winnipeg receipts, 871 cars, against 627 cars a year ago. Clearances for the day were 1,026,000 bu, against 1,762,000 bu a year ago. Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 120,000 bu for one day.

Corn Has Big Rally.

Corn has been strong and fairly active, commission houses being good buyers, while local shorts have covered freely. Closing prices were ⅝@1c to 1c higher. Cash trade is fair and the local cash market was ¼@1c higher. Shipping sales were 70,000 bu. Cables were unchanged, with the spot market at Liverpool neglected. The export inquiry was reported moderate. Receipts here were 86 cars and primary receipts were 599,000 bu, with 4,604,000 bu for the week, against 2,001,000 bu a year ago. A smaller movement from the country is expected. Weather conditions were unsettled, with a good deal of rain over the belt. Clearances for the day were small at 2,000 bu. Bartlett-Frazier and Kemper were good buyers of corn. Wagner, Martin, and locals were fair buyers. Strength in wheat was a factor. Outside markets were firm as a rule.

Firmer Tone in Oats.

Oats were in fair demand, the buying being stimulated by the strength in other grains. Closing prices were ⅛c to ¼@⅜c higher. The cash market was ¼c up. Offerings were moderate and sales were 110,000 bu. Oats condition in Oklahoma is lower than a year ago and there is some complaint of late seeding in this state. Receipts were 96 cars and primary receipts were 4,305,000 bu for the week, against 4,449,000 bu a year ago. Clearances for the day were 290,000 bu. Commission houses have been good buyers of oats.

Provisions have been strong. The hog receipts were smaller than expected at 6,000, with prices at the yards 10@15c higher. The estimate of 135,000 for next week was smaller than looked for. The strength in the grain list also was a factor. Shorts were fair buyers. Receipts for Monday were estimated at 36,000. Western receipts for the week were 496,500, compared to 540,000 the previous week and 449,000 a year ago. The cash trade is only moderately active.

Rye Market Steady.

Rye was steady with sales of No. 2 at [illegible] and No. 4, 88c. Receipts were 11 cars.

Barley ruled strong. Malting was quoted 70@77c and sold 71@74c; feed was quotable at 60@65c and sold 65c; mixing was quoted 65@67c and screenings 45@50c, the latter selling at 53@55c. Receipts, 34 cars.

Timothy seed was steady. Cash lots were quoted at $4.50@6.00 nominal. Clover seed ruled steady with cash lots $10.00@17.00 nominal.

Duluth flax closed ⅛@⅜c lower. Cash on track, $2.17@2.18; May and July, $2.18. Receipts, 5 cars. Minneapolis was ½c lower with cash on track, $2.18@2.21¼. Receipts were 17 cars. Winnipeg closed steady to ½c lower. May, $1.95½ and July, $1.97½. Receipts, 25 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

The cash trade in wheat was moderate. The demand was a little better in the northwest, according to late reports. Winnipeg wired that exporters were good buyers of wheat there. Prices here were steady relatively and there is still difficulty in buying wheat, according to export brokers. Receipts continue quite liberal. Cash corn was ½@1c higher and oats were ¼c up. The demand for the coarse grains was fairly good. Offerings from the country are moderate of both corn and oats. Seaboard reports indicate fair export inquiry for oats and considerable business is understood to be going on in Canadian oats. Cash sales were 25,000 bu wheat, mainly for export; 75,000 bu corn, and 110,000 bu oats.

Liverpool reports failed to confirm the rumors that Turkey was making peace with Russia or that Russia had made any contracts for late spring shipment to England via the Dardanelles. Some grain men abroad do not think it will make much difference for a time whether the Dardanelles are opened or not, as the Russian stocks are not heavy and tonnage is scarce, with railroads in Russia congested.

LeCount wired Barrell from Vandalia, Ill.: "From Decatur here wheat acreage not large but crop is worst yet seen. Fully 40 per cent is lost, some wheat fields being prepared for oats and many more will be plowed up later. Only earliest sown wheat looks good. Corn and oats acreage will be greatly increased in Illinois this season."

Montana reports were bullish. Winter wheat crop was said to be half gone and that farmers are buying spring wheat to reseed. Montana raised a big crop of both spring and winter wheat last year, the state having about 34,000,000 bu, of which 15,000,000 bu was winter wheat.

The Oklahoma report as wired by King of Toledo makes condition of winter wheat 67, against 73 last month and 86 a year ago. Oats condition is 75, against 81 a year ago. Corn acreage promises about 4 per cent more than last year. Farm reserves April 1: Wheat, 3,000,000; corn, 33,000,000 bu, and oats, 6,500,000 bu.

John Inglis wired Logan-Bryan from Columbus, O.: "North from Circleville wheat falls down again. As a rule, stand thin; poor growth; fields spotted. Unless there is decided improvement in immediate future about 20 per cent of acreage may be abandoned."

George E. Catheart, Donald Edwards, and Edward A. Crawford made application for memberships on the board of trade, while James A. Edwards posted his membership for transfer.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 247 cars; corn, 86 cars; oats, 96 cars; rye, 11 cars; barley, 34 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 36,000 head, and for all next week, 135,000 head.

Cables from Liverpool were steady, the foreigners being disappointed in the amount of wheat shipped from Australia and Argentina.

With weather conditions favorable the outlook is for good sized increase in corn and oats acreage this year.

According to advices to B. W. Snow the Kansas wheat prospect is for a crop of 105,000,000 bu.

Late New York reports indicated considerable export business in wheat.

Omaha reported 100,000 bu wheat taken for export, and inquiry for more.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 20,000 bu for one day.

Hog receipts were posted at only 5,500 head and sellers asked 10@20c higher than on Friday for all offerings. Most of the big packers refused to follow the upturn and the trade was dull at the advance, as holders locked up their offerings rather than sell at any reduction from the high prices put in force at the outset. Fresh receipts included 1,100 hogs direct to Armour and the day's trade was largely confined to hogs left over from earlier in the week, as fully 7,000 head remained unsold at the finish. Top sales were at $9.55 and the bulk at $9.40@9.50.

Final prices made hogs 30@40c lower than a week ago and pigs 25@35c lower. The average price of hogs here this week was placed at $9.60, against $9.65 last week, while the day's average was down to $9.46, compared with $9.81 a week ago.

CATTLE.

An increase of approximately 5,000 head in cattle receipts at Chicago this week was sufficient to turn the trend of values in favor of buyers, and prices finished the week at a net decline of 25@50c from last week's final figures. While cattle costs were reduced, retail and wholesale prices of dressed beef were maintained on a steady level, and packers accumulated generous reserves of beef of all grades. This places them in a position where they can keep control of the cattle market, unless the movement of live stock the coming week shows material decrease. Shipping outlet this week was disappointing, and the outward movement of live cattle showed a decrease, in spite of the reduced values and the increased offerings. Steers, cows, and heifers were affected by the decline, which was in full force after the midweek session. Calves came in for a restricted demand throughout the week and closed at a net loss of $1.50. Best steers topped at $10.00, while the bulk made $8.50@9.65. Calves closed with prime vealers quoted down to $8.50.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 140,000, against 132,300 the preceding week, 113,100 a year ago, and 107,000 two years ago. Total for the year to date, 1,940,000, against 1,666,000 the same period last year.

SHEEP.

Sheep closed the week unchanged at 25c lower than a week ago, although prime yearlings were fully steady, with a band of Colorados selling late in the week at $10.75, the highest price on record. Lambs finished the week at a decline of 25@50c, with the bulk showing a loss of 30@40c. Receipts for the week showed considerable decrease, but high prices checked the consumptive demand, packers were reducing stocks in coolers, and the demand for fresh animals was materially curtailed. Lambs topped the week at $11.90, but closed with the best quoted at $11.50. Sheep sold up to $9.25 for prime wethers.

Simple Financing Best.

Simplicity in the financial structure of great corporations is much to be desired. The difficulties that arise from lack of it are illustrated in some of the railway receiverships of the last year. The great railway systems were built up by combining various small companies, each having its own stock and bond issues. Most of these stocks were bought in by the larger companies, but the bonds were left outstanding, with the result that the different parts of each great railway system are covered by a variety of mortgages and bond issues, some of them overlapping.

When one of these great railways falls into difficulties, each bond issue must have a separate committee and the working out of an agreement among all the committees requires much time and expense. Holders of some of the bonds, too, have an unpleasant awakening, because the part of the system on which their bonds are a lien may have become relatively unimportant and the bonds, therefore, relatively less valuable.

Public utilities are now being consolidated under the control of great holding companies much as railroads were combined a few years ago. When a utility passes under the control of a holding company it is not easy for the latter to get possession of all the outstanding stocks and bonds. Sometimes this is done, however, and the result is a clean, closely knit financial structure which every investor can comprehend. More often the holding company gets possession of only a majority of the stock and some of the bonds. The result is that there are many subsidiary stock and bond issues, and the investor is in the dark as to their relative merits.

While it is often impossible to escape this complexity in forming utility corporations, most of the bad results can be avoided if reports of the earnings and condition of subsidiaries are made public. With such figures available the investor can at least know exactly what he is buying. Some companies furnish such information and investors can, in time, compel all to do so.

Brief Answers.

C. A., Hillsdale, Mich.—The new Canadian war loan is the obligation of the Dominion of Canada. There can be no serious doubt that it will be paid. There is a possibility that if the war continues several years the credit of the warring nations may fall seriously and that their bonds may sell for a time on lower levels.

A. G. W., Fort Dodge, Ia.—The American Snuff company earned 13.29 per cent on its $11,000,000 of common stock in 1915, compared with 13.09 in 1914.

NEW YORK, April 1.—Cotton goods and yarns were firm today. Knit goods were firm, with a scarcity in hosiery. Linens were in better demand. Burlaps were steady to firm.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, April 1.—COFFEE—There was some scattered selling in the market for coffee futures here during this morning's early trading, and after opening 1@2 points lower, the market sold 2@3 points under last night's closing figures. It was thought that the small offerings were partly due to reports that supplies were being sold from local stocks at lower prices than the present cost of replacing, but the Brazilian cables showed continued firmness, and prices here rallied later on a little buying by trade interests, with July selling up from 8.17c to 8.24c. The close was 2 or 3 points net higher. Sales, including switches, 12,000 bags. April, 8.06c; May, 8.14c; June, 8.18c; July, 8.23c; August, 8.28c; September, 8.33c; October, 8.33c; November, 8.39c; December, 8.43c; January, 8.48c; February, 8.53c; March, 8.58c. Spot coffee steady; Rio 7s, 9⅝c; Santos 4s, 10¼c. Few cost and freight offers were reported in from Brazil, with the quotations received showing no change. The official cables showed advances of 50@150 reis in the primary market and a decline of 1-32d in the rate of Rio exchange on London. Brazilian port receipts, 26,000; Jundiahy, 8,000. SUGAR—Raw: Spot prices quoted nominally at 5.96c for centrifugal, 5.19c for molasses, and 4 15-16c for Cubas cost and freight. Refined: Firmly held at 7@7.10c for fine granulated. Futures: July sold from 4.87c to 4.86c, closing 4.87c; September, 4.91c, closing 4.90c; December, 4.51@4.50c, closing 4.49c.

CHICAGO, April 1.—SUGAR—The following prices are quoted by wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $8.65; powdered, standard, $7.50; standard cane granulated, $7.40; best granulated, $7.30; extra C, $7.00; canary, $6.70.

EXCESS RESERVE OF N. Y. BANKS SHOWS DECREASE

Further Loss of $2,439,530 Raises Interest Rate One-Fourth of 1 Per Cent.

The excess reserve of the New York banks showed a further decrease of $2,439,530 for the week. This was due in considerable part to an increase of $15,142,000 in deposits, though there was a decrease in cash of $667,000. The decline in reserve has been favorable to firmer interest rates, but thus far the strength is represented by ¼ of 1 per cent. The weekly figures follow:

ACTUAL STATEMENT.

Willys Overland Earnings.

Net earnings of the Willys Overland company for the twelve months ended Dec. 31, 1915, were $11,201,255, and the balance applicable to dividends after all charges was $9,870,678. The last previous complete annual statement of the company prior to the one for 1915 was for the twelve months ended June 30, 1914. In considering the annual 1915 figures, THE TRIBUNE inadvertently included the six months from June 30, 1914, to Jan. 1, 1915, as a part of the earnings covered by the last report. While the income account and balance sheet were correctly stated, the 1915 figures were erroneously labeled as being for eighteen months instead of twelve.

Chicago Bank Clearings.

Chicago bank clearings for the week showed a gain of $51,598,750, or 17.9 per cent over the corresponding week last year. As recorded yesterday, the clearing for the month of March set a high record with an increase of $345,821,535, or 24.8 per cent over March, 1915. The figures:

| Date. | Clearings. | Balances. |
|---|---|---|
| Monday | $55,680,263.50 | $2,081,233.83 |
| Tuesday | 57,854,901.01 | 2,260,401.76 |

Sears-Roebuck Sales.

The auditing department of Sears, Roebuck & Co. reports a gain of 17 per cent in March, 1916, over March, 1915. The monthly comparison table shows:

| | 1915. | 1916. | Pct. gain. |
|---|---|---|---|
| January | $7,907,339 | $9,550,251 | 20.77 |
| February | 9,601,899 | 12,126,211 | 26.28 |

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD.

Considerable concern has been felt in the market for Federal Smelting and Refining stock because of the quick drop in the preferred from 51 to 35⅝, and a slump in the common from 26½ to 15. The preferred has recovered but 3¼ points and the common is up 2½ from the low. While the annual statement made a poor exhibit, it is now asserted that January results showed net of $83,000, February $77,000, and March over $80,000, indicating that profits for the first quarter of the current year will be around $240,000, or double the dividend requirements at the present rate. In 1915 the price for lead averaged 4.678c per lb, while the current quotation is 7½c a pound. This increased price in the company's product is advancing the earnings.

Interests in American Can company say they have no fault to find with the intention of the department of justice to insist that the Circuit court of Baltimore hand down a final decision in the anti-trust suit. Friends of the company say if the American Can had been adjudged a trust in restraint of trade, as the government alleged, the decision would have been so recorded. As it was, the court only took exception to business dealings of a number of years ago.

It is expected in Wall street that when President Crawford of the Muskogee Refining company returns to Oklahoma next week the board of directors will declare an extra dividend of 2 per cent, in addition to the regular 1 per cent monthly distribution.

The Standard Oil Company of New York has advanced the price of refined oil for export in barrels 5 points, and the Standard Oil Company of California has advanced certain grades of crude oil at the well 5 cents a barrel.

It is reported that certain changes are expected to be made in the management of the Submarine Boat company, and new interests will be represented through election to the board of one or two New York bankers.

A further step in the consolidation of the funded debt of the Northern States Power company and its subsidiaries has been taken in the call for the redemption of bonds and notes of various subsidiary concerns.

There is a revival of the story that Bethlehem Steel shares are to be divided up five certificates for one of the present common. New York, however, has nothing definite to offer as confirmatory of the gossip.

The local banks and exchanges will be closed next Tuesday, April 4, on account of the aldermanic election.

Copper metal sales for the week are over 400,000,000 pounds, according to a Boston authority.

Total sales of stock, 195,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds (par value), $2,190,000.

WEEK END IRREGULAR.

New York, April 1.—The week ended as it began, with irregularity the dominant note. Trading today was very light and more narrow than in the preceding days. Oils and other Mexican issues were strong on overnight developments south of the Rio Grande. Mexican Petroleum and Texas company were higher by 2½ to 3¼ points, respectively, and American Smelting rose 2 points. Coppers in general resumed yesterday's activity and the automobile group was better by 1 to 2. Among war issues Crucible Steel common and preferred, New York Air Brake, Baldwin Locomotive, and American Car made similar gains and Mercantile Marine preferred supplemented yesterday's advance by two points.

The usual miscellaneous issues, notably United States Industrial Alcohol and American Coal Products, were better by 2 to 4 points, but South Porto Rico Sugar was the only stock of its particular class to manifest especial prominence, rising 11 to the new record of 214.

Rails Are Heavy.

Rails were heavy or irregular, New Haven adding a substantial fraction to yesterday's setback, but New York Central made some recovery. Reading was unchanged, but the second preferred yielded 2 points. United States Steel held firm on signs of better support and Bethlehem Steel fell 9 to 484, but regained much of its loss.

Trade reviews touched upon the steady expansion of general business and the increasing scarcity of labor, especially in the textile industries. Banks in remote sections report an increased demand for money, with a further hardening of long time accommodations.

Increase in Loans.

The local bank statement showed an actual increase of $13,382,000 in loans, with no material change in cash holdings and a further decrease in reserves, drawing the excess down to $123,823,000, the smallest total thus far this year.

Weakness of lires in today's exchange market seemed to refute recent rumors of an arrangement between London and Rome to stabilize Italian remittances. Sterling and francs were firm.

Anglo-French 5s duplicated this year's best quotation of 95⅞, but the general bond list was irregular. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

MERCANTILE PAPER—3@3½. STERLING—Sixty day bills, 4.72½; demand, 4.76½; cables, 4.77 1-16. Francs, demand, 5.97½; cables, 5.97. Marks, demand, 72; cables, 72⅛. Kronen, demand, 12.40; cables, 12.45. Guilders, demand, 42⅝; cables, 42⅞. Lires, demand, 660; cables, 659. Rubles, demand, 31½; cables, 31⅝. BAR SILVER—60⅝c. Mexican dollars, 46⅝c. Government bonds steady. Railroad bonds irregular.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS

LONDON, April 1.—Although revenue collections tightened the money market, the year's returns, published yesterday, created a cheerful feeling on the stock exchange today and helped maintain funds on a steady basis. Oil shares and eastern Rand mine stocks were in good demand, but dealings in other directions were meager. American securities were only occasionally supported, but they closed quietly steady. Bar silver, 29d per ounce. Money, 4@4½ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 4½@4¾ per cent. Three months, 4⅝@4¾ per cent.

PARIS, April 1.—Prices were steady on the bourse today. Rentes, 63 francs 25 centimes. Exchange on London, 28 francs 52 centimes. Five per cent loan, 88 francs 15 centimes.

LAST week's real estate market was of a fairly sensational character so far as the downtown market was concerned. There were no less than four transactions closed, two of which were of a highly important character. It was more like the boom market days of 1910 and 1911 than during any week for many months and should serve as a tonic both to this market, which has been in a semi-moribund state for the last two years or more, as well as the more active outside market, which always is stimulated by big investment transactions in any part of the city.

The most important, of course, was the purchase by John G. Shedd, president of Marshall Field & Co., from Frederick Ayer of the Counselman and Gaff buildings at the northwest corner of La Salle street and Jackson boulevard for $1,200,000. It enjoys the distinction of being the largest deal of the year in the downtown district, and is of unusual interest for other reasons.

$9,440 a Front Foot.

The lot fronts 127 feet on La Salle by 60 feet on Jackson, making the sale at the rate of $9,440 a front foot and $156.33 a square foot. The purchase gives Mr. Shedd the entire frontage on the west side of La Salle street from Jackson boulevard to Quincy street, 165x60 feet, as he acquired at judicial sale in February the Mallers building at the southwest corner of La Salle and Quincy streets for $405,000.

The Counselman and Gaff buildings, both nine story and basement fireproof structures, are said to have been given no value in the transaction. An interesting feature in connection with the deal is that Mr. Shedd is said to plan the removal of both buildings at the expiration of existing leases in 1918 and the erection of a high class building, commensurate with the character of the neighborhood, to cover the entire frontage. Tentative plans are said to be in course of preparation.

The transaction was negotiated by Albert L. Strauss, who represented Mr. Shedd, and Aldis & Co., who represented Mr. Ayer. Wilson, Moore & McIlvaine and Allen G. Mills attended to the legal details.

In Heart of Financial Section.

Apart from the prominence of the property, which is in the heart of the financial district, and the fact it generally is considered an excellent purchase from a value standpoint by Mr. Shedd, it is one of the most interesting deals closed in Chicago for a long time, and is regarded as a piece of clever constructive work on the part of the brokers.

At the time the old Mallers building, near the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank, was offered at judicial sale last February there were two bidders for the property—John Borden, who represented Mr. Ayer, and Mr. Shedd. It was looked upon as the key to the block from a development standpoint, and following its acquirement by Mr. Shedd for $405,000 the negotiations for the acquirement of the Counselman and Gaff buildings by Mr. Shedd were started.

To students of realty operations this deal from its inception, the purchase of the Mallers building, to its final successful conclusion, is a most interesting object lesson of the possibilities open to a far sighted and intelligently prosecuted initiative.

The property comprises one of the best known and valuable corners in the loop district. The Royal Insurance building adjoins on the south. On the opposite side of Jackson boulevard is the board of trade. On the opposite side of La Salle street is the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, while just to the north is the big building of the Continental and Commercial National bank, the Rookery, and other large office buildings. The Ayer properties have long been under the management of Aldis & Co.

Wabash Avenue Sale.

Another notable deal of the week in the downtown district was the purchase by the Chicago Real Estate trustees from William T. Church, trustee of Carrie L. W. Hoops et al., of the property at 106-10 South Wabash avenue, on the west side of the street, fifty-three feet south of Monroe street, adjoining the Goddard building, for $350,000.

The lot is 47x85 feet and is improved with an old seven story building, which is said not to have been considered in the transaction, making the sale at the rate of $7,440 a front foot and $87.63 a square foot.

It was acquired as an investment and no plans are had looking to any changes, but ultimately it is the purpose to improve with a high grade building.

It is interesting as being the first purchase made on Wabash avenue by the trustees, who are extensive owners of downtown property, and it evidences their confidence in the future value of Wabash avenue frontage. A few days ago Judge Baldwin authorized the sale of the property for $350,000. It generally is regarded by real estate men as a good purchase, the opinion being the property is worth around $400,000. Dibblee & Manierre represented the sellers and Aldis & Co. the purchasers.

The property at 73 West South Water street, sixty feet east of Clark street, 26 2-3x150 feet, with four story building, was purchased by Philip Kussel from C. and Thresnelda Ramm for an indicated consideration of $90,000. Board of review valuation, $89,259.

DEALERS REPORT GOOD MOVEMENT IN APARTMENTS

Trading in the Cheaper Priced Properties Falls Off—Numerous Sales Pending.

While there were no transactions of any particular magnitude in apartment house property during the week, there was in the aggregate a fairly good movement of properties wherein the consideration ran from about $40,000 to nearly $100,000. There was a noticeable falling off in cheaper priced properties, although brokers report many deals in this class of property pending.

A notable north side transaction was the purchase by Edward Pearson, George A. Dainty, and Henry F. Turner from Mrs. Tessie Rich and husband of the new twenty-four flat building on 150x125 feet at 4016-20 North Kedzie avenue, between Ainslie and Argyle streets, for a reported $90,000, subject to $50,000 incumbrance. In part payment the purchaser conveyed an Illinois and Missouri farm at a reported valuation of $41,000. George W. Stewart represented both parties.

Three Buildings Transferred.

Another noteworthy north side transaction was the sale by James Bidderman to Milton S. Plotke of the three high grade six apartment buildings at 4407-19 Beacon street, 41 feet north of Montrose boulevard, lot 174x150 feet, west front, for a reported consideration of $84,000, subject to an incumbrance of $60,000.

Mr. Plotke conveyed in return the vacant property at the northeast corner of Ridge boulevard and Lee street, Evanston, 102x175 feet, for a reported consideration of $10,000, clear, and the vacant at the southwest corner of Cicero and West End avenues, 180x100 feet, at a reported valuation of $18,000. It is stated Mr. Bidderman will improve the Cicero and West End avenue property with a store and flat building to cost in the neighborhood of $75,000. Plotke & Grosby represented both parties to the transaction.

South Shore District Sale.

An interesting deal in the South Shore district was the sale by Murray Wolbach to Hugh H. Abernathy of the new high grade eighteen apartment building of four rooms with sun parlors at the southeast corner of Sixty-eighth street and Harper avenue for a reported consideration of $51,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of $7,830, and in part payment the purchaser conveyed the six flat building at 1544-46 East Sixty-sixth place, valued at $19,000. S. H. Harrison of H. F. Norcott & Co. represented both parties.

Record was made of the sale by T. S. Leake to Josiah W. Norton of the property at the northeast corner of Dorchester avenue and Sixty-first place for an indicated consideration of $57,000, subject to an incumbrance of $27,000. The lot fronts 163½x120 feet, west front, and is improved with a large four story apartment building containing about thirty apartments.

The property at the northeast corner of Dorchester avenue and Seventy-third street, lot 200x125 feet, with apartment house improvements, has been sold by T. J. Roche to Cooper Kirk, for an indicated consideration of $43,000, subject to an incumbrance of $23,000.

Sheridan Road Flat Sold.

The high grade six apartment building on a lot 60x136 feet, at 7653-57 Sheridan road, has been conveyed by Frederick Becklenberg to James T. Crane for a reported consideration of $47,000, subject to an incumbrance of $27,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of $7,020. S. S. Berry was the broker.

The new high grade eighteen apartment building at 5437-45 Woodlawn avenue has been conveyed by Eugene Brown to William E. Wood of Detroit, Mich., for an indicated consideration of $45,000.

LEASES AND LOANS.

As was the case during the previous week, there was nothing of any particular importance doing in leases or loans. With the approach of May 1 a little better inquiry is reported for both store and office space, but unfortunately there is much to be desired as regards the situation in both of these particulars.

The most important lease closed during the week was negotiated by E. F. Keebler & Co. It covered the store and basement at 64-66 West Randolph street, between the Olympic and Garrick theaters. The space was leased to Thomas M. Sullivan by Ben Roth for a term of fourteen years and one month from April 1 at a term rent of $102,000. Mr. Sullivan will move from the Masonic Temple building, where he has occupied a double store on the Randolph street frontage for eight years for buffet purposes.

The space occupied by Mr. Sullivan has been leased by Willoughby & Co. to Weeghman's lunchroom for ten years from May 1. Before concluding the lease to Mr. Sullivan it was necessary for Keebler & Co. to secure cancellation of a ten years' lease held by J. H. Mertens of the store at 66 Randolph street, for which Mr. Sullivan is said to have paid a bonus. Mertens' barber shop will move to the Thompson Commissary building at Clark and Kinzie streets, where he has leased a store through Keebler & Co. for an additional ten years at a term rental of $15,000. Keebler & Co. have also leased for A. W. Hannah to Clow's waffle parlor the store at 4 North Dearborn street, 15x30, for a term beginning April 1, at an annual rental of $3,600. The same brokers have also leased for the United Cigars Stores company and John R. Thompson to E. M. Cochrane for a hat shop the store at 80½ West Van Buren street, beginning April 1, at a term rental of $12,500.

Gordon Strong & Co. have leased space on the sixth floor of the Republic building, southeast corner of State and Adams streets, to the Unique tailors for a term of years at a fixed rental of $63,780, with a precentage rental in addition.

They also have leased space on the fourteenth floor of the same building to Business Men's Clearing house for a term of years at a total rental of $19,760.

They also have leased the store at 15 East Adams street to the Pathephone Shop for a term at a total rent of $25,000; also the store at 7 East Adams street to the Newcomb Optical company for a term at a total rent of $23,900.

They also have leased space in the second floor of the Peacock building, at the northeast corner of State and Adams streets, to the Boston Dental company for a term at an annual rental of $6,000.

W. D. Kerfoot & Co. have leased the store on the southeast corner of Clark street and Chicago avenue to H. & M. Brown and will be known as Store No. 3 for this firm on North Clark street. This building will be remodeled with an elaborate store front next May. The lease is for five years at a term rent of $15,000.

C. C. Mitchell & Co. have made a loan of $120,000 for seven years at 5½ per cent to Walter A. Alschlager, secured by property at the northwest corner of Kenmore and Hollywood avenues. The loan is in bond issue form.

Cremin & O'Connor have made a loan of $109,000 for ten years at 5 per cent to the Catholic bishop of Chicago, secured by the SS. Peter and Paul church, Polish, on the east side of Paulina street, between Thirty-seventh place and Thirty-eighth street. The property is improved with a handsome stone and brick church, also a large school and rectory.

S. W. Straus & Co. have made a bond issue loan of $82,000, seven years at 6 per cent, to Frank Burke, secured by the Glengyle court apartments at 6125-37 Indiana avenue.

Straus & Co. also have made a bond issue loan of $80,000, seven years at 6 per cent, to Clinton C. Hile, secured by the Fenwood court apartments at 1136-42 Pratt boulevard.

White & Tabor have leased for William A. Jones, to the Federal Machinery Sales company, the two story building at 14 North Jefferson street for a term at a total rental of $13,000.

For Vlachos & Chiagouris, to Marcus Strauss and Daniel P. Levi, store and basement at 319 West Madison street for a term from May 1 at a total rental of $11,000.

For Vlachos & Chiagouris, to E. C. Vahle, store at 315-17 West Madison street for a term from May 1 at a total rental of $20,400.

White & Tabor also report the building now occupied by the Midvale Steel company for their Chicago office at 21-23-25 South Green street, which was built to suit for them by the owner of the property, R. R. Baker, and on which they have taken a lease for a term of years at a total rental of $31,000.

URGES VOTERS WATCH FOR MUNICIPAL COURT BALLOT.

President Paul Steinbrecher and Henry G. Zander, chairman of the legislative committee of the Chicago real estate board, are sending to the members of the board a statement by John Lyle Vette, attorney of the board, relating to the Municipal court act, which appears on the small ballot at the election next Tuesday. It was indorsed by the board and advocated through the legislative committee of the board. The statement is made that the act may be defeated for lack of interest and that its adoption is of great moment to owners of real estate. Mr. Vette says, in part:

"Probably the most important provision of the proposed amendments is the one in section 42, that every summons issued out of the Municipal court shall be served upon the defendant in the same manner as if issued out of the Circuit court. Under the present Municipal court act, as construed by the Appellate court, personal service must be had upon defendants in forcible detainer cases. In every other court in the state service may be made by delivering a copy of the summons at defendant's usual place of abode, with some member of the family of the age of 12 years or upward, substantially the same as in chancery cases. No reason exists for differentiating the practice in the Municipal court from that of all other courts, and undoubtedly it was done inadvertently. It was worked great hardship upon property owners in permitting 'dead beat' tenants to retain possession of leased premises for long periods of time merely by evading service."

Forty-five Years in Same Office.

Yesterday Charles F. Marsh completed forty-five years of continuous service with the real estate firm of Baird & Warner, and is thought to hold the record for long service among real estate men in the city.

BUSINESS SITES ON THE OUTSIDE TAKE A SLUMP

Sales Few and of Small Importance—Southwest Deal Leads.

There was little doing in outside business property during the week, the sales being few in number and of a generally mediocre character.

One of the most important was the sale by Peter C. Bruhn to Louis Lagorio of the property at the northwest corner of Twenty-sixth street and Kedzie avenue for a reported consideration of $55,000, subject to an incumbrance of $24,000. The lot is 125x98 feet and is improved with a one and two story building containing stores, offices, and a theater. Gordon, Lapin & Co. represented seller and John M. Hoskins & Co. the buyer.

An interesting deal in Kenwood business property covered the property at the southeast corner of Forty-third street and Drexel boulevard.

Bought for $50,000.

The property fronts 180 feet on Forty-third street and 99½ feet on the boulevard, and is improved with one and two story buildings, the latter being on the corner on the boulevard frontage. It was purchased by Ben Lowenmeyer, a well known north shore subdivider, from Elsie M. Day for an indicated consideration of $50,000, subject to $15,000. The buildings contain altogether ten stores on the ground floor with two flats and a photographic studio on the second floor.

In exchange for the equity Mr. Lowenmeyer conveyed 1,000 feet of frontage on Linden avenue, in Highland Park, being the balance of 1,400 feet which he acquired last December from James Thompson of Brookline, Mass. Since July last he has disposed of 5,200 feet of Highland Park frontage.

Manufacturing District Sale.

A notable deal in the central manufacturing district was the purchase by Harry Rosenberg from John A. Spoor and Arthur G. Leonard, trustees of the district, of the property, west front, on Jasper place, between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh streets, 145x120 feet, improved with a one story and basement building recently equipped with a sprinkling system. The property was leased to the Rosenberg Paper company in July, 1911, the lease containing an option of purchase, which the company has now exercised.

An important deal in the north side manufacturing district, made a matter of record, was the sale by Henry Russell Platt and Herman Reiser to Ernest H. Lyons of the property at the northeast corner of Huron and St. Clair streets. The lot which is vacant is 100x111.2 feet and was sold for an indicated consideration of $50,000, which is at the rate of $500 a front foot.

So Long as People Have Eyes

they will always pay admiration to beauty—and it is a great error to buy a car lacking this distinction.

Beauty never requires apologies nor explanations. It is accepted everywhere at its face value, as proof of quality, because only those makers who take the time to build excellent cars ever take the additional time to make them really beautiful. Commonplace cars look monotonously alike and monotonous repetition defeats beauty. But the genuinely superior car, designed and finished to meet the exclusive personal taste of its individual buyer, stands out cheerfully as the well built and carefully selected possession of one who loves the fine things of life. The visible beauty of his car is in harmony with its mechanical excellence.

You can have everything that is desirable in a motor car when you buy a Winton Six. Two sizes: 33 at $2,285, and 48 at $3,500. Consider us at your service. Simply telephone Calumet 1626.

MORAN FIGHT PROVES JESS EARNED TITLE

Victory Shows Willard Is Real Champion—Gains Confidence in Self.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Jess Willard, former Kansas cowboy and world's heavyweight champion, "should worry." When Willard, who now calls Chicago his home, delivered a terrific lacing to Frank Moran of Pittsburgh, who was considered his most formidable challenger for the title, in New York March 25, he "found himself."

Just how important to Willard was this matter of "finding himself" easily could be learned by talking with Jess after the battle with Moran. The champion, like any other athlete who ever gained the highest rung of the ladder, naturally became imbued with confidence, a confidence that he was just as good as and probably a little better than any other man in his chosen profession.

Criticism Worries Champ.

When Jess permitted himself to be matched against the Pittsburgh redhead, he believed right down in his heart that he would be returned the winner. But at the same time Willard was forced to listen to the gossip generally circulated anent ring affairs. As most of it concerned himself and his ability because of the importance of the contest with Moran, he naturally began to take seriously whatever was aimed at him in the way of criticism.

There were those who didn't hesitate to voice the belief that Willard was a lucky champion because he landed the match with Jack Johnson when the Negro was at about the end of his string, or ready for a defeat at the hands of almost any good white heavyweight who came along.

Moran Might Have Been Champ.

Just how much truth there may be in this talk of luck is hard to figure out. Perhaps Willard was lucky to get the match with Johnson. Perhaps had Frank Moran, who took the fierce lacing at the hands of the present champion in New York the other night, been the one lucky enough to get that match at Havana just a year ago, he might have turned the trick of knocking out the Negro the same as Willard did. But that's one of the questions of the ring that never will be answered.

Granting then that Willard was lucky to get Johnson, it became the duty of Willard to show that he was a worthy holder of the title. Almost as soon as the crown found a place on his head Willard began to get the reward, which was a harvest of golden shekels reaped through working with a ranch show. Traveling nearly all last summer and giving exhibitions with the ranch show netted the champion somewhere in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Pays Debt to Public.

With all that coin in his possession, it was within the power of Willard to retire from the ring with the title and never make a single scrap as titleholder. But Jess Willard knew that he owed something to the public. He also knew (for he gave consideration to the remarks of his critics that he was a lucky champion) that he had to settle to his own satisfaction the matter of supremacy in the heavyweight ranks of pugilism. He determined then to meet the best man that could be picked for his opponent, and that man happened to be Frank Moran.

It can be said right here that Willard really desires and has desired for many months to end his connection with the fighting game. He cares more for the home life he has established in Chicago. He has earned all the money that he needs, but when it came time for him to make his first battle in defense of his title, he went into it because it was up to him to show that he was not a fluke champion.

Gets $47,500 for Bout.

Of course the matter of money also became an important factor in the making of the match with Moran. Willard drew down $47,500 for his end in that scrap, aside from moving picture money, but there's an interesting point in this connection that deserves the type of publicity. Tex Rickard or any one else in the promoting game would not have found it necessary to pay that huge sum to the champion for his services had they dealt exclusively with Willard in making the match.

The promoters might have signed the champion for $30,000, or even less, for Willard was determined to show the public that he was "the goods." But Tom Jones and Jack Curley, who also has had some sort of a financial pull on the earnings of Willard ever since he took the title from Johnson, handled the match-making and between them they engineered the financial end of the match so smartly that Willard landed a guarantee of $47,500 from Promoter Rickard.

Proves He's Real Champion.

Getting down to the business of fighting gave Willard the chance to show himself and the public as well that he is a real champion. He gave Moran a beating more than sufficient to establish the matter of superiority. With his advantage of fifty-eight pounds in weight, about five inches in height, and every other physical point in his favor, Willard added superior cleverness, all of which made it practically impossible for Moran to win.

That strong point of the old school of boxing, the left jab, was the greatest factor in showing that Willard is worthy of the title. With that weapon and his great reach he easily held his smaller opponent at a safe distance. Every time the champion stuck his left mitt in the face of his opponent there was enough

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

MARCH 29.

My second love letter from Lennie! And I know now that he truly cares for me though he is to shy to say so in so many words even on paper one who reads between the lines of his dear letter can see that our relations has gone past the stage of near friendship. Here is his letter.

Dear Little Girlie: Well girlie we are almost through with Tampa and I will be glad to get away from here because I am beginning to get sick of it. We leave here this week and the club will be divided into two squads and we work north slow and play games with the southern league clubs. Tinker has not as yet told me if I would be with the first or second club, but between you and I girlie, I am sure he thinks pretty well of my work and what I have showed so far and I will be surprised if he dont take me along with him on the first club. My curve ball has not been breaking as good as it can but that is just because my arm is not in the best shape and I dont get the snap to my wrist that I get when my arms o. k. But in a few days I will be in mid-season form and then look out. My fast ball is better than ever and when I shoot my fast ball over there I guess the boys thinks its one of them Dutch cannon balls shooting over there.

Well girlie I sure have been putting in some good licks down here and if all the boys had of worked as hard as I have worked down here the club would be ready to start the season tomorrow. I suppose you read in the paper where the Phila. club scored 5 runs off of me in 3 innings but let me tell you something girlie just between ourselves I held back when I was working against them because I think a man would be foolish to show all your stuff against a club that your libel to work against all season when the games count for something. I did not use my curve at all and I just lobbed them over most of the time and they will think I have not got much but wait till I face against them in the regular season and they will wonder if its the same man that looked so easy down south. It will be the same man all right but with a difference eh Girlie.

Girlie you can do something for me if you got a mind to and that is this. Weeghman will be there in the office with you this week and if you get a chance just find out what he and Tinker think of my work and leave me know what he says but dont leave him know that I asked you to find out. You can do this for me girlie if you go at it right and I will leave it to your judgment how to go at it. I must close for this time. Yours truly. LENNIE.

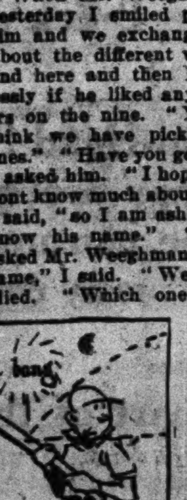
Yes dear boy I will do what you ask and I can read between the lines that your testing the strenth of my feelings towards you. A woman in love is not as blind as Man believes.

APRIL 1.

I would of written to Lennie days ago but before I wrote I wanted to do what he asked me and yesterday was the first chance I got to talk to Mr. Weeghman. So last night I wrote the following letter but had to cut it short because I had promised to go to the motion pictures with my brother and sister-in-law.

Dearest Lennie: It was so nice to get your nice letter and though you did not say many of the things I want to hear from you still what I could read between the lines made my heart beat fast. O Lennie I appreciate the feelings that makes you backward in telling me what is in your heart but I will forgive you a little more boldness in future missives.

When Mr. Weeghman spoke to me yesterday I smiled pleasantly back at him and we exchanged a few remarks about the different weather in Florida and here and then I asked him carelessly if he liked any of the new players on the nine. "Yes," he said. "I think we have picked up some good ones." "Have you got a good pitcher?" I asked him. "I hope so," he said. "I dont know much about base ball games," I said, "so I am ashamed to say I dont know his name." "Whose name?" asked Mr. Weeghman. "Your pitcher's name," I said. "We have two," he replied. "Which one do you mean?"



"Oh," I said carelessly, "the one I reffered to is Mr. Gates or some name like that." "Oh, yes," said Mr. Weeghman, "the kid from Dayton. He has got the best control I ever saw in a left handed pitcher. He hit those Philadelphia bats right square in the middle." "Oh," I said, "He must be awfully clever." "Yes," said Mr. Weeghman, "he is so clever that Tinker and Brown cant learn him a thing." So Mr. Weeghman was busy and I did not want to have him get suspicious of my interest in you so I did not say anything more to him about it.

But I guess that will show you that he admires my big friend and I hope you wont get so conceited that you will refuse to have anything to do with me. You see now dont you dear that I am willing and anxious to do anything for you and dont you think I would make a pretty good detective?

I am in a hurry Lennie or I would write something you might like to read even better than Mr. Weeghman's praise. How about it Lennie? Dont forget to answer. With love and ——

YOUR LITTLE GIRLIE.

TEXAS CROPS GAIN BUT SOX LOSE BY RAIN

Regulars Idle at Dallas as Downpour Saves Farmers $150,000,000.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Dallas, Tex., April 1.—[Special.]—A two inch "deluge," which experts estimate did $150,000,000 worth of good to crops in the Lone Star state, did nearly $150 damage to Commylou's bank roll, for it drowned out today's game between the Sox regulars and Dallas. Commylou has been elected secretary of the Regulars, while Joe O'Neill chaperons the Volunteers, and Commylou's bank roll depends on the gate receipts on the way north.

The two squads of Sox left Mineral Wells early in a downpour, which started early the previous evening and gave everybody a soaking, because even the jitney roofs leaked, and the trains start half a block from the dinky railroad station, with no train sheds to protect travelers. They reached here in the same downpour, but got no wetter.

Many knocks were heard against the weather man until the players read the state agricultural secretary's estimate of the $150,000,000 benefit derived from the rain. Then all quit knocking. There was no chance to play on the water logged field here, and it is doubtful if tomorrow's game can be played.

The players are all in such good condition, however, that the rest will handicap only the pitchers, who need work every day to tune them up to concert pitch.

Sox Lineup Picked.

With the championship season only eleven days away it looks as if Manager Rowland of the White Sox picked his strongest lineup more than ten days ago when he shifted Buck Weaver to third base, put Zeb Terry at short, with Eddie Collins on second, Fournier on first, and Jackson, Felsch, and Murphy in the outfield.

The new combination has realized every expectation up to date. There never was any doubt about Weaver's ability to play third. It is an easier job than shortstopping in some ways, although it is harder in others. Buck's good arm, his catlike agility, and his ravenous appetite for hot grounders make him eligible to the front rank of third basemen, but it would not do to transform him if it would weaken the more important position of shortstop.

Terry Looks Good at Short.

In Zeb Terry the Sox manager seems to have the "makin's" of a shortstop as good as Weaver, although the youngster at present lacks Buck's experience. Last year was Terry's first in professional company, and they do not pick up much big league stuff in college. Nevertheless, Terry seems to have been born with the baseball instinct and to have picked up inside stuff by himself. He works so well with Eddie Collins that if he can hit even a little bit in fast company he will strengthen the team, because his presence will enable Weaver to plug that awful hole that yawned at third base all last season.

Terry hit nearly .260 in the Coast league, and although that wouldn't ordinarily mean much swatting against big league pitching Terry is such a youngster that he is likely to learn a lot more about batting as he advances.

Reserve Force Is Stronger.

The greatest increase in the strength of the White Sox this year will be in its reserve force. In a championship campaign a baseball team is like a chain in that it is no stronger than its substitutes. If an accident or sickness produces a weak spot in the infield or outfield the whole machine may be wrecked. And last season Manager Rowland was not so well protected with utility men as he will be this year.

When you can relegate a man like Shauno Collins to the utility ranks, as seems most likely, it means a lot to a team, for Shauno can play either the outfield or the infield better than well.

Can Carry Plenty of Subs.

Moreover, Manager Rowland can carry nearly all this utility strength under the American league limit if he wants to, because he has only thirty players on the roll now and is compelled to part with only five of them. He has twelve pitchers and five catchers and can eliminate the necessary five men before May 15 by cutting down his slab and mask staff alone.

He needs only three catchers with Schalk and Lapp for the heavy work, and can do with nine of his present twelve pitchers, allowing for the chance that Ed Walsh will not come back.

EBERFELD STAGES FIGHT; POLICE BREAK UP BATTLE.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 1.—Kid Eberfeld, manager of the local Southern league club, played a prominent part in the first free-for-all baseball fight of 1916. In the seventh inning of the game with the Athletic Yannigans Crane, at bat for Mack's men, was struck in the back by a pitched ball and hurled his war club at Pitcher Martina. Martina, fists clenched, started for Crane, and Eberfeld also ran from the bench, both reaching the Athletic batter at the same time. In a second the air was full of arms and legs. Each team joined in the fray with a will until a squad of police stopped the melee and the game was resumed. The Athletics won, 2 to 0.

TESREAU FATHER OF TWINS.

Beaumont, Tex., April 1.—When Jeff Tesreau, New York Nationals' pitcher, received a telegram here early today announcing that he was the father of twins, he refused to tell anybody what the message contained until he verified its contents from New York. Mrs. Tesreau and the babies were said to be doing well. The big pitcher at first thought he was the victim of an "April fool" joke.

'TRIBUNE' TESTS MAY ENLIST 600 AMATEUR STARS

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

It looks as if 600 ambitious youngsters living within forty miles of Chicago will register in the second annual TRIBUNE amateur baseball tourney, prizes for which are eastern trips as members of the White Sox and Cubs. The first week for nominations drew nearly 100 entries, exceeding the number of 1915 for the same period by seventy. Last season 400 amateurs participated, nearly 250 of whom entered during the final week.

Six entries have been rejected because the applicants were over the 21 year age limit. It should be understood that no player will be permitted to enter who has reached his majority. The tournament is conducted principally for those who play on the prairie and semi-pro lots.

Outfielders in Majority.

As was the case last year, more outfielders are named in the entry blank than for any other position. The table below shows twenty-seven. Pitchers and shortstops divide "place" honors with fifteen each, then follow the catchers with ten, second basemen with eleven, and first basemen with eight. Third basemen prove the rare variety, only six being listed. Bear in mind major league teams have found it more difficult to get third sackers than players for the other jobs. So get busy, you third basemen.

Rules for the contest will be announced soon. Although it hasn't been definitely decided when the entries will close, it behooves the boys to send their blanks to the Amateur Baseball editor at once, so they may be assigned to the early tryouts.

Entries Received to Date.

TEXAS RAIN MAY GIVE SOX II. ANOTHER REST

Fort Worth, Tex., April 1.—[Special.]—Prospects are that tomorrow's game between the Sox Yannigans and Fort Worth will have to be called off. There was no chance to play today, as the Panther park was soaking wet.

It was still raining this evening, with no prospects of a letup. If Trinity river rises much higher, it will flood the lowlands in which the park is situated.

In case it clears off and the wind dries the field, Acting Manager John Collins says he will pitch Reb Russell and Red Faber against the Panthers. Russell was with Fort Worth a month, and it was from this city that the White Sox secured him.

Joe Benz, who has been suffering with a severe cold, feels much improved tonight after a day's rest. Collins is delighted with his team and has informed Manager Rowland that he does not intend to lose a ball game on the trip home.

RAIN ALSO AT SHREVEPORT.

Shreveport, La., April 1.—[Special.]—Rain prevented the Cub Yannigans and Gassers from playing their scheduled exhibition game this afternoon. It was said to have been the first rain in sixty-four days. The Cincinnati team, which trained here, did not miss one day's training, but as soon as the second division of the Cubs arrived the hoodoo which has followed them got in its work. The team under Rollie Zeider had a good workout in the morning, but the rain started about noon and continued throughout the afternoon.

MAROON NINE WINS OPENER.

The Maroon baseball team, after one week's practice, defeated Swift & Co., champion of the City league, 16 to 4, at Stagg field yesterday. Shull struck out ten men and in the fifth inning poled a three bagger with three on bases. McCain, who started for Swifts, pitched last year for the White Giants. Score:

CARDS BLANK BROWNS AND WIN IN NINTH, 4-0

St. Louis, Mo., April 1.—A batting rally by the St. Louis Cardinals with two out in the ninth enabled them to defeat the Browns in the second game of the spring series, 4 to 0. In eight innings Meadows allowed only two hits. He was taken out for Butler, a pinch hitter, who started the scoring. Brilliant fielding on both sides featured. Score:

DEFEAT OF CUBS MAY BRING NEW TRAINING RULE

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

President B. B. Johnson of the American league will ask either the National league or national commission to enact legislation prohibiting exhibition games between teams of the same league in advance of the schedule season. Such a restriction exists in the junior major league despite many pleas to have it removed when shortsighted magnates thought they saw an opportunity to gather a few spring shekels at the gate.

Possibly the American league leader's attention was called to what he long has considered an evil by the result of the series between the Chicago Cubs and the champion Philadelphia aggregation who occupied Florida training camps at Tampa and St. Petersburg, respectively, the separating distance being only a twenty mile boat ride across Tampa bay.

Seven Straight for Phils.

This series resulted in seven consecutive victories for the Morans and naturally in seven consecutive defeats for the Cubs. Of course experienced baseball men recognize that spring games mean little in the later pennant race for the reason that managers may be trying out new players, one team may be farther advanced than the other, or one set of pitchers may have wintered in a warm climate and be ready to deliver the balls with a few more kinks than the other.

With this point conceded, the fact remains that the loss of seven straight games carries a stigma with many fans. The result of the series is apparent in Chicago. Whereas a few weeks ago it was the vogue to refer to Tinker's combined Cubs-Whales as probable pennant winners, the most polite of the Cub admirers among the public now are inclined to a huge interrogation point. Cigar store conversation already wonders whether the slab staff of the Cubs is equal to the test of a championship season.

Defeats May Be Forgotten.

The Cubs during the winter passed from an alien, with the fans at least, ownership to the control of Chicagoans with a popularity platform, planked with the home ownership cry, all set for tremendous enthusiasm if the team was a contender for the coveted bunting which signifies the best in the National league.

Such is the popularity of the owners that it may be doubted whether the team will suffer much in attendance at the opening games, seats for which already are in strong demand, especially if the Tinker aggregation gathers a few exhibition victories on its return trip north. The public memory is notoriously short-lived.

On the Other Hand—

But it will need only a slight prod to recall those seven defeats if the team begins badly. The point is that it becomes necessary to trot out the hackneyed excuses for defeat in advance of the season instead of after the season starts. If by any chance the Cubs should start off poorly, there is the memory of that Florida experience to reinforce existing doubt of ultimate success. The doubt thus is cumulative instead of primary.

It may be argued that such a result seldom would happen. But the fact is there that the possibility exists. If any good purpose were served by such combats it might be worth risking. The financial returns appear picayune in comparison with the danger of injuries and loss of prestige.

Cub Owners Are Fans.

Messrs. Weeghman and his associates in the ownership of the Chicago Cubs are fans first and business men second. They certainly will not allow anything to interfere with the prospects of the team. The games with the Phillies aroused comparatively no interest in this city. The defeats did arouse criticism and doubts which it will take several victories on and after April 12 to dissipate.

CUBS FOOL 'EM BY DEFEATING ORLEANS, 3 TO 1

Archer Gives Invaders First Victory by Two Three-Baggers.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New Orleans, La., April 1.—[Special.]—As it was April first the Cubs played a joke on the whole world today by winning a game of ball just when most of the world had concluded that such a feat was impossible. They trimmed the New Orleans Pelicans, 3 to 1, in a fine contest that was nip and tuck nearly all the way. If Jimmy Archer hadn't done some swell impromptu hitting the joke might have fizzled out.

Jim's three base blow was responsible for the first run in the third inning and his second three baser drove in the other two tallies in the seventh. At least it may be said that Archer is ready for the pennant race.

Other Cubs Fail to Hit.

The other fellows on the squad looked helpless once more with the stick although they did poke and scrape out some harmless ones toward the finish of the exhibition. If they all get into the same batting stride possessed by Archer the Cubs will lick every team in the league.

It was rather encouraging to Manager Tinker to watch his pitchers. Big George McConnell toiled neatly for six innings and if old man Sylvesters weren't still playing ball down in these parts George would have gone through without a blemish. Sylvester poled one over Max Flack's head in the fourth round just after Mike Doolan had made a wild heave of Edmundson's roller. The wallop was good for three bags and, of course, Edmundson raced home.

Archer Scores Two More.

That mistake tied the count, and the two teams fought with it tied until the Cubs began their seventh round attack. Saler punched a hot one past the pitcher's ankles. The shortstop ran over and booted the ball and then the second baseman took another lick at it, so it was decided to give Saler a hit. Mann then poled safely to left, and Doolan bunted the two runners along, after which Archer broke up the ball game with his three base drive to the right wall.

Tom Seaton then took the job and held the Pelicans down to the finish without even a base hit, the only man to reach first base being Bluhm, who drew a pass.

Veteran Weaver on Slab.

The veteran Buck Weaver may have been largely responsible for the few hits made by the Cubs in the early part of the contest. The former Cub hurler was on the slab for five rounds and the only blow registered was Jim Archer's first three bagger. Two aspiring slabmen, Gudger and Walker, divided the hurling for the remainder of the game and the Cubs had less difficulty in seeing the ball.

NOTES OF THE CUBS.

New Orleans, La., April 1.—[Special.]—Another combat with the Cleveland Indians will be staged here tomorrow. Jim Vaughn will do the slabbing, and if the weather is fit will go the route.

Only about 1,200 persons cared to see the pastime.

A strong wind spoiled conditions today. The air was full of Mississippi soil and the athletes got chilled standing around.

Tinker took the entire Cub squad to the ball park in the morning and gave them an hour of batting drill. The same order will be in force Monday morning.

The Cleveland players sat in boxes to watch the show. It was a whole holiday for them. Every day since they started training they have had a half holiday, and they are in fine trim.

Manager Tinker made a switch in his batting order, moving Steve Yerkes up into second position. Steve had been hitting in recent games, but got nary a blow, while Lee Mann, who was shoved farther down, rapped out a pair.

BRAVES DOWN MACKS AGAIN.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 1.—The Boston Nationals scored five runs off Morrisette in the seventh inning today and easily defeated the Philadelphia Americans, 9 to 3. Boston outplayed the Athletics throughout. It was Boston's fourth over the Macks. The Braves' pitchers kept the Athletics' hits well scattered. Score:

SEMI-PRO CLUBS LOOK FORWARD TO BANNER YEAR

Union Giants vs. Rothschilds in Opener Today—Team After Old Cub Park.

BY J. J. ALCOCK.

Semipro and amateur ball clubs all over the city are lining up their forces for what is expected to be the greatest year baseball has enjoyed here since Jimmy Callahan had the Logan Squares. Officials of the Amateur Managers' league were elected last week. The Intercity body will complete arrangements for the season at a session tomorrow night, when officers will be chosen.

Anticipating fair weather today, the Chicago Union Giants and Rothschilds are waiting to start the ball rolling with a game at Milwaukee and Sawyer avenues. Dixon and Jenkins will hurl for the Giants, with Jenkins receiving. Lind and Vanderbusch will serve the slants for the Rothschilds and Singer will catch.

To Hold Intercity Games.

An intercity tournament between the Chicago and Cincinnati branches of the National Catholic Athletic association is one innovation planned for next fall. The suggestion for a series between the champions of the two sections came from the Buckeye organization. It aroused immediate enthusiasm in local circles, and it is hoped the contests may be arranged for next October. If the plan progresses favorably it probably will lead to various series of the same sort between cities in which the big amateur body is represented.

Some of the nines which competed last year in the local division of the N. C. A. A. have been slow in registering for the coming season. The tardy clubs may find themselves left out in the cold unless they get busy soon. Several new teams have applied for membership, and unless the old members get back they may find their berths and dates usurped by newcomers. The next meeting of the league will be held Tuesday evening at the Windsor-Clifton hotel.

Team After Old Cub Park.

Semipro magnates and players anticipate a boom in their end of the game if Frank McNichols succeeds in installing a club in the old Cub park on the west side. McNichols has secured permission from President Weeghman to stage a game there on April 16, but whether he will be allowed to use the park all season is not known. With the location and memories associated with the historic field, it is a certainty that a strong semipro club there would prove a great drawing card, and would help business for other teams that play behind fences.

Neal Kelly, and Jack Leary also expect to profit by the transferring of the Cubs to Weeghman's north side park. They have broken ground for their new plant at Albany avenue and Lake street, and plan to play their first game there within a few weeks. Already enough star players have been signed to insure them a strong club.

Thirty-five players have been ordered to report today at Garden City park, Kilpatrick avenue and Lake street, by Manager Billy Niesen of the new West Side club for the first practice of the season. Officials of the club have let contracts for grading and improving the playing field and for enlarging the seating capacity of the plant.

OTHER BASKET RESULTS.

St. Paul club lightweights trimmed the Royal basket team in the church gymnasium, 26 to 9. The St. Paul five would like to tackle the Marshall High school lightweights.

Christopher House juniors won a basketball game from Lincoln Turner juniors, 26 to 17, on the losers' floor. Schiemer's work won the game, this player making ten baskets.

West Side Braves outplayed Hebrew Institute Cubs at the latters' gymnasium, winning their basketball clash, 18 to 8.

Christ Church and Central Turner tossers battled for three fifteen minute halves and ended their game at the Turner hall with a tie, 4 to 4. The score was deadlocked at this score at the end of the second half and a playoff of five minutes lengthened into fifteen minutes, with neither able to score again, and the Turners asked to have the game ended.

Berry won a basketball game from North Shore Baracas, 5 to 4, at the Wilson Y. M. C. A. Close guarding kept the score down.

EXTEND BASEBALL TOURNEY.

Sectional winners of league championship races will be permitted to enter the Chicago amateur baseball title tourney, according to an announcement yesterday. It was pointed out that in some cases the league races would carry into September and October and those late dates would prevent the holding of the Chicago tourney. All leagues are requested to start their schedule early in May, so that play may be completed by the second week in August. At that time the battle to decide the best amateur nine in Chicago will start. This series is expected to be finished early in September to clear the decks for the national amateur title games.

JUNIOR BASEBALL TODAY.

Original Iroquois and Lincoln A. C. at Sixteenth and Forty-second avenue.

Hermitage Tigers and Alpines at Fiftieth and West Adams street.

Humboldt Feds and Keeler A. & P. club at Forty-first and Chicago.

Melrose Sox and St. Stanislaus at Buettner playgrounds.

Burnside Terriers and North Ends at Bessemer park.

Princeton Tigers and Johnson Greys at Washington park.

Roman Furniture and Junior Feds at Diversey and Milwaukee.

Clovers and Frankes at Hamilton park.

DE SOTO AND ST. PATRICK'S TO DECIDE TITLE TODAY.

Finals in the Knights of Columbus Indoor Baseball league will be completed this afternoon, when De Soto and St. Patrick's teams, northern and western division champions, play the deciding game. They are tied with two victories and one defeat each. The game will be played at Lincoln turner hall. The battery for De Soto will be Baggs and Vollmann and for St. Patrick's Dillon and Gilfeather.

THORPE SENT TO BREWERS FROM GIANTS BY M'GRAW.

Beaumont, Tex., April 1.—[Special.]—Jim Thorpe, the world's greatest all around athlete, and one of the greatest football players in all time, has passed from the National league, and this time he may have passed for good and all. Jim was released to the Milwaukee team, and although the transfer was made under the option agreement, the impression prevails that he will not be recalled.

OPEN SCHEDULE AT NOTRE DAME NEXT SATURDAY

Olivet to Be Opposition, Followed by Wisconsin, Michigan, and Illinois.

Notre Dame, Ind., April 1.—[Special.]—With the opening game of the hardest schedule ever arranged for a gold and blue baseball team only a week off, prospects for a successful season for the local nine are far from bright. The first game will be with Olivet Saturday. Harder games with Wisconsin, Michigan, and Illinois follow.

Coach Harper's biggest task was in building a new infield, and while the men for each position seem to have been about decided upon, the strength of the new combination is of course as yet untried. Kline, third baseman, who is the only survivor of last year's infield, is back at the same position. All the other corners of the infield will be filled by new men, although Motts of last year's infield will fight it out with Keenan, a youngster who graduated from the freshman nine, for the catcher's position.

Meyers Best at First Base.

"Chief" Meyers seems to have the first sack cinched. Spalding and Wolfe, a couple of promising sophomores, have the edge on their opponents for the second and shortstop positions, respectively.

Harper will have trouble in replacing Wells, last year's star southpaw, who was graduated, but he has a considerable quantity of high class right handers. Amongst these, Walsh, Edgren, Dorwin, and Murphy are expected to take care of the twirling.

Relay Team to Des Moines.

Notre Dame will send a relay team to the Drake relay races in Des Moines on April 22. The big events on the local card are the dual meets with Michigan and Michigan Agricultural college and the big Indiana state meet.

Purdue-Franklin Game Off.

Lafayette, Ind., April 1.—[Special.]—The Purdue-Franklin baseball game scheduled today was called off because of wet grounds.

LYNITE ALUMINUM PISTONS — for FORDS

What These Famous Light Pistons Will Do for Your Ford

It's the heavy cast-iron pistons in a motor that are responsible for so much of the vibration. That vibration is what causes the constant rattle and riding discomfort—many of the repair bills. Cut down the piston weight of your Ford two-thirds by installing LYNITE Aluminum Pistons and you'll get rid of vibration in proportion.

That's exactly what has been done in most of the new 1916 high-class cars. They are using LYNITE Aluminum Pistons.

Nothing increases the mechanical efficiency of the Ford motor like LYNITE Pistons—gives such extra snap, speed, power—means such quiet, smooth-running, lasting service.

These pistons are equipped with 12

LEAK-PROOF PISTON RINGS

—the rings that improve compression, save fuel and oil, reduce carbon.

Examine a Set

Drop in on your Garageman, Repairman or Dealer and examine a set of these LYNITE Pistons. Compare the weight of one of them with a Ford cast-iron piston. You'll be forced to admit the strength of our arguments. If your dealer hasn't LYNITE Pistons, write us for names of those who have.

FREE BOOKLET Write and learn more about these wonderful light weight pistons that have really revolutionized motor designing. Fully and simply described in "Pistons and Power." Gladly sent on request.

How Many Miles Are There in a Gallon of Gasoline?

That depends on the type of motor in your car.

When you buy a Buick Six Cylinder Valve-in-Head Motor Car, you not only get the last word in comfort, style, power and speed, BUT WE GUARANTEE THAT YOU GET AN AUTOMOBILE WHICH WILL GIVE YOU THE HIGHEST GASOLINE MILEAGE.

It is an admitted fact that the Valve-in-Head Motor does give 15% more power than any other type of gasoline motor which means 15% more mileage per gallon of gasoline.

This is not a theory but a fixed engineering principle resulting from the perfecting of the Buick Valve-in-Head motor.

Thousands of users of Buick Valve-in-Head Six Cylinder Cars give evidence daily that they are getting 20 miles or more per gallon of gasoline consumed while touring with full passenger load, and many users report over 25 miles per gallon.

Remember—cost of operation is a part of the cost of your car.

WITH THE PRICE OF GASOLINE GOING UP, THE ECONOMY OF THE BUICK VALVE-IN-HEAD CAR SHOULD MAKE IT YOUR PREFERENCE.

SCHAEFER WINS FROM CASSIGNOL IN GREAT FINISH

Gets Run of 107 and Lands Cue Match, 400 to 158; Frenchman Takes the Tourney.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Finishing with a superlative display, in which he counted 294 points in his last four innings, young Jake Schaefer defeated Firmin Cassignol, champion of France, 400 to 158, in the final match of the 18-2 tournament at Mussey's. He averaged 22 4-18 and tied the high run of 107, held by Cassignol, who averaged 9 5-17, with high run of 45.

The French champion won first prize with three wins and one loss. Cochran was second with two wins and two losses, and Schaefer third with one win and three defeats.

Recalls Father's Great Play.

Cassignol's poor form was due to sickness, and, in addition, he knocked the tip off his favorite cue just before starting. However, this does not detract from the great showing of Schaefer, who caught his real stroke, for the first time during the tournament, and played in a form which brought recollections to many of the old timers of the play of his illustrious father.

In the early stages Schaefer did not play well, and, in addition, the balls broke rather poorly for him; but after he got started the ivories were more kindly, and he gave a fine display. Several times when he was in trouble he extricated himself cleverly, his forty-first shot, in the fifteenth inning, being a two cushion massé half the length of the table.

Congratulations from Loser.

Nearing the finish his drives were almost perfect, and when he got the balls close he made few mistakes. Cassignol was the first to congratulate him.

At the end of fourteen innings Cassignol led, 115 to 106. Then Jake made 68 and missed a short massé. In his next inning he gathered 107 and seemed sure of getting high run, but missed a short left hand spread. Runs of 65 and 54, made with easy execution, took him out, the final inning being marked by several position drives which left the balls close. Score:

SCHAEFER—0 6 24 8 7 5 13 2 20 0 1 10 7 3 68 107 65 54—400. Average, 22 4-18; innings, 18; high run, 107.

CASSIGNOL—0 3 1 4 19 0 21 4 0 17 45 1 6 0 1 15 27—158. Average, 9 5-17; innings, 17; high run, 45.

NET BODY ELECTS LEADERS.

R. G. Umbright was chosen temporary president of the newly formed Chicago Public Parks Tennis association at its meeting in Hotel La Salle. L. H. Goldbright Jr. was elected secretary. The next meeting will be held Thursday, April 13, at which time all the clubs in the organization are expected to be registered. Those desiring information regarding the league should write to L. H. Goldbright Jr., 971 East Sixty-first street, or phone Blackstone 135.

West made a small slam.

It appears too simple for the publication, but in actual play west won the first trick with the queen of diamonds, and at trick three north switched to hearts and west failed to make the game. Because he was afraid of the heart suit west should have made diamonds as attractive as possible to the adversaries, and this feature of a deal should always be considered before play is made to the first trick.

Never false card, however, without a definite object in view or your play will be discounted by your adversaries.

A player should not refuse to win a trick fourth hand unless his reason is very good. The following deal from Lake Forest is an excellent example. The hands:

West secured ten tricks.

North held up the king of spades at trick two to fool the declarer. What he did was to completely fool his partner and ruin the latter's hand. Had north won the second trick and led any card in his hand except a club, west could not have secured the game. The three rounds of clubs taken by west were for the purpose of forcing heart discards, if possible.

STATE LEADERS SEEK BIG ENTRY FOR PIN GAMES

Hope to Have Toledo Marks Beaten When List Closes Wednesday Night.

Illinois bowlers are out after entries for the coming state tournament to beat the Toledo meet, which came to a climax on Wednesday night, when Sam Schliman, former Chicago player but now from Toronto, won the national individual title, rolling off with Ben Huesman of Cincinnati, who ran second, and Frank Shaw of Chicago, who ran third, after tying at 685 for the medal.

Entries Close Wednesday.

Entries will close to the I. B. A. meet on Wednesday at midnight, and many entries are awaiting Secretary Jake Mueller, the national assistant secretary, who reached home from Toledo this morning. Last year the tournament drew 420 five men teams, 970 doubles, and 1,935 individuals. There were 1,532 entries in the all events, but that contest has practically been abolished this year. Eliminating the nine game event, the tournament last year had a paid in prize list of some $9,000, and it promises to equal that mark this year.

If any lesson was taught by the Toledo meet it was that bowlers ought to study their single pin shots. More money was lost on the Toledo drives through missing single pins than from any other reason. "Dutch" Miller could have put the Detroit Journals ahead of the Barrys if he had not blown a single pin. Larry Sutton turned the same trick when he missed on his last shot also, holding the Wittman Doughnuts of Rochester to second place, while Larry Gazzolo missing the same way for Krantz Old Dutch team of Toledo, and the team missed three better places for exactly $100.

Missed Spares Costly.

How much money the minor event players lost by running past a lone pin will never be known, but almost any of the first five leaders in the doubles and singles could have won had they been absolutely accurate. The Toledo drives were the most even that have ever been laid, and the conduct of the big meet was better than had been shown at any former meet.

GIRL BREAKS SWIM MARKS.

Revere, Mass., April 1.—Marion Gibson of Boston, in capturing two titles at the annual indoor swimming championship meet of the New England Amateur Athletic union tonight, broke the record for women in the 50 yard and 220 yard events. She covered the 50 yards in :33 and the 220 yards in 3:45 3-5.

WHIST QUERY.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—One of declarant's adversaries leads the ace of hearts out of turn; may the declarant allow the rightful leader to lead any card he chooses and call the ace of hearts an exposed card? Asking the offender to lead the exposed card first time he is in, or asking him to play it, should declarant be in and lead a heart? A. G. P.

Answer—Yes to all questions.

J. LINO WINS LEG ON GUN TROPHY

With a score of 91 out of 100 J. Lino won a leg on the championship trophy at the Chicago Yacht club traps yesterday. F. U. Roseberry was high with 97, but not being a member of any Cook county gun club he was not eligible. U. J. Herrmann tied with Lino and won the shoot-off, but he donated the trophy and was not competing for it. Following are the scores:

100 targets—F. U. Roseberry, 97; U. J. Herrmann, 91; J. Lino, 91; C. Burmeister, 87; Leffingwell, 82; P. Petersen, 81; G. Cameron, 77; J. Campbell, 71; W. Bosley, 70; George Clinch, 70; C. Francis, 53.

25 targets—C. Burmeister, 25; Herrmann, 24; Lino, 23; Roseberry, 22; Cameron, 22; Leffingwell 21; Petersen, 20; Campbell, 20; McNally, 20; Parkin, 17; Wilson, 13; Francis, 17; Bosley, 21; Clinch, 16; Jones, 10.

MORAN FIGHT JUSTIFIES JESS

force behind it to leave a sting. If Willard hadn't been a good left jabber his chances of beating the Pittsburgher would have been sadly decreased, for as early as the second round he practically put his right hand out of commission when he landed on one of Moran's elbows, breaking the index finger of the hand.

For the last eight rounds Willard was forced to do most of the damage with his left, although he did use the damaged right when it became necessary. There were times when he had to use the right to "cover up" on Moran, so that Frank wouldn't get wise to the fact that it was damaged. The injury is not at all serious and will be healed in a short time, so once more Willard may say "I should worry."

This battle by Willard plainly shows that a good little man cannot beat a good big man. Willard has everything that Moran has in ring repertoire and a little bit more. With his physical advantages he copped the honors in nine of the ten rounds, one being termed an even affair.

Once more Willard is going out to get the easy money. He has contracted to start on another tour with a circus, his salary to be $1,000 a week for a period of forty weeks. Pretty soft? But after that what will he do? His financial girth by that time will resemble that of some of our bloated bondholders, and as he really does not care to fight, it would not be at all surprising to see him retire from the ring with the title just as Jim Jeffries did many years ago.

BOSTON TAKES HOCKEY TITLE

Boston, Mass., April 1.—Boston Athletic association skaters tonight won the championship of the National Amateur Hockey league by defeating St. Nicholas Hockey club of New York, 7 goals to 0. Boston stopped the St. Nicholas offensive in mid-ice by a combination of five men abreast, which had even Hobey Baker, the New York star, helpless. The few shots that went past this combination were checked easily by the secondary defense. Donahue, the Boston goal tender, had only ten stops.

Boston fairly peppered the St. Nicholas goal, and most of the play was in front of the cage. The work of Ray Skilton for Boston was spectacular, placing his goal from the middle of the rink.

PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality

Will You Be One of the 106?

During the month of April we shall have precisely 106 Paige "Fairfields" to sell in the city of Chicago—no more and no less.

When you stop to consider that April is the first real month of Spring, this supply of cars appears woefully inadequate.

Furthermore, when you learn how many "Fairfields" we have sold during the winter, you will readily agree that these 106 cars will not begin to supply the demand. Some prospective purchasers are bound to be disappointed. This seems inevitable.

Such being the case, we feel that it is only justice to give you an exact statement of the situation, and offer every man and woman in Chicago a chance to secure one of these cars—on the impartial basis of "first come, first served."

Here, then, are the facts:

Our regular factory allotment of the Paige Fairfield Model "Six-46" called for 125 cars during April.

Up to Thursday, March 30th, we had already made 119 bona fide sales—with cash deposits paid and delivery dates specified.

Simple arithmetic will show you that this left only six Fairfields available for the entire month of April—not enough to even take care of a normal day's business.

Then—fully realizing the acuteness of the situation—our Mr. George Bird promptly made a trip to the Paige factory in Detroit. He went there with the firm intention of staying until a special allotment could be secured—and he succeeded.

One hundred Paige "Fairfields" is the extra allotment that has been granted us, and these cars are already beginning to arrive in Chicago.

So we are now in position to make 106 "immediate deliveries." For the time being, at least, we can execute orders on any delivery dates that our customers may specify.

But, please don't underestimate the importance of this announcement. The special allotment of 106 "Fairfields" will not—cannot—last very long. And—with the factory at Detroit fairly deluged with orders—there is no possibility of securing a single extra car before May 1st.

Remember, we shall accept orders with absolute impartiality—and fill them in the same way. It is strictly a case of "First come—first served"—so long as the cars last.

So, now is the time to decide. Will you be one of the 106?

Brief Specifications "Six-46"

Motor Six cylinder; cast en bloc from special grade gray iron; bore 3½ in.; stroke, 5¼ in. Crank case aluminum, lower half pressed steel.

Valves On right side. Valve heads are nickel steel welded to 20.30 carbon steel stems. Valve mechanism enclosed by aluminum covers and runs in oil.

Crank Shaft Special drop forged crank shaft steel, heat treated and ground, provided with three bearings, 2¼ in. diameter. Accurately balanced.

Cam Shaft Carbon steel drop forging with integral cams, heat treated, hardened and ground. Cam shaft runs in three liberal die-cast bearings.

Connecting Rods Are I-beam sections .35 carbon steel, drop forged, heat treated.

Transmission Three speeds forward and reverse, in an aluminum case at rear of motor. Transmission gears and shafts are chrome nickel steel, heat treated and ground. Shafts mounted on annular ball and Hyatt high duty roller bearings. Oil capacity, 2 quarts.

Clutch Multiple disc with cork inserts, enclosed in fly-wheel and running in oil.

Lubrication Positive force feed and splash. Plunger pump operated from cam shaft forces oil to main bearings and helical timing gears. Oil in troughs provides splash for pistons, cylinders, cam shaft and cams. Capacity, 8 quarts.

Cooling Water cooling with centrifugal pump. Ball bearing fan mounted at front of motor. Zig-zag cellular radiator, 15 per cent more capacity and more efficient. Capacity, 7½ gallons.

Frame High carbon strip steel, channel section, 4 in. deep, 3-in. flange, 5-32 in. thick, narrowed in front with drop in front of rear axle.

Springs Special spring steel stock, heat treated. Front: semi-elliptic, 36 in. long by 2 in. wide. Rear: cantilever type, 48 in. long, 2½ in. wide.

Brakes Two sets of brakes, working on steel drums 14 in. in diameter. Brake bands 2 in. face, internal expanding, external contracting.

Axles Front: one-piece, I-beam section; drop forged, heat treated, ball bearing spindles. Rear: floating type, axle shafts and differential mounted on Hyatt high duty roller bearings. Torque arm relieves springs from torque strains.

Wheels Wood, artillery type; 34 in. in diameter; 12 spokes front and rear. Demountable rims; set of five Houk wire wheels and wheel carrier, $90 extra.

Tires Goodyear or Firestone, 34x4 in. Safety tread on rear.

Wheel Base 124 in. Tread, standard, 56-in.

Steering Gear Jacox irreversible screw and split sleeve type; adjustable for all wear; 18-in. one-piece wheel with corrugated inside edge. Horn button in center of wheel above spark and throttle levers.

Gasoline Supply Gravity feed tank located under shroud dash. Capacity, 14.7 gallons.

Carburetion Rayfield, water jacketed and fitted with hot air intake tube. Dash adjustment.

Starting Gray & Davis separate motor of up-to-date design.

Lighting Gray & Davis separate generator with automatic electrical cut-out.

Ignition Remy high tension distributor and Willard 6-volt battery.

Standard Colors Paige-Richelieu blue, red wheels, all models; nickel trimmings.

ROCAP COMPARES SCIENCE IN RING WITH STRENGTH

Recalls Rise of Corbett with Its Defeat of John L. Sullivan for the Title.

BY WILLIAM H. ROCAP.

"A rolling stone gathers no moss. Now mind that, Jim, and go back to your desk in the bank." That was the reply that James J. Corbett's father gave him in answer to a plea for money enough to go to New Orleans to meet Jake Kilrain before the Southern Athletic club. It was to be a six round bout for points, in which the winner was to receive $3,500.

Jim needed money for his fare and incidental expenses. It was twenty-six years ago last month, before rich purses and attendant expense allowances were even dreamed of. Jim's father was a prosperous livery stable keeper. He finally yielded to his son's plea. The money was forthcoming and the admonition was repeated before Jim stepped on the train for the Crescent City.

The result of the bout now is history. Corbett won by a city block and the referee, R. Violett, had no hesitancy in giving him the decision. Corbett weighed 183; Kilrain, 201. They boxed with five ounce gloves, and the California bank clerk fairly smothered the ex-oarsman.

Sends Money Back to Father.

Immediately Corbett had donned his street attire he rushed to the telegraph office and wired his father the expense money advanced with liberal interest. On his return home he was met at the station by a crowd of admiring friends, his father, mother, and brother. Dad was the first to greet him. He threw his arms around the young fellow's neck (for Corbett was only 23 years of age) and with eyes welling up with tears of joy ejaculated: "Shure, my boy, it's the roving bee that gathers the honey. We are all proud of you."

That incident was the beginning of Corbett's real ring career, although prior to that he had fought two vicious battles with Joe Choynski. The first bout was on May 30, 1889, with two ounce gloves, near Fairfax, Cal. It was stopped by the police in the fourth round. The fight was resumed on June 5 on a barge near Benecia, Cal. Choynski wore skin-tight gloves, while Corbett's hands were incased in two ounce mitts. He won from Choynski in the twenty-eighth round. On July 15 of the same year he outpointed Choynski in a four round bout in San Francisco.

Corbett Shows Cleverness.

After the Kilrain contest Corbett's cleverness became the talk of the country. He was a gradaute of the Olympic School of Boxing and had what might be termed a perfect defense. He boxed a three round exhibition with Mike Donovan in New York March 20, 1890, and on April 14 of the same year made Dominick McCaffrey look like a novice in a four round bout in Brooklyn.

Then came his famous sixty-one round battle with Peter Jackson, the Australian heavyweight. It was regarded as the most remarkable contest of modern times. Corbett stood 6 feet 1 inch in height and weighed 182 pounds. Jackson was 6 feet ¼ inch tall and scaled 198 pounds. The winner was to receive $8,500 and the loser $1,500. For more than five hours these two physical giants matched their cunning and skill against each other.

Seeks Sullivan's Crown.

To match his skill against Sullivan's brawn, strength, experience, and hitting powers, a four round exhibition was arranged in San Francisco, the men to box in evening dress. The bout duly came off on June 26, 1891, and the youngster gave the veteran of the ring a boxing lesson.

Now the world's title was his goal. The match with Sullivan was made March 15, 1892, and Corbett began training at Loch Armor, N. J., adjoining Asbury Park. Sullivan selected Canoe Place Inn Shinnecock Light, at the upper end of Long island, as his training quarters.

The victory of the youngster over the champion of champions on Sept. 7, 1892, was a ring sensation. It virtually impoverished hundreds throughout the country. It was another triumph for science and skill against brute strength, coupled with a knowledge of boxing. It was youth and speed being served.

Rise of "Ruby Bob."

Bob Fitzsimmons, who by his dethronement of Jack Dempsey became the premier middleweight of the world, was regarded as a pugilistic marvel. He waded through the middleweights like a Kansas cyclone. There were none left to meet him, and he was obliged to box light heavyweights and even men thirty pounds heavier than himself.

But the Cornishman was there with the wallop, and the man he hit on the jaw usually was sent to dreamland. He was not a gymnasium made boxer. He was a natural born fighter, and his strength and hitting powers were not acquired by the use of pulley weights and the punching bag, but swinging the hammer over an anvil and working the blower of a forge.

Fitz Defeats Them All.

For nine years he met any man who could be lured into the ring with him and beat them all, having won the middle and heavy weight titles of the world. The latter he only held two years, until James J. Jeffries came along and dethroned him. In this instance it was triumph of youth and brute strength against science and skill, for Jeffries was only 24 years old, while Fitzsimmons had turned the thirty-seventh milestone in life. As a middleweight Fitzsimmons was never defeated in this country.

Now we come to the greatest masters of ring craft who ever graced American pugilistic history—Joe Gans and George Dixon. The writer couples them because their careers were guided along the same lines. Both died with tuberculosis brought on by excesses in training, not by any excesses in living, because both were temperate in eating and drinking. Each was a credit to the ring. They were exponents of science, although both were hard hitters.

JESS WILLARD, FATHER AND SON

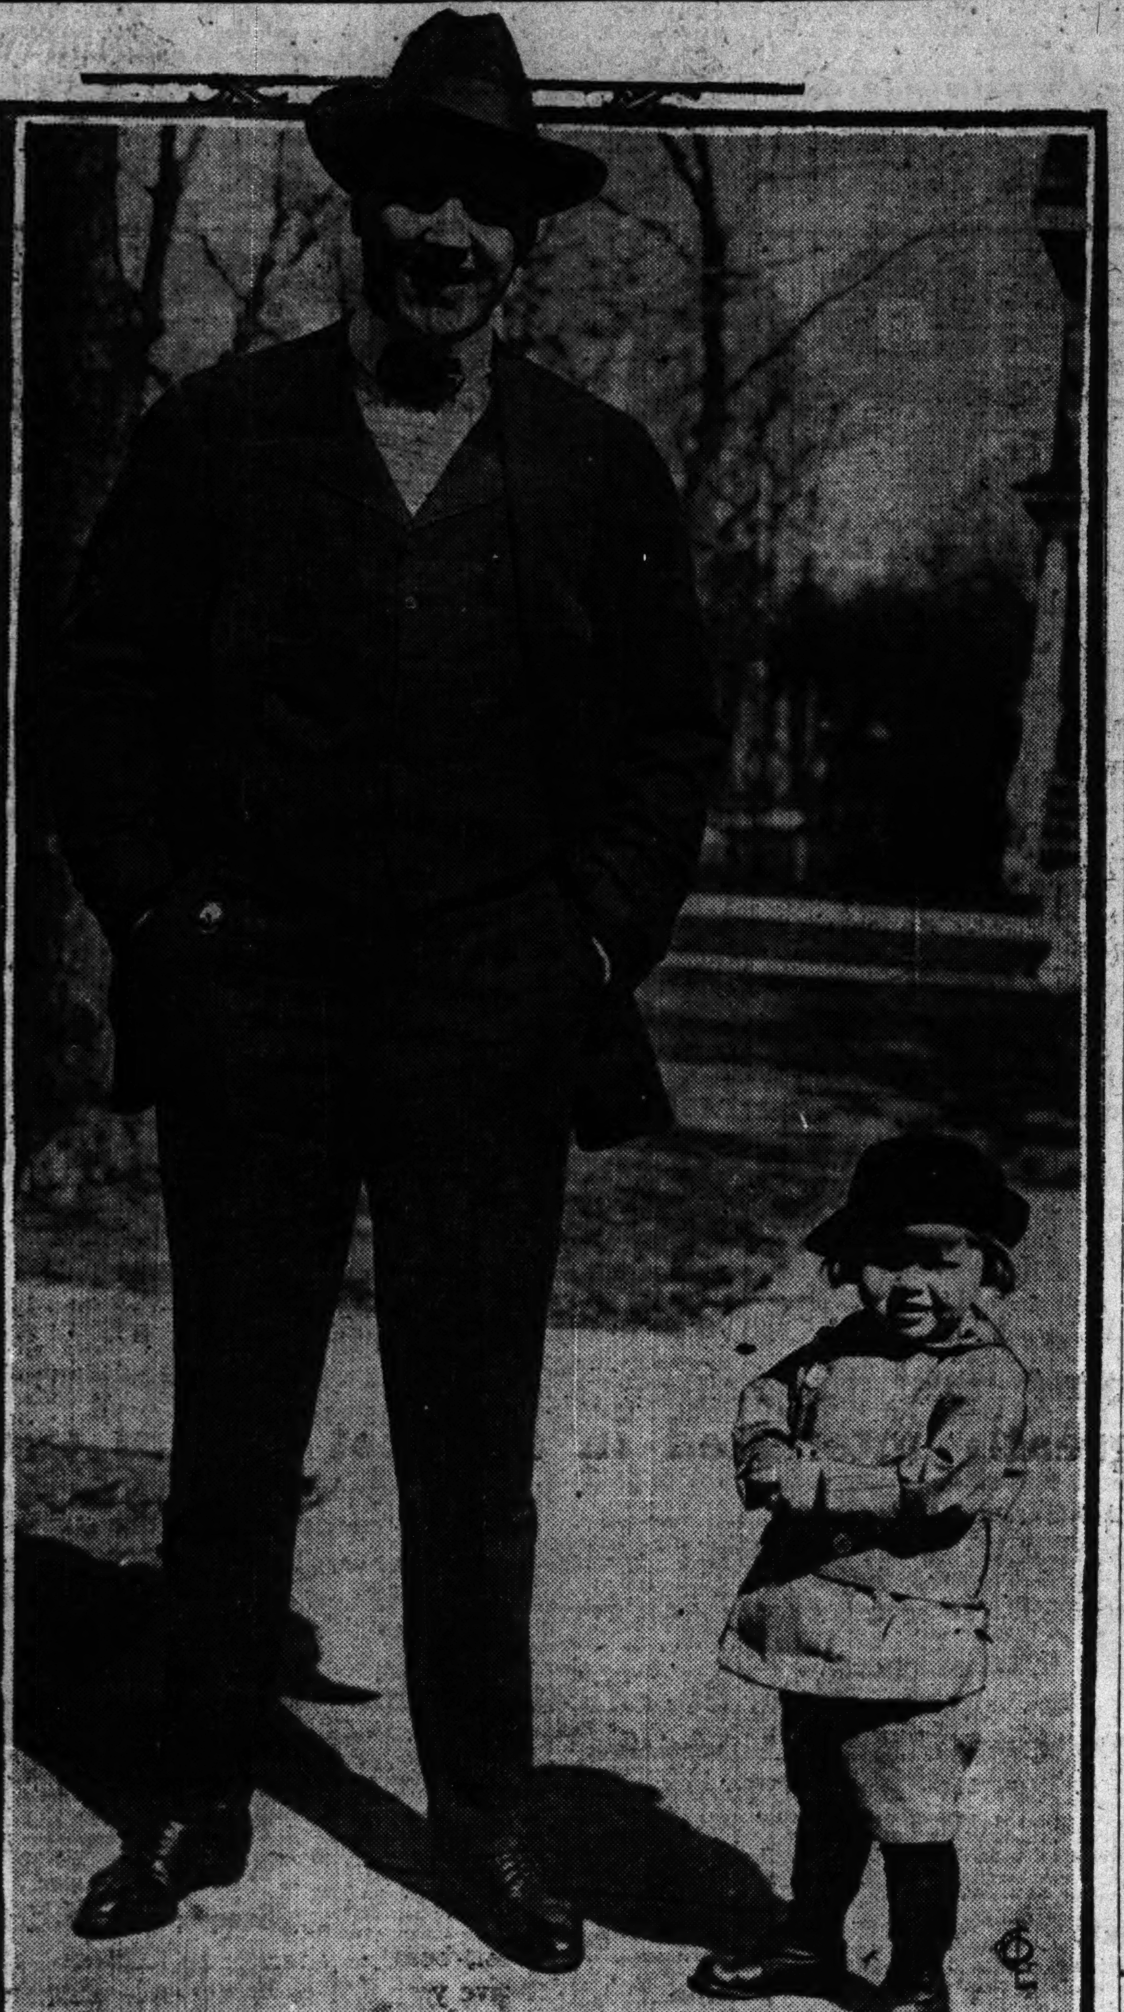
Champion Heavyweight Pugilist Does Not Wish His Sturdy Offspring to Follow In His Footsteps.



THERE are two Jess Willards. One is heavyweight champion of the world and 29 years old; the other has nearly reached his third milestone and, of course, hasn't decided which line of endeavor to follow to gain fame, but if his daddy has anything to say about it he will not be a fighting man. The accompanying photograph, snapped by THE TRIBUNE photographer at the champion's home in Rogers Park, shows how big Jess and little Jess size up. The champion extends 6 feet 6 inches skyward. Little Jess is—well, look for yourself.

WHITE ENDS TRAINING FOR KANSAS CITY GO

BY KNOCKOUT.

Charley White, the local lightweight, finished local training at O'Connell's yesterday for his fifteen round decision contest to be held in Kansas City on April 6. Charley boxed eight rounds with three different sparring partners, and will leave for the battle ground tomorrow, accompanied by Manager Nate Lewis.

The fighter's manager has received several offers for White's services from eastern promoters. The matchmaker of the Olympic A. C. of Philadelphia wants White to meet Benny Leonard over the six round route about the middle of the month. White has been guaranteed $3,500, but, according to Lewis, Benny does not want any of White's game. New York and Boston promoters want White to box, but Lewis said he will not close any matches until the Welsh match is over.

According to a message received from New York, Champion Freddie Welsh and Manager Harry Pollok left the eastern city yesterday for Chicago. The champion is scheduled to meet Ritchie Mitchell in the Milwaukee auditorium next Friday night.

The complete card for the boxing show at Kenosha Thursday night was announced yesterday as follows: Jack Hemple vs. Lee Nelson, heavyweights, 10 rounds; Rabbit Hedlin vs. Bitter Root Kid, 135 pounds, 10 rounds; Eddie Tancel vs. Mickey Anderson, 139 pounds, 6 rounds; Young Stromberg vs. Johnnie Warsback, 135 pounds, 6 rounds.

STECHER TRAINING HARD.

Joe Stecher, the Nebraska wonder, is expected to get the toughest battle of his life Friday night when he tackles Bill Hokuf of Chicago at the Coliseum wrestling show. That Stecher respects the ability of his rival is shown by the manner in which he is preparing for this contest. It is said that he has trained harder than for any other bout. Hokuf will have a thirty pound advantage. The remainder of the card also is attractive. Charles Cutler will meet John Freiberg and Ben Reuben, former amateur champion, will oppose Louis Talaber.

"TRIBUNE" DECISIONS

At Philadelphia—Billy De Foe beat Eddie Morgan (6); Eddie Wallace beat Tommy Buck (6); Harry Baker beat Al McCoy (6); Johnny Tillman and Buck Fleming fought a draw (6); Johnny Loughrey beat Knckout Sampson (6).

At Memphis—Jack Russo knocked out Jack Ryan (5).

$15 JOKE ON KID HOWARD.

Racine, Wis., April 1.—Howard Carr of Chicago, manager of Ever Hammer, who last night fought Ad Wolgast, got into a dispute with William Buelow of Milwaukee, an official sent here by the state athletic board to weigh in the boxers and count the proceeds of the fight. In sidestepping the irate promoter, Buelow fell and Carr jumped on the prostrate man and punished him severely before he was pulled off. Carr was arraigned in police court today and fined $15 and costs.

DE FOE VICTOR OVER MORGAN

Philadelphia, Pa., April 1.—[Special.]—Billy De Foe of St. Paul defeated Eddie Morgan, the English featherweight, in six fast rounds at the National A. C. tonight. In the other bouts Eddie Wallace of Brooklyn won from Tommy Buck of Philadelphia; Harry Baker of Wilmington defeated Al McCoy of Brooklyn; Johnny Tillman of Milwaukee drew with Buck Fleming, and Johnnie Loughrey beat Knockout Samson. The latter two are Philadelphia boys.

Russo Knocks Out Ryan.

Memphis, Tenn., April 1.—[Special.]—Jack Russo of New Orleans knocked out Jack Ryan, Brooklyn featherweight, in the fifth round of an eight round fight tonight.

THREE BOUTS TO NET FRED FULTON $50,000

Minneapolis, Minn., April 1.—Fred Fulton, Minnesota heavyweight, has signed a contract with a syndicate of five New York promoters, including Tex Rickard and Billy Gibson, to meet three fighters in New York for $50,000 according to an announcement here today by Mike Collins, Fulton's manager, on his return from New York.

The first fight will be with Al Reich on April 28, or May 6; the second with Jim Coffey, or Frank Moran at a date yet to be selected, and the third on Labor day, with a man to be picked by the promoters.

Collins declared the syndicate had put up $10,000 to bind the contract and that Fulton had deposited $1,000 forfeit money.

RICKARD NOT IN SYNDICATE.

New York, April 1.—Tex Rickard denied tonight that he was interested in any way in a syndicate which a Minneapolis story claims has signed a contract under which Fred Fulton will meet three heavyweight fighters in this city for a purse of $50,000. Rickard said he expected to sail in a few weeks for South America, where he had business interests.

"I have not been asked to join any fight promotion syndicate here," added Rickard. "If I were asked I should not put a dollar in it. I don't know how long I will be in South America. At any rate, I shall not bother about the fight game until my return. I have no definite plans for the future."

TWO BOUTS DRAW $179,611.

New York, April 1.—Fight fans, most of them of New York, paid $179,611 within one week to see two scraps. The mills were the Willard and Moran battle of one week ago and the Welsh-Leonard lightweight championship bout last night. It is the greatest amount paid in one week since the Frawley law legalizing ten round, no decision bouts went into effect Aug. 31, 1911. The state's share of the gate was $13,401.08. The receipts were divided $151,254 for the Willard-Moran fight and $28,357 for the bout in which Leonard outpointed Welsh.

KID SWIMMERS MEET IN RELAY RACES AT C. A. A.

Willard Team Wins Final, with Wilmette Second—Lane Cops Prep Event.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Emulating the example of THE TRIBUNE, which directed a skating carnival for youngsters last winter, the Chicago Athletic association staged swimming relay races for grammar school boys in its pool last night.

It was the first race of the kind ever held between teams of grammar schools. So anxious were the contestants that they did not heed the commands of Starter Martin Delaney, but went into the water long before the gun shot. Naturally the mental and physical efforts tired them to a certain degree, but when the final shot was fired they plowed through the water with energy.

Willard Team Wins Relay.

First place in the 160 yard relay for grammar schools was won by Willard. Wilmette was second and Lane third. The winners covered the distance, 160 yards, with four swimmers on a team, each swimming forty yards, in 1:49 4-5. It was an interesting race from start to finish, and there was little to choose among the teams. Although defeated, Wilmette, which won the second heat, established a new grammar school record of 1:46 for the distance.

The Lane quartet won the first heat, with Carter Practice in second place. First place in the next brush went to Wilmette, with Willard a close second.

Lane Wins Prep Contest.

Lane won a touch victory over Hyde Park in the city high school 240 yard relay. Hyde Park led until within ten yards of the final wall, when Town of the winners touched the marble a fraction of a second before Bennett, who swam last for Hyde Park.

The intercity high school and academy 240 yard relay championship went to Evanston academy. New Trier was second and Evanston Township High school third. The judges had a hard time reaching a decision because some of them thought the members of the winning teams did not pick up their men properly at the end of each relay. After a lengthy conference they decided to allow the race to stand as swum.

Results in Other Races.

Leo Handy of the Brookline Gymnasium A. C. won the special 50 yard back stroke, with Leslie Jones of the Illinois A. C. in second place. The invitation 50 yard breast stroke was won by G. H. Taylor of the C. A. A., and Kenneth Huszagh of the same organization won the invitation 50 yard swim. Following are the summaries:

Grammar school relay, 160 yards, first heat—Won by Lane; Carter Practice, second. Time, 2:04.

Second heat—Won by Wilmette; Willard, second. Time, 1:46. [Grammar school record.]

Final heat—Won by Willard [Richard Greenburg, Jerome Greenburg, Harry Cohn, Herbert Deahy]; Wilmette second; Lane, third. Time, 1:49 4-5.

50 yard backstroke, invitation—Won by Leo Handy, Brookline Gymnasium A. C.; L. Jones, I. A. C., second; D. Scoles, Northwestern university, third. Time, :32.

City high school relay, 240 yards—Won by Lane Tech [Shaughnessey, Heth, Topp, Town]; Hyde Park, second. Time, 2:29 3-5. [Two starters.]

Intercity high and preparatory school championship, 240 yards—Won by Evanston academy [Hayford, Davidson, McKensie, R. Huszagh]; New Trier H. S., second; Evanston Township H. S., third. Time, 2:13 4-5.

50 yard breaststroke, invitation—Won by Taylor, C. A. A.; Scoles, Northwestern university, second; Vacin, I. A. C., third. Time, :32.

50 yard swim, invitation—Won by K. Huszagh, C. A. A.; Handy, Brookline Gymnasium A. A., second; A. Siegel, I. A. C., third. Time, :25 2-5.

Lee, 74; Dr. Hooper, 79; Dr. Schaffer, 82.

SOME HAIRS from the TIGER'S TAIL and OTHER TALES

by Sam Summerfield

ONE of the most unique and interesting figures of the old racing days was Fred Wallbaum, erstwhile proprietor of the Guttenburg and Saratoga race tracks, bookmaker, and member of the Metropolitan Turf association, the famous "Mets."

Wallbaum possessed shrewdness and business acumen above the average, wit and a power of repartee truly brilliant, and as kindly a disposition as ever found lodgment in a human breast.

His pronounced German accent and some slight eccentricity of manners made him the central figure in numberless sparkling stories and anecdotes.

A follower of the bangtails of the time mentioned above was a little roly-poly fellow who was known as "Grif." During a racing season at Saratoga he induced Wallbaum to "stake" him to a bank roll to make book with. At the end of his first day's efforts Wallbaum strolled over to inquire as to his success.

"Well, Grif," he said, genially, "vat did you done today?"

"O," was the nonchalant reply, "we lost a little."

"So? How much you lose?"

"O, somewhere around a thousand," Grif answered carelessly.

The following evening Wallbaum was around once more to investigate.

"Vell, liddle feller, how it vas today?" he propounded.

"Ain't struck my stride yet, Mr. Wallbaum," was the reply. "I quit a little loser."

"So? How much you lose dis time?"

"O, I guess a trifle over twelve hundred or so."

The third day's results were about the same as the other two.

At the conclusion of the fourth day's racing Grif jumped off the block to meet his backer.

"Well, I got 'em today, Mr. Wallbaum. I knew they couldn't beat me all the time," he chirped jubilantly.

"Ah, so; you beat 'em today? Hey? You haf a goot day? Yes?"

"Pretty good; pretty good," came the self-satisfied answer.

"Vell, dat's goot. Py de vay, how much you vin, anyhow?"

"Pretty near four hundred," replied the bookmaker proudly.

Wallbaum eyed his protégé curiously. "Grif," he finally announced, slowly and deliberately, "you're a goot liddle feller, you're a fine liddle feller, you're a shmart liddle feller, ain't it? But I tink you work too hard; you need a rest, you should haf a vacation. I tell you vat I do. If you vant to go to Europe for a holiday I buy you a ticket—one vay!"

One of Wallbaum's employés while booking around New York was a harum scarum sort of a chap, named Max Adler, who was used principally as betting commissioner.

One day booking at Gravesend, the genial German came up to the last race about $6,000 loser and he was pondering earnestly how to recoup and get out.

Just then old "Pa" Bradley came along and made him a small bet on his entry, Iceberg, which was at 30 to 1.

Like a flash the idea struck the bookmaker that here was his chance. A few hundred dollars invested in tickets on this horse, if he could win, would more than even up the previous losses of the day.

Turning to his cashier, Wallbaum whispered: "Say, gif Max tree hunnert tollers to pet on Iceberk."

Now it happened that the favorite in this race was a horse named Vosburgh and Wallbaum usually was a favorite player. Anyway, the commissioner got his orders mixed and bet the $300 on the 8 to 5 shot. Iceberg won and Wallbaum, who had been out watching the race, returned to his block in great glee.

"Vell," he exclaimed, puffing out his chest defiantly. "I guess dey can beat dis Dutchman all de time? Hey? Vat?" Then, leaning over to the sheet writer, "How much ve vin to dis?"

The clerk looked up in surprise. "Win?" he asked; "why you don't win at all. You lose."

The bookmaker flew in a rage. "Say, you tam little shnip," he shouted; "vat you mean? Iss you drawing $10 a day to kit me?"

"Why no, Mr. Wallbaum, you didn't bet on Iceberg. You bet on Vosburgh."

The German's face turned purple, and he choked and gasped for breath.

"Vere iss dot Mox? Vere iss dot shcoundrel?" he finally blurted out.

But that worthy had overheard enough of the conversation to convince him that was no place for him and had silently hied him hence. Dreading his employer's just wrath he did not return to the track the next day, nor the next, nor for any number of days thereafter. Finally, one day in the city he and the boss he had deserted met face to face.

"Vy, Mox," Wallbaum exclaimed, cordially, "vere you pin? Vy you don't come out to de drack?"

"I've been sick, Mr. Wallbaum," replied Adler, weakly.

"So you vas sick? Dot's too pad. Vas you very sick? Iss you sick yet?"

"Yes, I'm still pretty bad off," was the mournful reply.

"Say, Mox," inquired the bookmaker, casually, "vill you do me a favor?"

"Of course, Mr. Wallbaum."

"Vell, dan, go die," roared his former employer. "I'll sent you more flower den vas effer seen py a funeral in Manhattan."

Wallbaum was booking at the Ingleside track at Frisco and a jumping race was next on the card. His outside man, a gent named Isaacs, brought him the information that the favorite, as they say in racing parlance, was "dead," or, expressed in plain English, was not intended to win.

The opening price was 8 to 5, and Wallbaum immediately put up 2 to 1, only to notice that his neighbor was laying 3 to 1. Rubbing, he started to chalk up four when the lookout informed him there was five, and he changed it to six. In a few minutes the news pervaded the ring, and the price soared like a rocket, with the public refusing to bet a dollar. Wallbaum disgustedly quit at fifteen.

"Dot's a fine lobster you pringed me," he snorted at his assistant.

Just then a swarthy featured Brazilian meandered up and extended two silver dollars to the man on the block.

"Deeza, deeza, deeza one," he gurgled, pointing to the disgraced favorite.

Wallbaum eyed him critically. "You want to bet on dis vun?" he asked, pointing to the morgue candidate.

"Ya, ya, deeza one, deeza one," wheezed the foreigner.

"But, my frent, dot vun iss a lopster," exclaimed the bookmaker placidly.

"Ya, ya, deeza one, deeza one, two doll," persisted the bettor.

"My frent, you don't shpeak English?" questioned Wallbaum earnestly.

"No, no."

"Unt also you don't undershtand English?"

"No, no."

"Dot's vot I t'ot, because even if you couldn't shpeak English if you shust could undershtand it efery sucker on de race drack vould haf told you dis iss a lopster. I keep your $2 because, if not, somepody else vould take it avay from you anyvay."

"Lame Hughesey" was making book for Wallbaum at Guttenburg during part of the time when the latter was the chief owner of the celebrated hill top track.

One day a race came up, a high weight handicap, in which the weights ranged from 160 pounds down to 100. The magnate came over and informed his bookmaker that the top weight was a good thing and not to write a ticket on him, but Hughesey demurred, on the ground that the horse packed too big a load.

"Neffer mind," the genial German counseled, with a knowing wink, "He vill valk in."

Nevertheless the bookie stubbornly took a good fall out of him, and to further complicate matters the nag won, just as his adviser had predicted, in a common canter. After the race Wallbaum came over, jubilant and all smiles.

"Vell, vat did I tolt you," he cried. "You beat it good, hey?"

"No, I didn't," replied Hughesey, sourly. "I lost plenty."

"You lost? And blenty?" queried the boss in astonishment. "Vat's de matter mit you, hey?"

"Well, I didn't think he could carry all that weight and win," was the reluctant answer.

"You tam fool," bellowed Wallbaum, in a voice loud enough to be heard in the next county; "you misserable idiotic, iss you de clerk uff de shcales or did you see him veighed?"

TAKES OPTION ON SPEEDWAY'S COMMON STOCK

David F. Reid, president of the Speedway Park association, has secured option on all the common stock of the organization which was held by contractors. This stock constituted all ordinary shares outstanding, all other securities being the members' certificates, which are in units of twenty-five shares with the members' cards.

Reid stated that while he had a gentleman's agreement regarding this stock, which the contractors were given in part payment for the construction work, it was only recently that final terms were made and the papers signed. He also stated that the option has been taken by him in the interest of the association, and that these ordinary shares will be converted into membership certificates.

The association now has some 500 active members, who have absorbed over 2,000 membership certificates. On the new basis it would seem that the active membership would be limited to about 1,500.

VOLLEY TITLE TO CENTRAL Y

Central Y. M. C. A. won the Amateur Athletic federation volley ball championship by trimming the West Side "Y" Bearcats in the tourney final at the losers' gym last night, 42 to 22. Eight teams competed in the tournament. It was the first time in four years that Central and West Side "Y" have met in an athletic contest because of the Y. M. C. A. rule, which favors intramural rather than interclub competition.

Indiana Grapplers Winners.

Lafayette, Ind., April 1.—Indiana university defeated Purdue in an intercollegiate wrestling meet here tonight by a score of 17 to 7. Indiana men secured three falls, Purdue earned one decision, and two events resulted in draws.

FIELD FLOODED; SOCCER SQUADS TRANSFER TILTS

Owing to an overtaxed sewer, the McDuff football field at Forty-eighth avenue and Sixteenth street is flooded and the two international soccer matches carded there this afternoon have been transferred to the Chicago Americans' field at Forty-second and Chicago avenues. This can be reached in fifteen minutes from the McDuff field.

In the opening game at 2 o'clock a combined team of Swedes, Norsemen, and Danes will meet a team chosen from the Slavs, Poles, and Hungarians. The first team has been picked mostly from the Frams and Chicago Swedish, while the latter will be composed of players from the Hungarian and Bohemian clubs. Following are the teams:

Swedes-Norsemen-Danes—C. Andersen, A. Johnson, T. Gustavson, J. Lundin, T. Schau, A. Carlson, T. Rossing, T. Gabrielson, G. Pihl, A. Karkow, W. Karkow.

Hungarians-Bohemians—Swartz, J. Albrecht, Dita, F. Simandl, Varys, Mager, Cunat, Marek, Szanto, Strejeck, Buresh.

Scotch-Irish—Shea, W. Paul, Ross, McKay, Lawson, Peat, Powers, Corrie, Robertson, Graham, Truesdale.

English-Welsh—Linley, Edwards, Bromley, Curtis, Kilshaw, Hawke, G. Pollitt, Halsall, Kebbie, Oliver, McCarthy.

Two games also are scheduled in the Peel cup competition, Slavia meeting Pullman at Pullman, and the Bricklayers going to Joliet to meet the Steel company team. Atkinson will referee at Pullman, the game starting at 3 o'clock.

The United States Football association has awarded the match in the semi-final round for the national amateur soccer championship between Pullman and Bethlehem to Chicago. It will be played April 16, the ground not having been selected yet. Word of the award was wired last night by Secretary Cahill from New York to Vice President P. J. Peel.

CRANE TECH WINS EVANSTON MEET; PURPLE SECOND

High Schoolers Take Honors In Y. M. C. A. Games by Three Points.

BY EVAN STONE.

Crane Technical High school with 24 points won the ninth indoor athletic meet held under the auspices of the Evanston Y. M. C. A. in Patten gymnasium last night. Northwestern university was second with 21 and Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A. third with 20.

Lewis of Crane took individual honors with 7 points, and McDonald of Evanston Y. M. C. A. second place with 6 points.

The meet, held in the big Patten cage for the first time, was an improvement on the contests heretofore held in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A.

Many Records Tumble.

Records were broken in most of the events, but the difference in the track of the Patten and the Evanston Y. M. C. A. gymnasium made record smashing possible with less effort.

The quarter mile proved a jumble with sixteen entries. Several athletes fell, but Miller of Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A. got off to a good lead, which he maintained to the tape.

Summary of Events.

880 yard run—Won by Wilmarth, Northwestern; Townsley, Gary Y. M. C. A., second; Levinson, Crane, third; Sweethow, Hyde Park, fourth. Time, 2:09 2-5.

12 pound shot put—Won by Vujvoiche, Hamlin Park; Rerick, Northwestern, second; Jackson, Evanston Academy, third; Jester, Gary Y. M. C. A., fourth. Distance, 48 feet, [illegible] inches.

18 feet rope climb—Won by Baleskier, Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A.; Ackermann, Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A., second; Lewis, Crane, third; Ostrowski, Bowen, fourth. Time, :04 3-5.

Standing three broad jumps—Won by H. Lewis, Crane; McDonald, Evanston Y. M. C. A., second; Clay, Evanston Y. M. C. A., third; Rea, Gary Y. M. C. A., fourth. Distance, [illegible] feet ½ inch.

One-half mile high school relay—Won by Englewood [Beanon, Korssell, Proctor, Pierce, Patton]. Time, 1:40.

50 yard dash—Won by Butler, Hyde Park; McDonald, Evanston Y. M. C. A., second; Dowding, Bowen, third; Hughes, Lincoln A. C., fourth. Time, :05 4-5.

1 mile—Won by Russell, Crane; Townsley, Gary Y. M. C. A., second; Holderman, Gary Y. M. C. A., third; Jefferson, Lincoln A. C., fourth. Time, 4:51.

Pole vault—Won by Wicks, Gary Y. M. C. A.; Watson, Seward Park, second; Jones, [illegible] Y. M. C. A., and McFadden, Northwestern, tied for third. Height, 11 feet.

Quarter mile—Won by Miller, Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A.; Gindich, Crane, second; McDonald, Evanston Y. M. C. A., third; Petty, West Side Y. M. C. A., fourth. Time, :54 2-5.

50 yard low hurdles—Won by McCauley, Crane; Strickler, Northwestern, second; Crays, Northwestern, third; Sweetow, Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A., fourth. Time, :06 3-5.

High jump—Won by Tatge, Ogden Park; Baleskier, Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A., second; Patten of Englewood, Middleton of Crane, Sheppard of Hyde Park, Armstrong of Evanston Academy, Strickler, Hill, and Crays of Northwestern, and Watson of Seward Park tied for third. Height, 5 feet 8 inches.

One-half mile club relay—Won by Northwestern [Crays, Dunsworth, Bajour, Wilmarth, Peoples]; Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A., second; Lincoln A. C., third; Evanston Y. M. C. A., fourth. Time, 1:39 2-5.

AUSTIN BEATS M'KINLEY IN DUAL MEET, 55 TO 24.

Austin High school track athletes by winning six of nine events defeated the McKinley team, 55 to 24, yesterday morning in the former's gymnasium. Walker, by winning the 50 yard dash and furlong, and McEwen of Austin with firsts in the 50 yard low hurdles and high jump, divided first honors with Schwartz of McKinley, who won the shotput and the three standing jumps. Summaries:

50 yard dash—Won by Walker, Austin; Fleming, McKinley, second; Heimerdinger, Austin, third. Time, :06.

50 yard low hurdles—Won by McEwen, Austin; Snyder, Austin, second; Fleming, McKinley, third. Time, :07.

High jump—Won by McEwen, Austin; Walker, Austin, second; Snyder, Austin, and Olsen, McKinley, tied for third. Height, 5 feet.

880 yard run—Won by Geer, Austin; Fleming, McKinley, second; Monaco, McKinley, third. Time, 2:18.

Three standing jumps—Won by Schwartz, McKinley; French, Austin, second; Stresser, Austin, third. Distance, 26 feet 11 inches.

ATHLETES OF FAR WEST BEAT FOUR WORLD MARKS.

Corvallis, Ore., April 1.—Four indoor world's records were broken today in the first annual far western indoor track and field meet held under Amateur Athletic union rules at Oregon Agricultural college. Fred Kelly of the Los Angeles Athletic club made three of them and Harry J. Cole of Oregon Agricultural college recorded the fourth in the discus throw.

Kelly bettered the world marks in the 80 yard dash with a time of :08 1-5; the 80 yard high hurdles, which he won in :10, and the 220 yard dash, time :22, according to Dr. E. J. Stewart, director of the meet.

Cole's new world's indoor mark of 140 feet 9½ inches was made in an exhibition throw, after he had won the regular discus event. Oregon Agricultural college won the meet.

ENTRIES CLOSE TOMORROW.

The closing date for entries in the annual senior indoor games of the Central A. A. U. has been extended until tomorrow noon, according to an announcement by Championship Committee Chairman Herman. Some athletic clubs and colleges yesterday notified the officials that their nominations would not be ready until today. The closing time was set for yesterday.

RED SOX BEAT MEMPHIS, 7-2.

Memphis, Tenn., April 1.—The Boston Red Sox defeated the Memphis Southern association team, 7 to 2. Score:

Boston Americans [illegible]
Memphis Southerns [illegible]

Batteries—Foster, Gregg, Thomas, Haley; Wheeler and Clark.

Every week The Sunday Tribune will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

By ANNE ELLIS.

A GOOD formula for the man working in that laboratory where art is distilled would be: "To produce art, emphasize life." It is the exaggeration of the natural which makes the artificial convincing. The stage voice is a careful admixture of consciously distinct articulation, overemphasized inflection, and strength of pitch. The stage manner is overcolored and super-energetic. Yet these hyperbolical qualities are invisible to the audience.

It is so with all art. Many painters have recognized it, some of them have used it consciously, some unconsciously. Some of them have realized that a work of art can be assessed at its dramatic value. That beauty which is undramatic is reduced to mere prettiness. They have set about obtaining their effects in various manners, among which the painter of "Diana of the Uplands" has chosen at once the most obvious and the surest.

He has emphasized a force which of itself is emphatic. One of the most dramatic elements in nature, if not the most dramatic, is wind, and it is wind which Furse has chosen to give his painting dramatic value, emphasis, force, to create illusion. The same beautiful woman, poised in grace, holding in leash two swift animals, painted as he was able to paint, would have been a beautiful picture in itself, but he has added at a stroke the touch which makes the beautiful picture a work of art.

Behind the beautiful woman and the restive dogs and over all the landscape, solemn, after the long winter's sleep, he has painted the wind. And the woman seems to be looking out across the world in the direction of the wind, following it with her gaze to that indefinite place where the wind stops blowing. It is the first day of spring, when the four winds play at blowing the earth about between them like a sunlit bubble. The west wind always wins the game, and this, so the legend says, is the reason:

"The south wind looks at the north wind and must stop to laugh at his serious face. And the north wind growing angry exhausts himself in one irate puff. Then only the east and the west are left and they blow in each other's faces. But the east wind has come from so far away and traveled over such ancient lands, and troubled such olden seas, and blown so many ships to fate, and come so heavy laden with scent that the east wind is weary and dies. And the west wind blows the world up nearer the sun and it is spring."

Charles Wellington Furse was the son of a minister, and the repression and asceticism of his forbear can be seen in his work. It was through his paternal ancestor also that he was related to Sir Joshua Reynolds. The father of Furse was vicar of Staines when Charles was born. Later he became canon, and later still archdeacon of Westminster. He attained some distinction as an orator. Furse, the son, went to Haileybury school and later studied under Prof. Legros.

In 1888 he exhibited "Cain," and then went to Paris to study at Julian's. After several productive years there he returned to London and made a name for himself by pictures exhibited at the Royal academy, of which he was afterwards elected associate, and at the New English Art club. He painted many portraits of notables, especially ecclesiastics, among whom are to be mentioned Canon Burrows and Bishop Stubbs. Others were Sir Richard Collins, Lord Charles Beresford, and two small equestrian studies of Earl Roberts, a larger unfinished canvas, which his widow loaned to the Tate gallery. He also did some excellent work for the door arches of the Liverpool town hall.

In his student days he was attacked by a pernicious malady which finally caused his death at the age of 36. It was while he was under the strain of this same malady that he did his best work, and he found consolation for the weakness of his body in the energy of his mind. He married the daughter of John Addington Symonds, and "Diana of the Uplands" is one of a number of portraits of her that he painted.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

THE BLUFFS OF JORDAN

By Gouverneur Morris

"I Did Have to Marry Him. It's Always Like That. A Girl Just Has To, and Whether She's Chosen Hell for Herself or Heaven Is Just Luck."

YOUR true Bar Harborite is a picnicker by nature and training. And when August has been buried, with all its tournaments and tangoes and dinner parties, he turns his eyes to the mountains. Especially if he is one of a couple; for certain of our walks (most of them, if the unvarnished truth were in me), like the famous bicycle in the song, have been built for two; and of these none is so complete as that along the Bluffs of Jordan.

I have used the word complete intentionally. A complete walk for two is a narrow, up and down walk, not so close to the edge of things as to be dangerous, but close enough to furnish the helping hand, and even the staying arm, with one excuse after another. No fifty feet of such a path ought to be visible from any other fifty feet of it. There should be occasional screens of foliage and occasional narrow passages between rock masses. On down grades also there should be plenty of rolling stones, for there is nothing like a mildly sprained ankle to bring on an engagement.

The ideal walk for two must have views of mountains, of mountains beyond mountains, and, again, of mountains beyond these. It should look out and down (many hundred feet) upon a lake of which chacun can say to his chacune, "Did you ever see such a color?" or which may cause her to say, "Hold me; I feel as if I were going to jump." And you must be able to see the ocean, too, and ships and islands afar off. The ideal walk is through wild country; and everybody must know that it isn't the easiest walk to follow, so that when you arrive several hours late and say, "We got lost," everybody will believe you.

Sometimes people get asked to picnics and spoil them. As for me, I cannot even think of the Bluffs of Jordan without an awful sinking feeling. It's curious, too, because at the time of our last walk, with supper at Jordan's Pond and a wonderful ride home from Seal Harbor in a fast motor boat, the night all afloat with moonlight, in Europe men were being shot down by the ten thousand, and women and children were being tortured and murdered. So that it seemed as if our whole party might have fallen from the Bluffs of Jordan without causing a ripple of horror. But it's not what happens far off that hurts you; it's the dog under the wheels of your own car, or the ache in the stomachs of your own babies.

There were a dozen of us, all married, and half a dozen children, who scampered ahead on very young legs, with very shrill voices. Of the six married couples, all had, or should have had, tender memories of the Bluffs of Jordan. For they had played an important part in getting us all married. Where is the blue serge coat in which he sheltered so much preciousness from the sudden, vicious (and altogether blessed) thunderstorm? And it was here that he knelt to tie that shoe of hers, which was always coming untied. And it was here—just here—that her blessed (and perfectly sure) foot slipped, and he caught her with a sudden wild tenderness to his sopping wet shirt, and said: "Sorry! All my fault!" and kissed her sopping wet cheek once, by accident, and then seven hundred and fifty-two times on purpose. It was at this oak that he told her he had no money at all, but swore to take good care of her always and to make a name for himself. It was opposite this clump of bluebells (or one just like it) that she received and returned his seven hundred and fifty-third, fourth, fifth, and sixth kisses, and would have done the same with the seven hundred and fifty-seventh, if two small boys who had been watching them all along had not inopportunely disclosed their presence and whereabouts by sudden gigglings. But he and she weren't ashamed. They wanted all the world and the heavens above the Bluffs of Jordan and the waters beneath, and even all the great hosts of horrid little boys, to know how much they loved each other. And they passed on, their arms around each other's waists, between a cliff on one side and a precipice on the other, along a path just eleven inches wide.

We went in at McFarlain's farm, through cow bitten and cow trodden fields and woods. You heard from time to time an Alpine tinkling of bells, but saw no cows. The children frollicked ahead and vanished into the landscape. Everybody remarked that it was a typical Bar Harbor day. And so it was. A man of normal vision might almost have counted the blueberries upon distant mountainsides, upon which and across, slowly traveling, passed the shadows of clouds. The air was neither air nor champagne, but it acted like both. It served to keep a man alive and it went to his head.

As we began the ascent of Sargent's mountain, which is the high road to the Bluffs of Jordan, sudden rain fell for a few minutes, and resembled in the bright sunlight a shower of dry diamonds. Far below on three sides the magic island of Mount Desert began to disclose her choicest treasures of bays, lakes, ocean, islands, of pink and brown granite, of living greens and blues. An eagle came out of the east and flew after the westering sun. Some said it was early for eagles, wasn't it? Others that it was late. Some said that they could remember when they could scamper up five mountains like Sargent's in an afternoon without getting winded; others were breathing too hard to say anything. Natural pace rather than predilection separated us into couples. I saw my wife far up the mountainside with our good neighbor, Jerry Bowles, who has legs like a Rocky mountain goat, and I found myself gradually drifting toward the rear of the procession with Jane Moulton. We pretended that we were chaperoning the others, and I asked her why in the deuce she had invited the Valisons upon this picnic.

"But I thought you had a mash on her?"

"So I had," I said. "I used to think it would be heavenly to hold her hand, and I think the world of her still. But she and what she is pleased to call her husband are so obviously unhappy together, and always on the point of making a scene, that I hate to see them running all about."

Mrs. Moulton defended Valison during fifty feet of steep climbing, and I ran him down. Then we paused for breath and Mrs. Moulton admitted that I was right.

"If I were Maud Valison," I said, "I'd entice that man to the edge of a practicable cliff and push him over. He's pitch black when he drinks, and the between times are fewer and fewer and shorter and shorter. He's run through all her money. He was at a prize fight the night the baby was born, and when it died they had to hunt all over New York for him for two days. And still she holds on to him. Look at 'em now! They've had a tiff, haven't they? Why, even his back is bitter and sarcastic. Wouldn't we be better Christians if we butted in and I walked with her and you with him?"

"I'm a Turk on Tuesdays," said Mrs. Moulton. "And, besides, they can't quarrel long in this air. They courted all over these mountains. Soon they'll begin to remember. . . . Look at your wife and Jerry; they're almost at the top. She doesn't look a day older than when you married her."

"No, she doesn't," I said. "And she doesn't act any older. In fact, she acts just the same. I'm a very lucky fellow. And when you think that she and Maud Valison are the same age——"

"They're not!"

"Honestly, they are."

"Good Lord, what a Mathusalem I am!"

"You!" And I sniffed in the most complimentary manner.

Mrs. Moulton and I were the last to reach the cairn which marks the top of the mountain. And we knew without being told that something disagreeable had happened. Jerry Bowles and my wife were trying to locate Green island (it can't be seen from Sargent's), and the others were simply tongue-tied. Maud Valison was white as a sheet, with a bright red spot over each cheekbone. Valison alone looked at ease—conceitedly at ease. And it was evident that he had just said something outrageous at his wife's expense. My wife told me afterward what it was.

The children broke suddenly into yells of delight over some nudged and whispered witticism, peculiar to their age, and the Chudder girl (she had a red cap and a woolly white sweater) started a running and leaping career over and among rocks, pursued with cries of delight by the big Braithwaite boy. This was a stroke of exquisite tact on the Chudder girl's part (though she didn't know it), and relieved the tension. It was also a pleasant picture, for she is as pretty as a nymph, and the big Braithwaite boy is beautifully made and has very flat pointed ears that remind you of the great god Pan. They disappeared over the Jordanward shoulder of the mountain. Whereupon the other children gave piercing cries and started in pursuit.

"Wish I was young Braithwaite," said Valison, with a harsh, cynical laugh.

"Really?" said Jane Moulton, very dovelike and gentle. "But I'm afraid you never were, and I'm sure you never will be. Do you mind holding my stick a moment while I put on my sweater?"

She untied the arms of this from around her waist with deliberation, and it was obvious that she intended to take possession of Valison and keep him away from his wife. Moulton and I winked at each other with appreciation, and, accustomed to his winks from childhood, I gathered that he resigned the duty of cavaliering Maud Valison to me.

We were also children together and have been intimate friends ever since. And we were no sooner out of earshot between couples than she said: "Jim, I don't know what to do. I wish to God the mountain would open up and swallow me."

"Is it always bad?" I said. "Aren't there any good times ever?"

"Your wife and I," she said, "are the same age. And look at us! She doesn't look old enough to be married, and I look like an old woman. No! There aren't any good times ever. . . . Please don't say, 'But, after all, you didn't have to marry him.'"

"I won't say that, Maud."

"Because I did have to marry him. It's always like that. A girl just has to, and whether she's chosen hell for herself or heaven is just luck."

"There is always divorce," I said.

"There is never divorce for a Catholic."

"I keep forgetting that. But it seems to me, if my religion did so little for me, I'd keep changing till I found a comfortable one."

She shrugged her shoulders, and we climbed silently down into the valley between Sargent's and Jordan. After what she had said about her age I couldn't help looking at her every now and then. And it was true. In the full, merciless sunlight she looked old and gray, and very lonely.

If I were judging between men and their wives I should form my judgments largely on the answer to two leading questions: "How old is he or she?" and "How old does he or she look?" For when a husband or wife, free from disease or calamity, ages before his or her time, the life partner of that husband or wife is almost certainly to blame, and ought to be quietly asphyxiated. Maud Valison is 27 years old and she looks like a faded Madonna. Valison is 40, and, except after an exceptionally hard night, he looks like a bad boy. And poor Maud used to look just like the girl in Meredith's "Under yonder beech tree single on the greensward," etc.

The path through the valley is among thick woods. But the valley is high up in the world, and you come suddenly into the open and see the Bluffs below you, green beyond, and Jordan's pond far away to the right, and beyond that woods and then ocean and islands and white sails. From this point the walk is along the famous Bluffs of Jordan, and all your troubles should fall from you. Mrs. Valison only said: "Yes, I always liked this set of views," and "What's become of the sun?" "Are those clouds thunder or just wind?"

"They look damnably like thunder clouds to me," I said.

"I hope they are."

"You do. Why?"

She laughed a hard little laugh.

"He's only nice to me during thunder storms," she said. "He's afraid of the lightning. It's the only thing he is afraid of except, maybe, water. You'll see. If it's a thunder storm he'll come running to me for protection, just like a little child, all the wickedness scared out of him. And when that happens, if you've any tact——"

"Of course," I said, "I'll vanish at the right time. Does he have to hide his face and all that?"

"All that!" she said, "and more. It's grotesque and pitiable. I have seen thunder sober him when he was so drunk he could not stand."

"And is he good to you afterward for a time?"

"When the sky is all blue again and the sun out, and the little birds telling each other all about it? Not he."

"O, Maud," I exclaimed, "if there is anything I can do, tell me, and I'll do it."

"You were always sweet to me," she said.

"I was always a little sweet on you," I said.

She laughed shyly.

"You even asked me to marry you once, Jim."

"More than once, I think."

"Twice. I even expected a third time of asking, and then that chit of a girl you married swept into Bar Harbor on the fastest schooner in the world and—did she simply whistle to you, Jim, or what? Tell an old lady all about it."

"Why, there's not much to tell. I was standing at the corner of Main and Mount Desert streets talking to the policeman about the new game laws and she came by with her French governess, and her hair done up for the first time, and that was about all."

"And poor me waiting to be asked for the third time. How many times did you have to ask her?"

"I didn't ask her. Things just happened. Right here on the Bluffs of Jordan they happened. It came on just such a storm as we're going to catch now. And I've still got the blue serge coat I wrapped her in to keep her dry. It was the first made to order coat I ever owned."

"And then what?"

"What makes you think I'm going to tell you everything I know?"

"When you were standing there, she in the blue serge coat, and you holding it around her, and the rain roaring and the lightning striking, would it have been better if you'd both been struck dead? Have you ever thought of that??"

"What a question?"

"But have you?"

I couldn't help laughing.

"I daresay I've said so once or twice, Maud, when I was very, very much in the wrong about something. But I've never thought so."

"Are you ever in the wrong about anything, Jim? I mean seriously in the wrong?"

"What do you think I am? I'm a regular man, and, of course, I'm in the wrong about things, almost always."

I've never seen anything fiercer or blacker than the advance of that storm or anything swifter. It turned the bright blue day into something more than dusk and less than night, in less than ten minutes. Across the valley the top and side of Pemetic mountain disappeared in oblique black rain. With the first rumbling of thunder Valison appeared round a bend of the path, hurrying toward us. The left side of his mouth was drawn up into a sort of defensive snarl; otherwise he looked like a frightened and bewildered child. I heard him say, "O, there you are," with evident relief. I was busy taking French leave.

A moment later the rain came. Looking back, I saw the Valisons, he first, dive under a scrub oak that clings to the very edge of a precipice. There they crouched, one moment almost hidden from my eyes and the next exhibited in almost blinding detail by some great flash of lightning. I saw that Valison had buried his face in his wife's breast and that she had her arms around him and was soothing him.

As sights go it was a pretty sickening specimen and I turned away from it.

The path had got me under a nice piece of overhanging landscape that shed a world of rain, but the path itself had turned into a mountain torrent, about two feet wide, and I had to balance on two pointed stones to keep my feet out of it. The lightning by now was very near, frequent, and busy. And the thunder, of course, among those great mountain sounding boards, was absolutely deafening. I stole a look at the Valisons. She, with an expression of stoical disgust, was ministering to his shattered nerves. It must be simply awful to be as frightened as that. I don't visit thunder storms personally or invite them to my house, and when I go out walking and meet one I'm mighty glad when we have exchanged the courtesies of the day and gone our respective ways. In short, I am thoroughly afraid of them when they are of the black, bangy kind; but if I couldn't help behaving as I feel about them, I'd poison myself.

I crept a little deeper into my gully until I could look forward through the farther end. By a light flash I saw the Braithwaite boy in his shirtsleeves, drenched to the skin. He had his coat and his arms tightly wrapped around the Chudder girl. I watched them during the space of three terrific thunder claps. He never took his eyes off her face all the time, and I could see the flashing of his fine white teeth. His flat pointed ears had never looked more Pan-like. I couldn't see her face, but it was turned upward to his. Within a dozen feet of them a rock and a tree offered fine shelter, but they seemed to prefer the open and the full brunt of the storm.

"They're much too young for this sort of thing," I kept thinking, but without a particle of conviction.

The storm was at its worst now, and I withdrew to the center of my gully, where little rain could get me, and I could see neither the Valisons nor Braithwaite and the Chudder girl. I managed to light a cigaret and to enjoy it. And before it was finished the zenith of the storm had passed over us, and the thundering was in full retreat. The rain slackened and the clouds began to look bright and brighter. Then there was a lovely transition period of sun and rain, with all the rolling woods turned an unbelievable vivid green.

I started to climb out of the gully, stepping from one big stone to the next, and slipping once into rushing water, ankle deep. I thought it would be a good plan to join the Valisons and give him a chance to get away to some one who had not witnessed his shame.

He had stepped out from under the oak tree and stood balanced on a forty-five degree slant of rock, just short of the precipice. His rubber soles gave his feet a firm grip, and if he had a good head for heights he was in no danger. I suppose he wanted to show his wife that if he was timid about some things, he was lion hearted about others. Most men are like that.

He stood there, upon a slant like the roof of a house, his hands in his trousers pockets, looking out and down.

As I approached them I heard her say:

"What's the use of being a fool? You might lose your balance."

"A lot you'd care," he shot back, without turning his head.

"If you think I admire your nerve, you're mistaken. What's the use of trying to show off to me—of all people?"

He did not answer; just stood looking out and down. Then suddenly he turned his head, very gingerly, and I saw a face, granite gray, with a look of such horrified gravity as I have never seen in a face before or since. Very slowly he took his hands out of his trousers pockets.

"See if you can't help me back," he said; "my feet are slipping and I've lost my balance."

His voice was calm, but tremendously serious.

"Get hold of a branch with one hand and me with the other," he ordered.

Mrs. Valison did not move. She seemed to be paralyzed with horror.

"Be quick, can't you?"

By this I was getting to him as fast as I could. But Mrs. Valison had sprung into action. She twisted one hand tightly about a swinging branch of the scrub oak, and crept forward till with the other she could almost reach her husband.

"Give me your hand," she said.

He reached his hand toward her, backward, and she could have grasped it easily, but she didn't. And she sounded one shrill, sharp note of a laugh as Valison's feet, his equilibrium ruined by that last reaching effort of his, slid suddenly from under him. He clawed terribly at the slanting rock with his fingers, and slowly went over the edge and vanished.

After a long time I heard a sickening, crunching thud, and then the sound of approaching voices along the trail. And now for the first time Mrs. Valison realized that she had not been alone with her husband. She jerked her hand toward the voices.

"What are you going to tell them?"

"The truth, Maud."

"You're not! You can't!"

"He was foolhardy and his foot slipped."

Along the path, in the open now, came various members of the party, drenched and laughing.

"For God's sake," I cried, "some of you girls look after Maud. Valison's had a fall—off that cliff. We must get down to him somehow."

Of course, they all began to ask, "How did it happen?" But I felt altogether too unnerved and sick at my stomach for graphic explanations.

"Just slipped and went over," I said. "Somebody ought to hurry ahead and bring a boat down from the landing to just opposite here. That will be the quickest way to get him to a doctor."

The women surrounded Maud Valison and tried to calm her, she being at the moment much calmer than any of them. Theoretically the removal of Valison from this life was a good thing, but the way of his removal had terribly upset even those who hadn't witnessed it.

Jerry Bowles, Moulton, and I began to hunt for a way down the cliff. The way selected proved a nightmarish descent to me. I have a fair head for heights, but Valison's fall had taken all the spunk out of me. Moulton was very considerate. He helped me down several nasty bits and never mentioned the matter afterward.

We found Valison at last, all spread out, on the face of an old landslide. We knew the minute we tried to pick him up that he was all broken to pieces, his arms and legs buckling where there are no joints, but it seemed best to get him to the shore and try the effects of cold water and brandy. Bowles said he had a little flask of brandy with him. He had, but it had got broken somehow, and been absorbed by his clothes. He smelt like a grog shop. And when he realized that the brandy might have been just the difference between life and death he got hysterical.

Valison wasn't dead. His ugly soul stuck to his broken shell as the flesh of a snapping turtle that boys have killed with heavy stones clings to the broken carapace. Once in the boat, on the way to the Jordan Pond house landing, he opened his eyes. Moulton leaned over him.

"How do you feel, old man?"

And Valison answered in a feeble, singsong whine:

"I didn't fall; I was pushed."

And fainted dead away again.

"What does he mean by that?" Moulton asked.

"Why," I said, "all his life, whenever anything has gone wrong with him, he's blamed somebody. In the present instance he did fall, all by himself; nobody touched him."

There was a doctor at the landing and we carried Valison to the Jordan Pond house and put him to bed. After an exhaustive examination the doctor said that he might live and that he might not. And everybody agreed that this was an able and knowing prognosis, just the one that we would have made if we had been doctors.

Permission was received from the authorities to bring a motor into the township, and at about 7 o'clock this arrived and Valison was lifted into it. Mrs. Valison, still immensely self-possessed, and the doctor went with him.

Then those of us who could eat had one of those delicious Jordan Pond house suppers that begin with broiled lobsters on blue plates and finish with peach or chocolate ice cream. After that we put on the heavy coats and sweaters that had been sent over for us—it had turned out cold—and drove in long lumbering buckboards to the yacht club landing at Seal Harbor.

Of that cold, spiritless drive I remember this, that every husband chose to sit by his wife, and that the Braithwaite boy and the Chudder girl climbed into a back seat where only the myriad eyes of the night could see them.

From Seal Harbor the motor boat whisked us home in no time, over the ocean and under the mountains, lighted by a great savage red moon and white blinking stars.

Once Moulton whispered in my ear, "You said nobody touched him, Jim. Could anybody have touched him—Mrs. V., for instance?"

"No," I said, "she couldn't. She simply couldn't."

"I get you," he said; "let it go at that."

"For heaven's sake," I whispered angrily, "what and whom do you suspect?"

"I suspect only the Bluffs of Jordan," he said, "of which you are one."

Valison lived for three years. He lived in a wheel chair, with a man nurse to push it. And, oddly enough, he did not die of his fall, but of pneumonia. Sometimes he recognized people, sometimes not; but one always made a point of speaking to him; sometimes he would crook a finger into one's buttonhole, pull one's head down close to his, and confide in a breaking, querulous whine:

"I didn't fall; I was pushed."

Maud Valison is wonderful. She gets younger and happier every day. And she and I are not likely to lose our friendship for each other. Moulton is the only person who ever smelt a rat, and he didn't even confide his suspicions to Mrs. Moulton. But once in a while he annoys me unspeakably by slipping his arm through mine, indicating Maud Valison with a sly nod of the head, and whispering, "How are the Bluffs of Jordan getting on?"

The natural barriers to invasion of Mexico are deserts on the north and mountains on the east and northwest. The battlefields of the last Mexican war in 1846-47 were Monterey and Buena Vista, which are in the mountain barrier of the Sierra Madres on the east. It was in these places that Gen. Zachary Taylor won the decisive battles of the war. The mountain barrier also counted in Gen. Winfield Scott's march inland from Vera Cruz to Mexico city, for his main victory was at the pass of Cerro Gordo in the base of the Sierra Madre escarpment.

From the key given below the principal features of military importance will be found on the map. The map is reproduced from one of the series of war maps published by Carl Flemming in Berlin.

YOUNG AMERICANS

The Trail of the Boy Scouts by Pathfinder

FISHIN'.

YOU scouts are aware that here of late the breezes have begun to blow softer, that the days are lengthening, and that the clouds which go scurrying across the skies have begun to take on wonderful tints along at evening time. Before the Young Americans page appears again the grass will begin to get green, the trees will start to burst with leafage, and you may well be making plans for that fishing trip.

Is fishing a Boy Scout sport? Well, you can't well go fishing without getting into the heart of the out of doors. There never was a real boy who didn't like to go fishing and who didn't find himself at home on the bank of a stream far enough away from civilization to have the insects hum and the birds chirp and an occasional bass jump up and make circles on the placid, shadowed water, just as if there was no one around.

True, there is no fisherman's merit badge. Scoutdom is not inclined to give credit to the boy who can catch the longest string of fish. But you will find that the handbook refers to angling as "the most delightful of outdoor pastimes."

"What sort of equipment should I have?" you ask. "What is the best kind of bait?"

For answer, I quote H. Wheeler Perce, division vice president of the American Fisheries association. "Many a grizzled angler, the hero of many a well fought battle on lake or stream with bass or big trout," says Mr. Perce, "looks back with keenest delight to his days with a perch, or sun fish, a pole of his own cutting in his hand, trimmed to his liking, and perchance the biggest bass or trout of his long experience was the victim of that selfsame pole, and has never been equaled since with all his fancy tackle."

As for bait, Mr. Perce is of the opinion that more fish are caught with the humble angle worm than with all other forms of bait, both live and artificial, combined. Certain it is that the black bass, the pickerel, the trout, crappies, perch, blue gills, and the sunfish—all of them game fish and all of them food fish—look upon the wriggling angle worm as you look upon a piece of layer cake.

Of course, we all know from experience that there are times when fish "won't bite at nuthin'." If you can afford spoons, artificial minnows, fake frogs, and insects imitated in silk, feathers, and fur, all well and good. Dr. Hugh N. Smith, United States commissioner of fisheries, holds that the joys of fishing will often be increased if one possesses and learns how to use a light, jointed rod, with reel, fine line, and artificial baits. But he also explains that the pastime requires for its enjoyment no elaborate or expensive equipment; that a rod cut on the spot, a cork float, an ordinary hook baited with angle worm, grasshopper, grub, fly, or any of a dozen other handy lures, will answer for most occasions.

So, scouts, you "should worry" if you can scrape up no more than 10 cents for your fishing outfit. You will have plenty of fun if you keep your senses alert to all the beautiful things about you—the trees, the wild flowers, the birds, and the insects. And, according to authorities, the chances of your having "good luck" are not greatly diminished.

Be sure that you can name the fish that you catch. Familiarize yourself with the characteristics of the various kinds of fish. Be sportsmanlike at all times.

"It should be the invariable practice of anglers to return to the water all uninjured fish that are not needed for food or study," says Dr. Smith. "It is not all of fishing to fish, and no thoughtful boy who has the interest of the country at heart, and no lover of nature, will go fishing merely for the purpose of catching the longest possible string of fish."

The occasions when I went fishing as a boy stand out clear cut in memory. It was my good luck to land the only pickerel that was ever caught in our "crick." In reality, that fish was not more than eight inches long, but at the time he looked as big as a whale. How he happened to get into the waters that were only supposed to be inhabited by bullheads and "minnies" furnished somewhat of a mystery. But that is one of the delights of fishing. There is no telling, once you have cast your line, what you are going to land. Usually we boys landed nothing except snags and crawfish. We used to get our lines tangled in the snags, we used to vie with each other for possession of the choice holes, and we used to get the fish hook in our fingers. But our ardor for going fishing was never dampened.

You hear a good deal about luck in connection with fishing. Certain it is that in every troop there will be some one member who will have the reputation of catching more fish and bigger fish than any of the rest, but study the matter and you are pretty apt to find that this "lucky" fisherman is of the sort who has the patience to wait until he gets "a bite." You will find also that he is a fellow who uses judgment on where he casts his line; that he is careful about the adjustment of his "bobber," and particular that he keeps his hook supplied with fresh bait.

But, as I have mentioned before, it is not always the boy who catches the most fish who has the most fun out of going fishing. The true lover of nature will find plenty of satisfaction in "jus' watchin' the bobber float."

Valuable service may be rendered by Boy Scouts in all parts of the country by bringing to the attention of the proper state, county, or municipal authorities matters affecting the welfare of the fish. Among the subjects that should be reported to fish commissioners, fish wardens, or local legal officers are:

1. All cases noticed where fish are being killed by dynamite, poisons or other illegal and improper means.
2. Threatened destruction of fish by the drying of streams or ponds.
3. The existence of obstructions to the passage of fish on their way to their spawning grounds. All dams in streams in which are migratory fish should have fish-ways or fish ladders.

SCOUT NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE.

Troop No. 1 of Mason City, Ia., first made a thorough sanitary survey of its city. Then it made a further study of Willow creek, a small river running through the city, and protested against the rubbish and filth that was found there. Every big rain raises Willow creek and at one place where there is a sharp bend the bank is being undercut and a sixty year old elm was in danger of falling into the creek if something was not done to save it. The boys studied the problem and found a way to straighten the tree.

Through snow six inches deep and in intensely cold weather, Troop 23 of Detroit hiked the eleven miles to Birmingham in one hour and fifty minutes. When it reached its destination it found that the food and water had frozen solid, and it took over an hour to thaw out the provisions.

Lloyd S. Uhland, a Lancaster, Pa., scout, recently saved the life of his sister by timely first aid. His sister was preparing supper when her clothing caught fire. Scout Uhland tore a piece of carpet from the floor and quickly wrapped it about the girl, enabling her to escape without injuries.

SCOUT

AND now the Chicago Boy Scouts are going to give a circus. It is going to be a real circus, too, with clowns and sawdust rings and equestrians and red lemonade and pink balloons.

According to plans, the event is to be held in the International amphitheater at the Chicago stockyards on Saturday, May 6, and over 2,000 Boy Scouts, from all parts of Chicago, are to "be in it."

"Yes, sir, it's going to be a regular circus," declares C. C. Haradon, who is in charge. "There will be acts demonstrating all kinds of scoutcraft, from fancy marching to first aid drills, funny, frisky clowns, full of frivolity, dauntless, daring demons doing dizzy deeds, boy bands, and venders of popcorn, peanuts, ice cream cones, and balloons. So if there is any Boy Scout who can do a stunt let him get in touch with me at the Chicago Boy Scout headquarters."

DEFENSE DESTROYERS.

WIRE entanglements have proved of the greatest value in defense during the present war. The illustration shows how armored motor cars have been used against the Turkish entanglements in Gallipoli. The cars have fixed on them a long wooden pole from which is suspended a large grappling hook. The motor is driven backward against the entanglements, through which the pole with its grappling hook passes easily. As the car goes forward again, however, the hook catches in the wire, which is torn away over a length of many yards, making a way for the soldiers.

THE BOY SCOUT OATH

ON MY HONOR I WILL DO MY BEST:

ALCOHOLICS I HAVE KNOWN

These anecdotes are recounted by Dr. William D. Pennington, a physician who for several years had offices on the grounds partly occupied by a West Baden hotel. At the time, West Baden and the other famous rest cure, French Lick, were at the height of prosperity in a day when things were run "wide open" and when men and women, most of them wealthy, flocked from all parts of the country to recuperate from the effects of fast or strenuous living. A great many of the people that became his patients were hard drinkers, or steady tipplers, many of them were D. T's, and of the hundreds of cases that came to his attention he has chosen some of the more prominent ones to illustrate the toxic effect of booze and the mental derangements that followed its excessive use. Some of the actions of those whose shrine was the square bottle bear the elements of true comedy outwardly, but others might well have fitted into a tale of Poe's and taken place in some storied chamber of horrors. All of them are true, and all of them came under Dr. Pennington's supervision.

By GORDON SEAGROVE

As told by Dr. Pennington.

HE was a great, powerful fellow. His large, square head was covered with a thick mass of black, stiff hair, and it appeared even on his wrists, which were exceedingly supple for their thickness, and grew into long, shapely hands, with thin, pliable fingers. The rest of him was muscle; knots of it stood out on his shoulders and flexed portentously in his arms and legs. One would have said, at first glance, that he was a seafaring man or prospector of some sort in a raw country. But he was neither. He was a doctor, and a devoted follower of Darwin's theories, so much so, in fact, that he rarely went any place without a copy of Darwin's famous book tucked in his pocket.

He had been drinking for weeks, and now the taste had left him. He could not eat. He could not sleep. And with the withdrawal of the red stimulus the delirium tremens were on him—as is always the case—and he was violent, cursing and raving and striking out with his huge fist by turns or all at once.

Six men overpowered him and put him in the "violent room," where they handcuffed him to the bed. I assigned a husky fellow of 30 who had studied alcoholic cases to watch him in the night. At the end of the second day the patient seemed to calm down somewhat, and the guard paid less attention, and on the third night he dozed off.

He was awakened by a peal of thunder and sprang up. By the pale flash of lightning the murky objects in the room were disclosed clearly and with a feeling of alarm the guard saw to his amazement that the bed was empty. The doctor, still violent, was gone.

On the floor beside the bed were the cuffs of tested steel, which he had snapped in half with his long, tensile fingers, and evidently the fugitive had nothing on but the girdle, or sort of breech claw, that had been supplied him when his clothes were removed, for his garments lay on a disused trunk

Men Flee in Terror.

The alarm was turned in, and I, with some of the internes, set out in search of him. The storm by this time was furious, the wind swaying and stripping trees of their leaves, the rain driving in an almost horizontal line, and the lightning, now almost blinding in its intensity, bathing us for one instant in dazzling green and the next leaving us stumbling along in the contrasting blackness. It was difficult to proceed this way, but we kept on along the side of the hill that stretches southward from the hotel, and which, this particular summer, was the scene of a Grand Army of the Republic encampment.

We floundered on, pausing in the lightning flashes to see if the fugitive was anywhere in sight. But he was not. Growing alarmed, the party pushed on faster. As it neared the encampment, lights were seen moving to and fro like fireflies trying to save their wings from being drenched by the downpour. It was 1 o'clock in the morning, so this was unusual. We had paused for a moment to scan the hillside, and were about to push on when from the front came the sound of footsteps running. The next instant from the underbrush there burst an old soldier.

Never have I seen such a terrible expression. His faded eyes seemed to start from his head and the pupils of them looked as large as buttons—black buttons. He was panting, his tongue was flecked with saliva, and in the flashes of the lightning his face looked dead and shrunken and drawn and green with fear. He tried to talk, but could not. Instead, he pointed a thin, trembling hand to a point on the road ahead, and then, without a word of explanation, turned suddenly and started running away from us.

Excited, fearful that the doctor might have committed some terrible crime while deranged, we rushed ahead. Twice bent old men, running in the other direction as if fleeing from a pestilence, were seen on either side of the road, their white locks disheveled and their eyes staring. In the distance sounded shouts, and we could see the lanterns moving to and fro excitedly.

Like a Savage Ape.

The searching party broke into a run, rounded a turn in the road, and stopped short on a point overlooking a green plateau, in the center of which was a pool near some dead trees, with naked branches overhanging. And in an instant the cause of the fear of the men who had fled down the road was apparent. For there, made more horrible by the pale green but brilliant lightning flashes, was the doctor. He was hanging from one of the naked branches by his long, thin hand, his hairy head and furry wrists drawing the horrible comparison to an ape—a giant, monstrous ape.

Spellbound we watched. He swung lithely to and fro and then with a leap sailed through the air to another near by branch, which he caught with the other hand. There he swung for several minutes, chattering, and screaming, and muttering incoherently to himself.

Finally, with the grace of a baboon, he dropped to earth, seized a small but thick piece of wood, and broke it across his bare knees, then flung the two pieces far up the hillside and broke into a shrieking laugh that could be heard distinctly for several rods. Then, with the same loping, dragging ease with which the baboon travels in its own native jungle, he made his way to the pool and, dropping to his knees, bent over it. At each flash of lightning he saw reflected and distorted his own distorted face, but it did not seem to irritate him, for he laughed sillily and began washing his hands.

There could be no doubt of it; the doctor actually thought, through some function of his over stimulated nerve system, that he was one of the apes of which he was so constantly reading in his favorite book. And he so much resembled one that the three soldiers who had chanced to pass near him on their way to the encampment had been frightened almost out of their wits.

That same night the doctor was captured by a flank movement from behind and taken back to my office. In two weeks he was a normal man. I understand that he is now a teetotaler and has made a remarkable success in his profession in Pittsburgh.

Had Peculiar Delusions.

The case of ——————, though not an uncommon one in its aspects, was, nevertheless, a horrible one. He was an intellectual man, had a great deal of leisure, and plenty of money to enjoy it. But he had been a drinker—his choice was never anything but whisky and absinthe straight—for a number of years. A tall, thin fellow, with piercing yet soft brown eyes, sunk rather deep in a rather patrician face, he was distinguished in a way, even though he could not hide the pitiable condition of his nerves on this afternoon.

Two men friends brought him in. "You'd better look him over now," they said. "He's been hitting the hard stuff a long time."

I looked at the patient. He was standing before the desk, his face the ashen color of rain beaten stone. His mouth worked pathetically and then suddenly his brown eyes flew to a dark corner of the room and he instinctively jumped and cringed back.

"Did you see it?" he whispered hoarsely. As he spoke the sweat broke out in a myriad of tiny beads upon his forehead and ran in almost invisible dank furrows down his sunken cheeks.

The other fellows winked. "It's the rats!" one of them said. "We're too late. He's got 'em." They had scarcely finished telling me that the patient often had delusions that his vitals were overrun with rodents, when, sure enough, the patient began coughing.

The same afternoon he was removed to a comfortable bed chamber, in which was an open grate sparkling with the light from a wood fire. For several hours he said nothing, only muttering incoherently to himself, but toward evening the terror that had first been his seemed to leave him and he looked upon his imaginary predicament with a sort of resigned philosophy, with its cardinal principle disgust.

Imagination Sets a Task.

All that night he sat in a great arm chair before the fire. At intervals of fifteen minutes his eyes would distend, he would rub the pit of his stomach, and then begin a long, guttural noise that was half way between the cough of a man and the throaty growl of a dog.

"Here comes another!" he would mutter, and suddenly the growling would cease.

Then, with an uncanny light of demented revenge in his eyes, he would spring from the chair, run around the room until he imagined he had cornered the imaginary rat that had gnawed at his vitals and would step on it, smiling vindictively as he heard its imaginary bones ground under the toe of his shoe.

One o'clock came and went. Then 2. Then 3—and he was still coughing. At dawn I left him, locked the room, and went to bed. From my cot, through the thin partition, I could still hear him at it until I fell asleep. The coughs and growls were decreasing in number.

At 9 in the morning I entered his room. His face looked like the face of a man who had been taken from the river. But he forced a smile as he saw me.

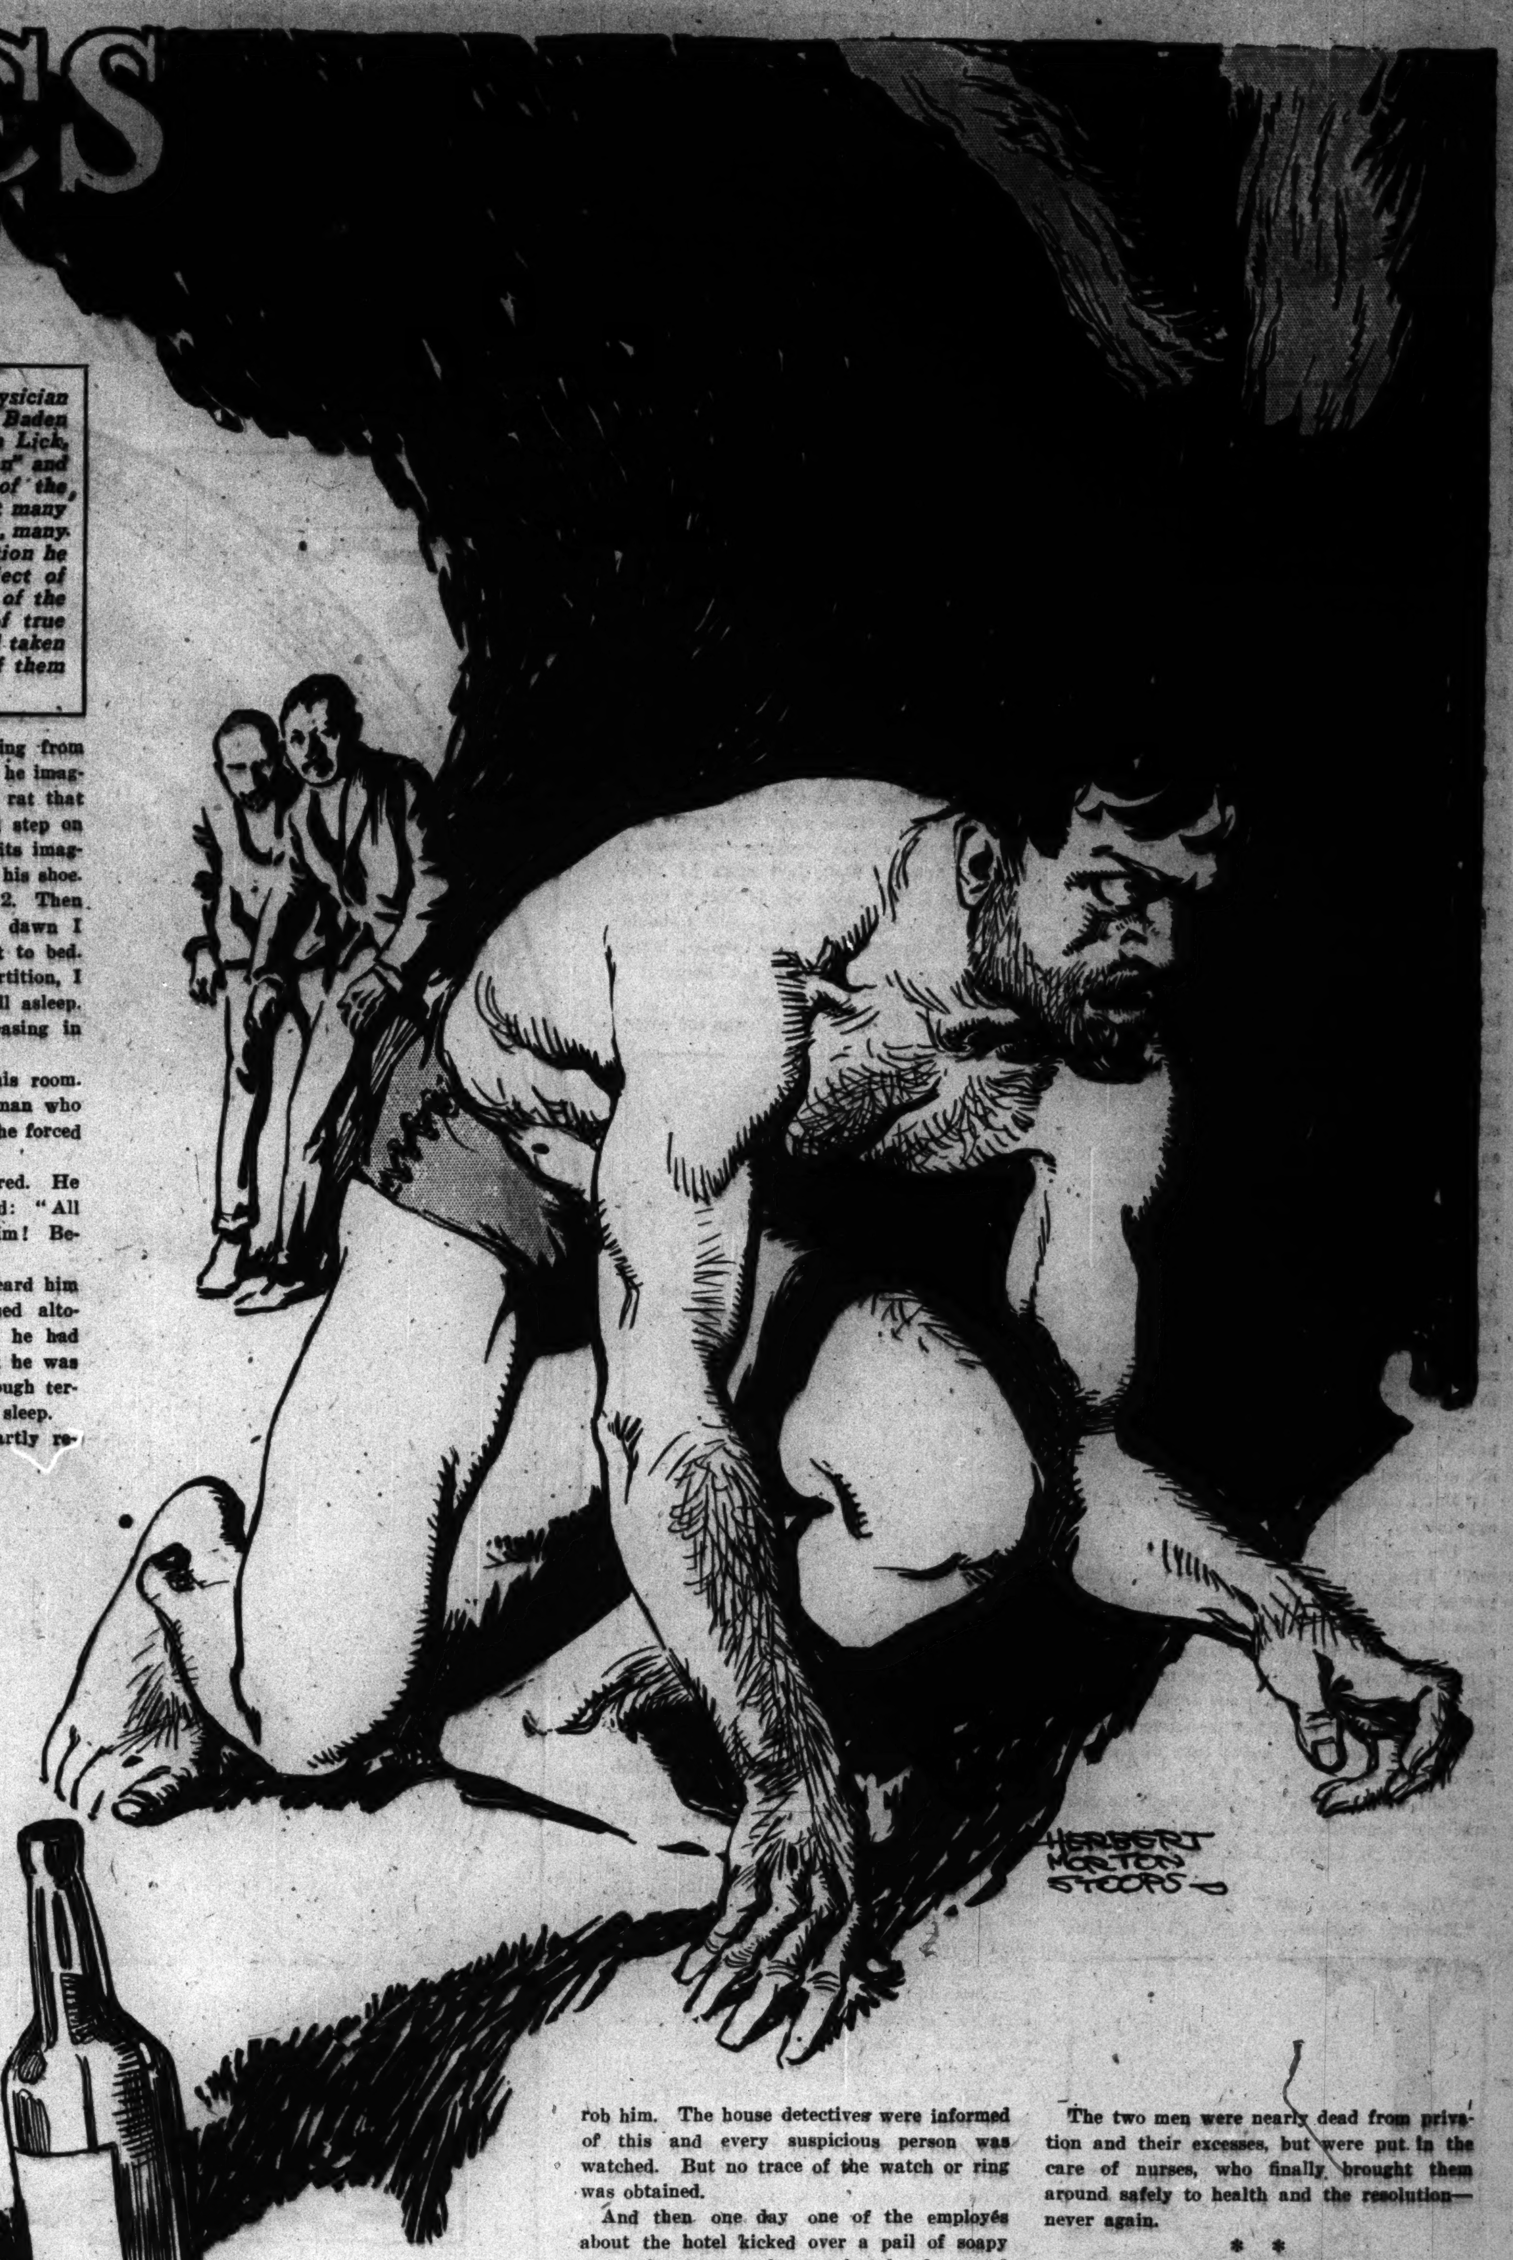
"Did you get them all?" I ventured. He nodded his head weakly and then said: "All but one. But I'll get him; I'll get him! Before night, too!"

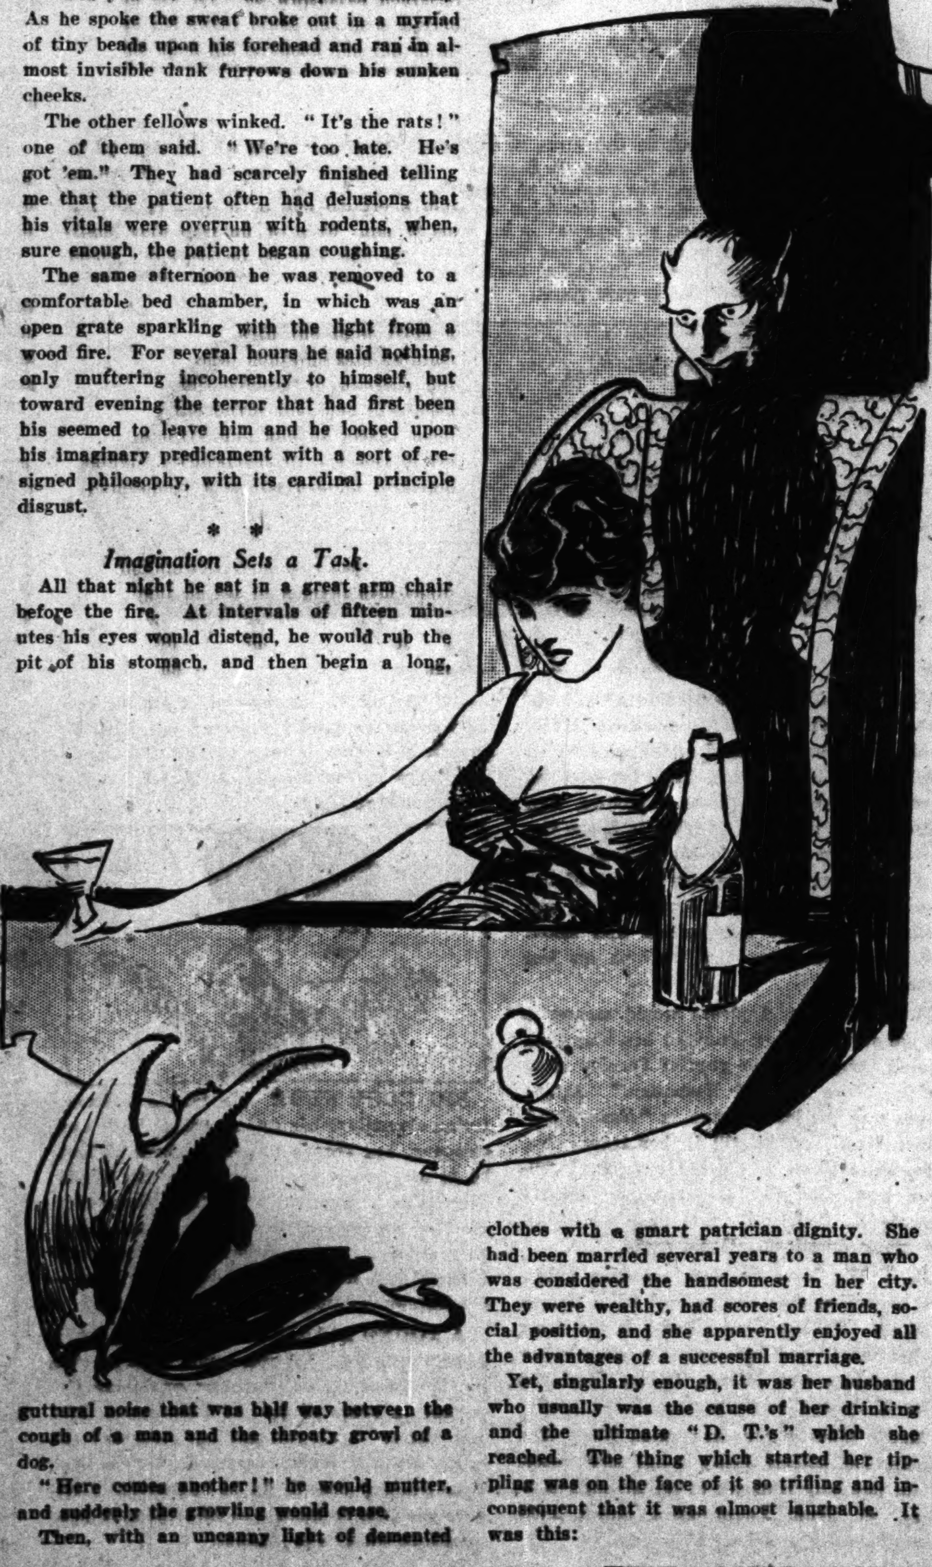
Several times during the day I heard him again, and then the gutturals ceased altogether. He had accomplished what he had said he would accomplish. By night he was sleeping as a man who has been through terror for days and then escaped it with sleep.

He stayed on for three weeks, partly regained his strength, and finally went home with his wife, who came up from Louisville to meet him. I have never seen him since. But I never shall forget his eyes—the eyes that showed the horror that a man goes through when he feels that an army of rats, furry skinned and with black, beady eyes and white fangs sharper than a needle's point, are gnawing him to pieces.

Perhaps one of the most unusual and pathetic cases was that of an eastern society woman who came regularly to West Baden. She had been drinking for twelve years, yet she was still one of the most beautiful women I have ever seen. She was tall and perfectly proportioned, with fine features and the hands of an artist; her skin had the dewey softness that was loveliness itself, and she carried her clothes with a smart patrician dignity. She had been married several years to a man who was considered the handsomest in her city. They were wealthy, had scores of friends, social position, and she apparently enjoyed all the advantages of a successful marriage.

Yet, singularly enough, it was her husband who usually was the cause of her drinking and the ultimate "D. T.'s" which she reached. The thing which started her tippling was on the face of it so trifling and inconsequent that it was almost laughable. It was this:





Her husband, though a finished social product in every other way, sometimes when he forgot himself would eat with a knife instead of a fork!

Several times he mortified her thus in public, and then when they reached home an argument ensued. Both were quick tempered, so the arguments were heated. After they were through she took to drinking, beginning first with a little wine, then going to champagne, and finally, as the habit took possession of her, straight whisky.

Only then did she seem able to drown the vanity that in the last analysis was the reason of her suffering. Even in her wild moments after she had been brought to the springs for treatment, this vanity became apparent, for frequently she would escape from her guards, who were women, and, clad in an expensive nightgown—she had trunkfuls of them—would run out onto the moonlit lawn and execute a wild, disordered dance. But never unless some one was looking. She insisted on an audience! Frequently she would call the maids from the hotel out to watch her.

"Look at me! Look at me!" she would exclaim. "Am I not beautiful?" And when they nodded she seemed gratified indeed.

When she was on the road to recovery her remorse and shame were pitiful. She would look at no one, speak to no one, and each morning, with a book of Rossetti's poems in her white hands, she would wander into the woods and stay there all day, only returning at night, and so late then that she was quite sure no one would see her.

Several times she was down for treatment, but the last I heard was that she and her husband had separated and that she had stopped drinking forever.

Another odd case was that of a Wisconsin minister. He came to the hotel and shortly after his arrival reported the loss of a diamond studded watch and a diamond ring. Together they were worth perhaps as much as $5,000.

The hotel was searched from top to bottom. According to the minister's story he had been followed by persons who wished to rob him. The house detectives were informed of this and every suspicious person was watched. But no trace of the watch or ring was obtained.

And then one day one of the employés about the hotel kicked over a pail of soapy water that had stood untouched for days, and there in the bottom was found the watch. Soon after the ring, too, was found in a crack in the wall behind a mirror in the women's dressing room!

The minister himself had hidden them in their respective places during a period of mental derangement!

This same clergyman, during one of the periods of illusions and delusions, imagined that a long, white sofa pillow was his boyhood sweetheart, and insisted on billing and cooing to her as he took her for a walk down the shaded walks in back of the hotel.

Surrounded by Water.

Then there is the amusing case of two rich Louisville merchants. They came to West Baden to wind up a spree that had been in progress for three weeks. They were turned over to me for attention, but outwitted the guards over them, and after being almost sober got liquor and in less than two hours were drunker than ever.

In front of the hotel is a shallow valley, the bed of the French Lick creek, which sometimes when the rains are heavy is under water. In the center of this valley, on a little hillock, was an old disused coach which for some reason had never been removed.

After the two Louisville merchants had rambled about for several hours they became sleepy and their footsteps eventually brought them up inside the old coach, where they fell soundly into a stuporous sleep. All that night and the next day and night they slept on.

In the meanwhile the rains had been heavy and the valley was rapidly filling with water. On the morning they awoke it was to feel cold spring waters lapping on their feet. They looked out; they were marooned a half a mile from shore and with nothing but deep water between them. And neither could swim.

They were starved, ill, suffering from excesses, and must get ashore. But how? They waved, but none saw them. And then one of the merchants looked back of him, and there three or four yards away was another marooned creature—a cow!

The cow must take them ashore! Somehow, unsteadily, it is true, they managed to bridge the distance between the coach and bossy's island and landed safely. Then both, still under the influence of liquor, seized the cow's tail, held on tight, kicked her in the flanks, and drove her into the swirling water. Mooing with fright, she started to swim, and, once started, she never stopped until she and her strange cargo were ashore.

The two men were nearly dead from privation and their excesses, but were put in the care of nurses, who finally brought them around safely to health and the resolution—never again.

Through With It Forever.

Lastly, and pathetic in its aspects, is the example of a middle aged business man of one of the southern cities. He came of one of the oldest families, had been highly educated, and despite his vice had become successful. But he was a "periodical"—that is, he went for months without drinking and then gave way to mad indulgence.

One day several years ago he started from Frankfort, Ky., to West Baden, intending to join his wife and going by way of Louisville. He boarded an Ohio river steamer which exhibited a bar as one of its chief attractions. That was the last that was seen of him for three weeks. He couldn't get past the bar.

For three weeks he stayed on the boat, traveling back and forth between Louisville and Cincinnati; he seemed to be in a detached state of comfort and lay in his stateroom with bottles piled around him, his fashionably cut clothes still upon him. Never once did he eat, never once did he drink anything but what came from the bar below decks. His face became sunken and drawn, with the peculiar pallor of the periodical drinker; his eyes seemed ablaze in contrast to his dead cheeks, which were covered with a coarse stubble that had grown half an inch in length.

Finally he was taken off the boat and to West Baden, where his wife, who had been frantic with fear and apprehension, helped to nurse him back to a more normal condition.

It took a month to accomplish this. Then she went home. He was to follow her the next day. When his suitcase had been packed he turned to some of the attendants and said: "I'm through with the stuff forever; that last was too close a call for me ever to risk it again."

His words carried conviction—and they were his last words. That morning he started off to the railway station. Every one supposed that he had resumed his business in the southern city. Then one day a dog acted suspiciously as it was passing through a large weed patch not far from the hotel. First he sniffed the air, and then after piercing the brush returned with his tail between his legs. His master followed the course he had taken.

There prone on the soggy ground they found him—the man who had gone home. He lay on his side with his mouth open. His hands were outstretched and looked like they were clinched. But his body was white and cold and stiff.

And beside it, with the pungent dregs still in its bottom, was a gallon demijohn that had once held whisky.

The Frame of Public Favor

Interview with Gertrude M'Coy —Hoppily Speaking.

I WAS hopping about on one foot on the roof when somebody vurr' blond and airy and chic blew up from below, gave one astonished glance, and commenced to hop, too.

"Haven't an idea what all this is about," she gasped presently breathlessly, "but it seems to be the thing to do, so I'll chime right in."

We—the "we" consisting of several members of the Billie Burke company, Director Edwin, and myself—after a look at her red, mystified countenance, were obliged to stop our exercise, lean against the chimney, and laugh till we cried. First to recover himself was Director Edwin, who laid hold of the lady, who was still stubbornly hopping, and brought her over to me. The lady, it transpired, was Miss Gertrude McCoy, formerly of Edison, who had come over to the Kleine studio for a little visit with Mr. Edwin, who at one time was her director. She had been directed to the roof and had come to discover us taking exercise, consisting of a one legged race across the roof.

"No doubt fine—but it looks foolish!" Miss McCoy remarked dryly, wiping her warm cheeks with a wisp of handkerchief. "Lucky for you it was me instead of a visiting head of some great institution. What are we all going to do next?"

"Most of us," Mr. Edwin said, "are going back to the studio to work—and visitors are not admitted."

"But I came to visit," Miss McCoy said disappointedly.

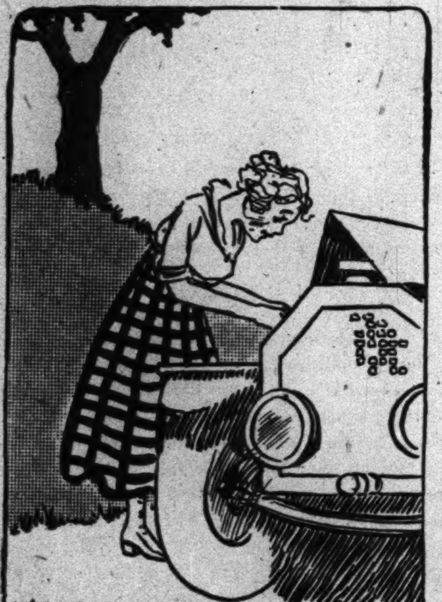
"Um sall!" I said. "Um sall visit wiv me." Upon which Mr. Edwin disgustedly departed, followed by his willing workers, and Miss McCoy and I, having found a convenient slab, sat down and plunged into conversation, I telling her that I had heard so much about her, etc., she saying so had she about me—she couldn't remember what, but the name was familiar. So, you see, it didn't take us long to get acquainted.

"Still with Edison?" I asked after the discussion of generalities had been concluded.

"No; O, no, indeed. Left 'em a long time ago."

"Where are you now?"

"Resting. Rather—worrying. I'm anxious to get to work again. I thought it would be great to have nothing to do for awhile but drive around, dance, and do whatever I just happened to fool think about—and it was—for a little while. Then I began to get tired. Now I'm awfully tired. Must get back to work!"



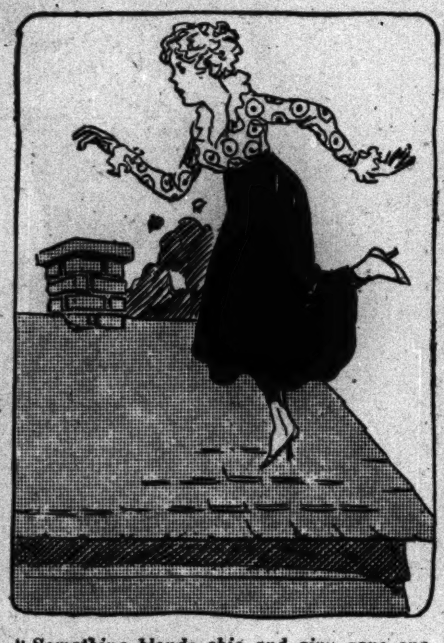
"Understands the mechanism like an old family physician."

While she talked I watched her interestedly. She had on a wine colored, fur trimmed suit and toque to match, from which last her fair hair escaped and curled distractingly. Big gray blue eyes, black fringed, a clear skin, and a piquant nose, frankly freckled, were her charms. And I noticed and liked her wide, sweet mouth with its white teeth. Said the vivacious young woman in answer to queries:

"How long have I been acting? Land, child, almost ever since I can remember. I was only 8 years old when a theatrical troupe passed through my home town—Oxford, Tenn. The members saw me and discovered that I evidently possessed the qualifications to supply a long felt need. There was a little part I could play that would be a help. So I did. My family was so astonished at my success that they said nothing when later I joined a stock company. Then I went with Lulu Glazer. After that I was with Eddie Foy and, O, lots of others. Then about four years ago I went to the Edison company—and—do I like the movies? Well, just don't I! The main thing I like about 'em is that I get a chance to be so many different people. I should die of ennui if I had to just keep on being Gertrude McCoy to the end of the chapter."

"Can't see why," I interposed.

"You could if you were me," was the somewhat cryptic answer. "I'm a restless individual—that's why. Never satisfied. Get what I want and find it isn't what I want at all. Want something else."



"Something blonde chic and airy gave one astonished glance and commenced to hop, too."

"Just what would you swap your little old automobile for?" I asked her slyly—for it's history that Gertrude McCoy and her car are inseparable. Not only does she drive it at an alarming rate of speed through traffic and by policemen but she understands the mechanism of the thing like an old family physician, and there isn't anything goes wrong she can't fix. At the question she laughed.

"Got me there," she admitted. "I'm always true to my car. I like it when I'm happy, and when I'm blue I go out and chase myself until the blues have disappeared. Couldn't get along without my car."

From then on the conversation drifted. Was she married? She allowed she wasn't—then. (I didn't say I knew she had been—oncet! Why force a lady to confide when a lady doesn't want to?) Tangoing, clothes, etc., all had their share in the talk. Then Miss McCoy found that she was yearning for a ride. She asked me if I didn't yearn to accompany her. I said that I did, but—I felt the Billie Burke serial required my attention, so we parted—friends, I hope, for between you and me I think Miss Gertrude McCoy is quite a fascinating young woman.

Henry King received the highest number of votes last week. His picture, therefore, will appear in The Frame of Public Favor next Sunday. Of the other players voted upon the following six are the leaders: Bessie Barriscale, Marshal Neilan, Grace Cunard, Vera Sisson, Eddie Polo, and William Farnum.

Vivian Martin

PRETTY Vivian Martin of the World Film forces made her stage debut in the arms of Richard Mansfield when at the age of 6. She was carried on the stage by the gentleman mentioned, who was then playing in "Cyrano de Bergerac." She remarked at that time, "Six patties, please," which is, you will admit, quite some speech for a young lady of that age. For a number of years she was on the stage. Quite recently pictures claimed her and in quite a short space of time she has won rather an enviable reputation. Her debut was made in the picturization of Owen Davis' play, "The Wishing Ring." Later she was seen with Lew Fields in "Old Dutch." "The Arrival of Perpetua" is her latest picture. When on the stage Miss Martin appeared in a children's company Charles Frohman put out to interpret the Barry masterpiece, "Peter Pan." Later she was with W. H. Crane in "Father and the Boys," with Wallace Eddinger in "The Only Son," in "Officer 666," "Stop Thief," "The Call of Youth," and "The High Cost of Loving." Miss Martin, who is slender, dark haired and dark eyed, comes of an old English family of actors. She is quite young.

Told by the Stars on the Stars

FAY TINCHER.

Funny Fay Tincher of Triangle was born on All Fools day, but she is not a fool by any means. Her sign, Aires, warrants this, and here's what her sign says of her. She—

IMPRESSES HER PERSONALITY ON OTHERS

Is brilliant.

Is witty.

Loves dancing.

Has a personality of her own, which is rarely impressed by the personality of others, but which never fails to impress itself on others.

Is interested in literature and art.

Can be coaxed, but not forced.

Loves order and harmony. Throws a fit when order and harmony are not to be had.

IS BRILLIANT

Has high aspirations and knows how to carry out her ideas.

Should wear a diamond, as it is her birthstone.

Should choose sympathetic friends among those born between July 23 and Aug. 23 and between Nov. 23 and Dec. 22.

EARLE WILLIAMS.

Earle Williams of the Vitagraph company was born on Feb. 28. Pisces is his sign. This being true, Mr. Williams—

Is of an inquiring turn of mind.

Is always on the alert, in a mild but quiet way, to learn whatever he can of interest (thus qualified by nature, you see, to be a detective).

ALWAYS ON THE ALERT, IN A MILD AND QUIET WAY

Is extremely thoughtful, industrious, and persevering.

Is apparently submissive and yielding, but really makes up his mind what he wants and gets it, no matter what the odds against it may be.

Is a great reader and allows nothing in magazines or newspapers to escape his notice.

Has an inventive turn of mind.

EXTREMELY THOUGHTFUL

Is severe and faultfinding in business and domestic life. (We trust Mr. Pisces made a mistake in this case.)

Loves to study out little problems in mechanics and engineering.

Is extremely sensitive to surroundings and to changes in the weather. (Probably gets between feather beds when a thunderstorm threatens.)

Should wear an amethyst, as it is his birthstone, and if he wants a really sympathetic wife and friends he should pick them among the persons born between June 22 and July 22 and between Oct. 24 and Nov. 22.

HELEN ROSSON.

Helen Rosson was born on the 14th day of June under the sign of Gemini. Consequently she—

Is inclined to be restless, changeable, vivacious, nervous, and anxious.

A MIND THAT IS A BALANCE

Is a great little arguer.

Refuses to be sick, thus being the despair of doctors and friends when there is anything the matter with her.

Is a great lover of education.

Has a mind that is a balance between the ideal and the worldly.

LOVES EDUCATION

Has a mind that insists on working no matter whether her body is resting or not.

Is easily irritated.

Is inclined to be a faddist.

Should wear an agate, as it is her birthstone.

To be happily married she should marry some one born between Jan. 21 and Feb. 19 or between Sept. 24 and Oct. 23.

WILLIAM RUSSELL.

William Russell was an Aires baby (O, girls, some baba!). If he follows his sign he—

Loves music and dancing.

HAS A FIT WHEN FOLKS TRY TO "SHOW HIM"

Is as full of life as a nut is meat.

Thinks things out for himself, refusing to be influenced by the thoughts of others.

Has to work things out his own way and throws a fit when people try to tell him how things should be done.

Can be reasoned with but not forced.

USUALLY PICKED FOR A LEADER

Loves literature and art.

Has exceedingly original ideas concerning just what constitutes right and wrong.

Is possessed of great executive faculties and is usually picked as the leader no matter what the enterprise.

Should wear a diamond. It is his birthstone.

Should choose sympathetic friends among those born between July 23 and Aug. 23 and between Nov. 23 and Dec. 22. (When did you say you were born?)

MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

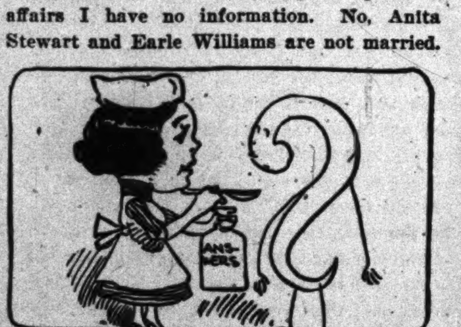
MARJORY K.: Yes, William Shay was on the legitimate stage before becoming a moving picture actor. Regarding his personal affairs I have no information. No, Anita Stewart and Earle Williams are not married.



FRANCES P.: A lot of patients? Well, of course if you want to call them that. I prefer to call them correspondents. Address Miss Mary Fuller, in care of the Universal company, 1600 Broadway, New York City; Marc MacDermott, in care of the Edison company, 2826 Decatur avenue, Bedford Park, N. Y. W. J. Tedmarsh took the part of Quabba in "The Diamond from the Sky." I am just mighty glad you wrote and hope you will continue to be a "patient" of mine.

INTERESTED READER: Francis X. Bushman is married.

MOVIE LOVER: Marguerite Clarke was born in 1882. Vivian Rich is in her 20's. Charles Chaplin is 26 and Alice Joyce is about 30.

B. F. T.: Following is the cast of the Fox production, "The Galley Slave": Theda Bara took the part of Francesca Brabaut, an Italian model; Claire Whitney played the part of Cicely Blaine, an American heiress; Lillian Lawrence was Mrs. Blaine, Ben Hendricks was Mr. Blaine, Stuart Holmes played the part of Antoine Brabaut, Jane Lee was Dolores, the child of Francesca, and Hardee Kirkland was Baron le Bois, a nobleman.

DIMPLES: Um, wish I had some! Stories vary as to whether Robert Warwick is married or not. He is in his early 30's. If you must have an answer to this question I would advise you to write to him in care of the World Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. Be sure to inclose a stamped, self addressed envelope. You may receive an answer and you may not, but you will surely not unless you inclose the envelope.

RUTH S.: So mother's child wishes to know whether I am a blonde or a brunette! Well, let's say the latter. Marguerite Clarke is 32 years old. Billy Jacobs' picture has not been in the Frame. He is about 6 years old. His mother is Mrs. Jacobs.

MRS. ZUZON: If you will send me a stamped, self addressed envelope I will be glad to mail you printed material I have on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios. Hope you are successful in writing and disposing of your idea.

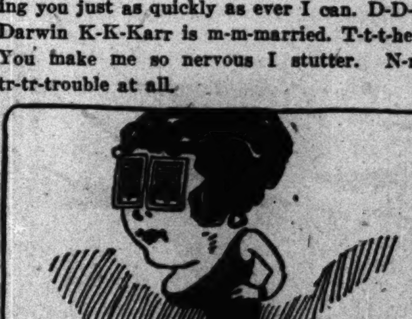
MARGARET A.: No trouble at all, my dear. Earl Williams is not married. He is in his 30s. Grace Cunard and Francis Ford collaborated. Mary Pickford and her husband do not often appear in the same picture. Ben Wilson is not married. Neither is Grace Cunard. George Larkin is married to Dolly Larkin. Pearl White spends a part of her time in New York. No, Francis Ford and Victoria Forde are not brother and sister. You see he is minus that "e" on his last name.

M. P. B.: Yes, I please would answer a few questions. Mary Pickford has blue eyes. Donald Crisp took the part of Stanley Monroe in "The Girl of Yesterday." Arthur Hoops was the leading man in "Esmeralda." Violet MacMillan is still in her teens. No, Marguerite Snow is playing with Paul Gilmore now. Beverly Bayne plays opposite Francis X. Bushman. You have not asked too many questions. Come again.

D. J. W.: Your Sherlock sounding deduction regarding the parentage of Edith Storey is agley. William Chase Storey is the name of her father and her mother's name before her marriage was Minnie Thorn. You put a lot of thought on the matter, didn't you?

MAE: What is your last name, Mae? For a picture of Lillian Gish you had better write to the publicity manager of the Triangle company, 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, inclosing a quarter in stamps.

CHICAGOAN: Burr-r-r-r! I am answering you just as quickly as ever I can. D-D-D-Darwin K-K-Karr is m-m-married. T-t-t-here. You make me so nervous I stutter. N-n-o tr-tr-trouble at all.



BIG BLUE EYES: So far as I know, Irving Cummings has not signed up with any company, but there's no doubt about it that he is one handsome young man. So Theda Bara is your favorite. Do I think those eyes are the windows of her soul? Alas! You have asked me one question I cannot answer. I should say, however, probably not. If so—Omylovewon'tyoupleasepulldownthecurtain?

A YOUNG PIANIST: I am mighty sorry I can't help you, but you would have to give me the name of the company producing the picture in order to get the information that you desire. Can't you possibly remember the name of the producing company? Let me hear from you any time I can be of service. I assure you it is no trouble at all to answer your questions when it is possible.

1917?

by Edwin Balmer

Herewith is presented the fifth installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS.

In Elgin, Ill., live the Ashby family, consisting of Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter, Nellie, married to Bob Wendell, a navy lieutenant; and Jim Ashby, a son, engaged to Agnes Ware. Nathan Ashby is the archtype of pacifist, deaf to the warnings of the imminence of danger to America, and his deafness in this respect is shared by his son. They are impatient with Bob's refusal to resign from service and take a more lucrative job with a business concern. In the Ashby works there are two foreign chemists, Ingouf and Enloe, experts in their line. Their night work and the discovery of an incendiary bomb in the brass works arouse Bob's suspicions. While driving down a lonely road with Jim they discover the two chemists on motorcycles ahead of them. Thinking they are being trailed, the chemists hurl bombs back at the car and a revolver battle ensues. Ingouf is killed by one of his own bombs, but Enloe escapes.

Lieut. Barratt of the U. S. Scout Cruiser Salem has, in defiance of orders to proceed to Haiti with two of the government's representatives aboard, steamed east in the north Atlantic and encountered the fleet of the former European enemies. The foreign fleet fires on the Salem—a deliberate act of war—and a one-sided battle results in the sinking of one of the enemy's largest ships and then of the Salem, but not before the number and class of ships comprising the fleet and the fact that they had fired the first shot have been wirelessed back to Washington.

Bob Wendell is notified to report at Newport News, and after bidding farewell to Nellie he is driven to Chicago by Jim. After Bob is gone Jim takes out the torn scrap of paper found on the body of Ingouf, which revealed the fact that Ingouf and Enloe were spies who had received orders for their duty at the outbreak of war. With the address "S. D. Marlatt, Insurance building," on the torn envelope in mind, Jim seeks the building, feeling that "Marlatt" is the chief of the prince regent's spies. Some one is in the office, and as he makes his way in he hears others coming up the stairway. As he switches on the light a revolver spits its flame in front of his face; he fires back, but a heavy blow upon his head fells him. He regains consciousness to find himself lying on a couch, guarded by one of the agents. He feigns unconsciousness while the agents try to revive him.

[Copyright: 1916: By Edwin Balmer.]

VII.

JIM'S teeth clenched and his hands strained as he recognized this situation. Bole brought to his lips the glass of whisky and water; he forced a little down Jim's throat and dashed more over his face.

Jim succeeded in still feigning stupor. Bole rolled him over on his face and undid the cords which bound his arms, seizing Jim's wrists and moving the arms to stir Jim into life.

The door of the room was shut tight, and as no sound came from other parts of the house Jim felt assured that a little noise would send no alarm to other rooms. As Bole rolled him over with arms loosed he still lay limp; then, as Bole bent over him, Jim caught a loop of the rope which had bound him and threw it over Bole's neck. The man leaped back in his first start of surprise and so drew the loop tight. He did not cry out at once, and, as Jim leaped upon him and drew the cord tighter and tighter about the man's neck, Bole now could not cry out. With his breath stopped, he did not fight effectively; he struggled uselessly to seize the noose with his fingers and tear it from his neck, till, with mouth gasping open and bulging eyes shut, he crumpled.

Jim pushed him down on the couch and swiftly searched his pockets, finding first a revolver; in another pocket was a large handkerchief. Jim stuffed this cloth quickly into Bole's mouth, and, securing it there, he loosed the noose about the man's neck. Bole's breath returned in loud, rasping snores. There was no way to stop the snoring but to remove the gag; Jim dared not do that. He worked swiftly, binding Bole as he had been bound and in addition securing him to the couch. The man was conscious again, though weak and breathing hard. Jim delayed over him no longer; he switched out the light, stepped to the window, pulled back the shade, and peered out.

The space directly below the window was in the shadow of the house and was therefore quite dark, but the moonlight, striking over the roof, illumined the ground twenty or thirty feet away and showed a brick paved area between the house of the spies and a neighboring house, which at that moment was dark. The area extended back to an alley, fenced in with a high brick wall with a wooden gate which was closed. Jim was in a room on the first floor, and as his eyes became used to the darkness he could see that the paved area reached below his window. After throwing up the sash he could easily gain the ground; and then——.

A man suddenly moved out into the moonlight as Jim was putting his hand to the window—a young, active man, alert and watchful. Some noise in the alley seemed to have attracted his attention, for he stepped quickly to the gate and before opening it drew a revolver and held it ready. Another man appeared from the other side of the house and joined the first; together they investigated the alley, closed the gate, and withdrew to the seclusion of the shadow.

Jim moved away from the window; opportunity to escape through the house could not be worse than the risk of attempting flight through that window. He felt his way to the door without again turning on the light; he stood and listened there, opened the door a crack, and peered into a handsomely decorated, dimly lighted hallway with polished hardwood floor and with a rich oriental rug down the middle.

There was no one in the hall at that moment, and a room which was all dark opened just ahead. Jim made sure of Bole's revolver—his own had been taken together with everything else, including some business letters which had been in his pocket—softly removed the key from the inside of the door, and stepped into the hall. He stood a moment with every nerve tense; he locked the door behind him, took the key, and crept into the dark room just ahead. If an alarm were raised now, or if the "sir" came again to see whether the prisoner was conscious, a door must be broken down before the spies could learn that their captive was loose.

Enough light glowed in from the hall to show Jim that he was in the dining room—a large room with heavy, fashionable furniture; the rug upon which he stepped was soft and thick. There was another door at the other end, and as Jim crept cautiously toward this he heard voices; they were the voices of women as well as men, speaking in quiet, guarded tones. In the air was the odor of cigarets and cigar smoke.

A girl's voice suddenly rose in a reckless, excited exclamation which Jim could not make out, but at which a man laughed; another with a deep, heavy voice—it was not the voice of the "sir" who had visited the rear room—rebuked the girl, and there was silence. Jim gained the front of the dining room; velvet hangings half covered the doorway, which opened into a front hall; directly across this hall was another room, lighted and evidently much larger than the dining room—a salon with delicate paper and pretty gilded chandeliers and wall lights, with graceful table and chairs and with a grand piano of a corresponding style. Brocaded curtains were drawn close over the windows and at the larger table near the center of the room and also at a smaller table at the side men and women were at work.

There was a heap of papers upon one end of the larger table; and a tall man, who stood with his back to the door, sorted over this pile, put some sheets aside, and passed others along the table, giving a verbal direction with each. In some cases the direction was brief—only a word or two—in other instances it was longer, and twice while Jim watched the tall man himself bent and wrote upon the papers which he took from the pile.

Jim could see as the sheets were held up that they already bore writing; there was no possible question of the nature of the work going on; under the direction of the tall man at the large table the others were preparing letters of the sort found on Ingouf's body. The papers in the pile which the tall man was sorting were undoubtedly just the ordinary form letters of life insurance solicitation, and the great majority of them would remain no more than that; they would be addressed to persons who had no connection with the plots of the regent's agents, and they would be offered life insurance in the regular manner if they applied for it at Marlatt's office. The letters which the tall man passed down the table unquestionably looked the same as the others; but they were addressed to spies, and at the tall man's direction orders were being written in invisible fluid between the typewritten lines—orders which the spies would develop by some chemical.

Jim crouched and crept closer, forgetting his impulse merely to attempt escape. If he could cause the capture of those in the rooms across the hall he would have the chief of the regent's spies there, together with the lists of the agents and the designations of the work each was ordered to do. The letters, between the lines of which the secret instructions now were being written, evidently had been at Marlatt's office when he had learned after midnight of developments which made it imperative for him to issue new orders, so Marlatt had gone to his office and directed another to meet him there; when Jim had surprised them they had overpowered him and brought him unconscious to this house, where they had impressed the family to the work required.

And more than the family of this house were at work; two men besides the tall man at the end were writing at the larger table; three women assisted them; at the smaller table were a young man and two girls. These three apparently had spent the earlier hours of the night at a dance or some formal entertainment; the young man was in evening clothes and both the girls wore décolleté. One of these girls faced the door, and as she looked up and laughed at some remark of the young man's Jim stared.

He knew that girl; he knew her not as an acquaintance but as one whose picture often appeared in papers accompanying accounts of social affairs, one who was pointed out at the opera or among the spectators at a polo or tennis match. Where he had seen her Jim could not remember, but that he had seen her under some such conditions and that she was one of the popular debutantes of the year before he was certain.

The sight of her laughing and bantering with the man across the table from her struck Jim aghast. Could such as she be there among the spies of the regent planning betrayal of the country, or since he had broken into the office in the city had he been going upon some horrible mistake and could it be that these people had proper business of their own together there in that guarded house at a quarter to 4 in the morning? He had no need to summon remembrance of Ingouf's body beside the road, the first shot fired at him, and the rest of the fight in the office. the ropes about his arms as he recovered consciousness; the girl herself gave him now reassurance. She called to the tall man at the other table: "And Vettis of Aurora; what did you say he was to enter? Artillery?"

"Aviation corps, if Illinois sends one," the tall man corrected curtly. "He's not to try to communicate with us at all, after this, until he is in the service."

Jim retreated further behind the velvet portieres. Somewhere on that first floor, and probably in the rear of the hall, there must be a telephone, and a plan suddenly had matured in his mind. He stole noiselessly to the other door of the dining room and peered again into the ill lit rear hall. Everything was quiet there; the silence at the door of the den told that Bole was still securely bound and could not have succeeded in removing his gag. Jim went past the den and found another door. He opened it and looked into a kitchen entry. He went further and found another door. This opened into a closet which was dark until the door was closed again. Then an electric light burned overhead and Jim found himself facing a little desk, upon which a telephone stood. The number of the telephone was printed upon a paper strip under the nickel guard of the transmitter. A Chicago city directory was upon the desk, and Jim, laying down Bole's revolver, opened the book. He turned to S. D. Marlatt's name and read the telephone number opposite his residence address. It did not correspond with that upon the instrument. This residence, then, was not Marlatt's.

Jim lifted the receiver and called the number given in the book as Marlatt's office. Sibert and his men could not have visited Marlatt's office and gone away before he got there. If they went to the office at all they must have arrived after Marlatt and his companion had taken Jim away; in that case, Sibert might be at the office now. Jim heard the burr of the ringing signal but twice before some one at the other end of the wire answered. It was not Sibert's voice, unless it was much disguised.

"Who is this?" Jim asked.

The voice repeated Marlatt's office number. If the man at the other end was a spy he was being cautious. If he was one of the secret service men he evidently believed that one of Marlatt's agents must be calling. Jim spoke quickly. "Is Mr. Sibert there?"

"Mr. Sibert?" the man at the other end seemed not to have heard the name.

"If he is there, tell him this is James Ashby, whom he met tonight. Tell him to come to the phone and I will prove it."

"Describe Robert Wendell!" The voice at the other end altered suddenly to Sibert's.

Jim complied quickly. Sibert interrupted him after an instant. "Well, Ashby, what is it?"

"I am at ——" Jim read the number of his telephone to Sibert. "It is a large, fashionable house, Sibert! I do not know what the names of the people are or where it is, but I believe it is not Marlatt's."

"One of my men is now calling central on another phone to find out where you are talking from. Go on!" Sibert directed.

"I went to the office from the station."

"I supposed so," Sibert commented grimly.

"I would have waited for you, but I saw a light. Some one was up there. I went in and was attacked. There were two men, Sibert. They knocked me out and carried me away. They carried away everything they wanted from the office, too. I was tied when I came to myself, but I got loose. I'm free in the house now, and they don't know it." Swiftly he related what he had seen.

Sibert gave him directions curtly. "We know where you are. You're about a mile north of the river and two blocks from the lake. We will be there within ten minutes. If they've guards outside, as you say, we can't surprise those inside. You are to watch what they do with their lists and other papers, and if they try to destroy them stop them. Take a chance! After you hear a disturbance outside you can count upon our coming in within thirty seconds. Understand?"

"I understand."

The receiver at the other end was hung up. Jim sat still, listening. Some one was passing in the hall—a man by the heaviness of the tread—and then there was silence. Nothing indicated that any one had heard the talking at the telephone, but Jim waited in the closet before he opened the door. Finding the rear hall empty he crossed to the dining room. He hid toward the center of the big room now, contenting himself with listening to the voices of those in the salon and not trying to see for fear himself of being seen. With Sibert and his men coming the essential thing was to keep himself free to act when the crisis came. The work of the men and the women in the salon seemed to be proceeding in the same manner as a few minutes before; then the tall man who was directing the others stepped into the hall. He went directly back to the smoking room, in which Jim had been confined and, trying the knob, he exclaimed with surprise at finding the door locked. He knocked upon it and, receiving no response, called, "Bole! Bole! Why do you not open? What is the matter?

Those in the salon heard this and ceased their work; two of the men—the young man who had been with the two girls and one of the others—ran into the hall at a call from the tall man. He pounded upon the door again and called to Bole. Then the three apparently put their shoulders to the door; it held and some one brought a bar or an ax or something to break it down. The panels crashed in and then the door burst open; with swearing and cries of alarm the three men broke into the little room. The others who had been in the salon—the three women and two girls and one of the men—had now gone into the hall too and left the large front room deserted. Jim crossed behind them into the salon.

Outside the house, as well as within, there was disturbance. It might mean that Sibert and his men had arrived; it might mean that the guards without, alarmed by the confusion within, were entering to investigate. In either case, it was the moment in which Jim must act—the moment in which he must take his chance. He swept up a heap of letters from the larger table and, bundling them together, he thrust them under his coat before any one turned about. Then the one who turned was the young girl who had sat facing the door. Jim had made no noise which could have caused her to suspect his presence. She seemed to have realized before any of the others that the fact that Bole was bound meant that the one who had been Bole's prisoner must be free in the house. She spun about to the salon to protect the documents there; and, seeing Jim, she did not recoil; she cried to the others and ran at him. The rest, still amazed, did not follow her at once and she advanced alone upon Jim. He backed toward the nearest window and, pointing his revolver, tried to frighten her.

"Stop!" he warned her sharply. "Go back!"

"Shoot!" she dared him. "Please fire!" and she rushed at him.

TEENIE WEENIE

TWINS ARRIVE

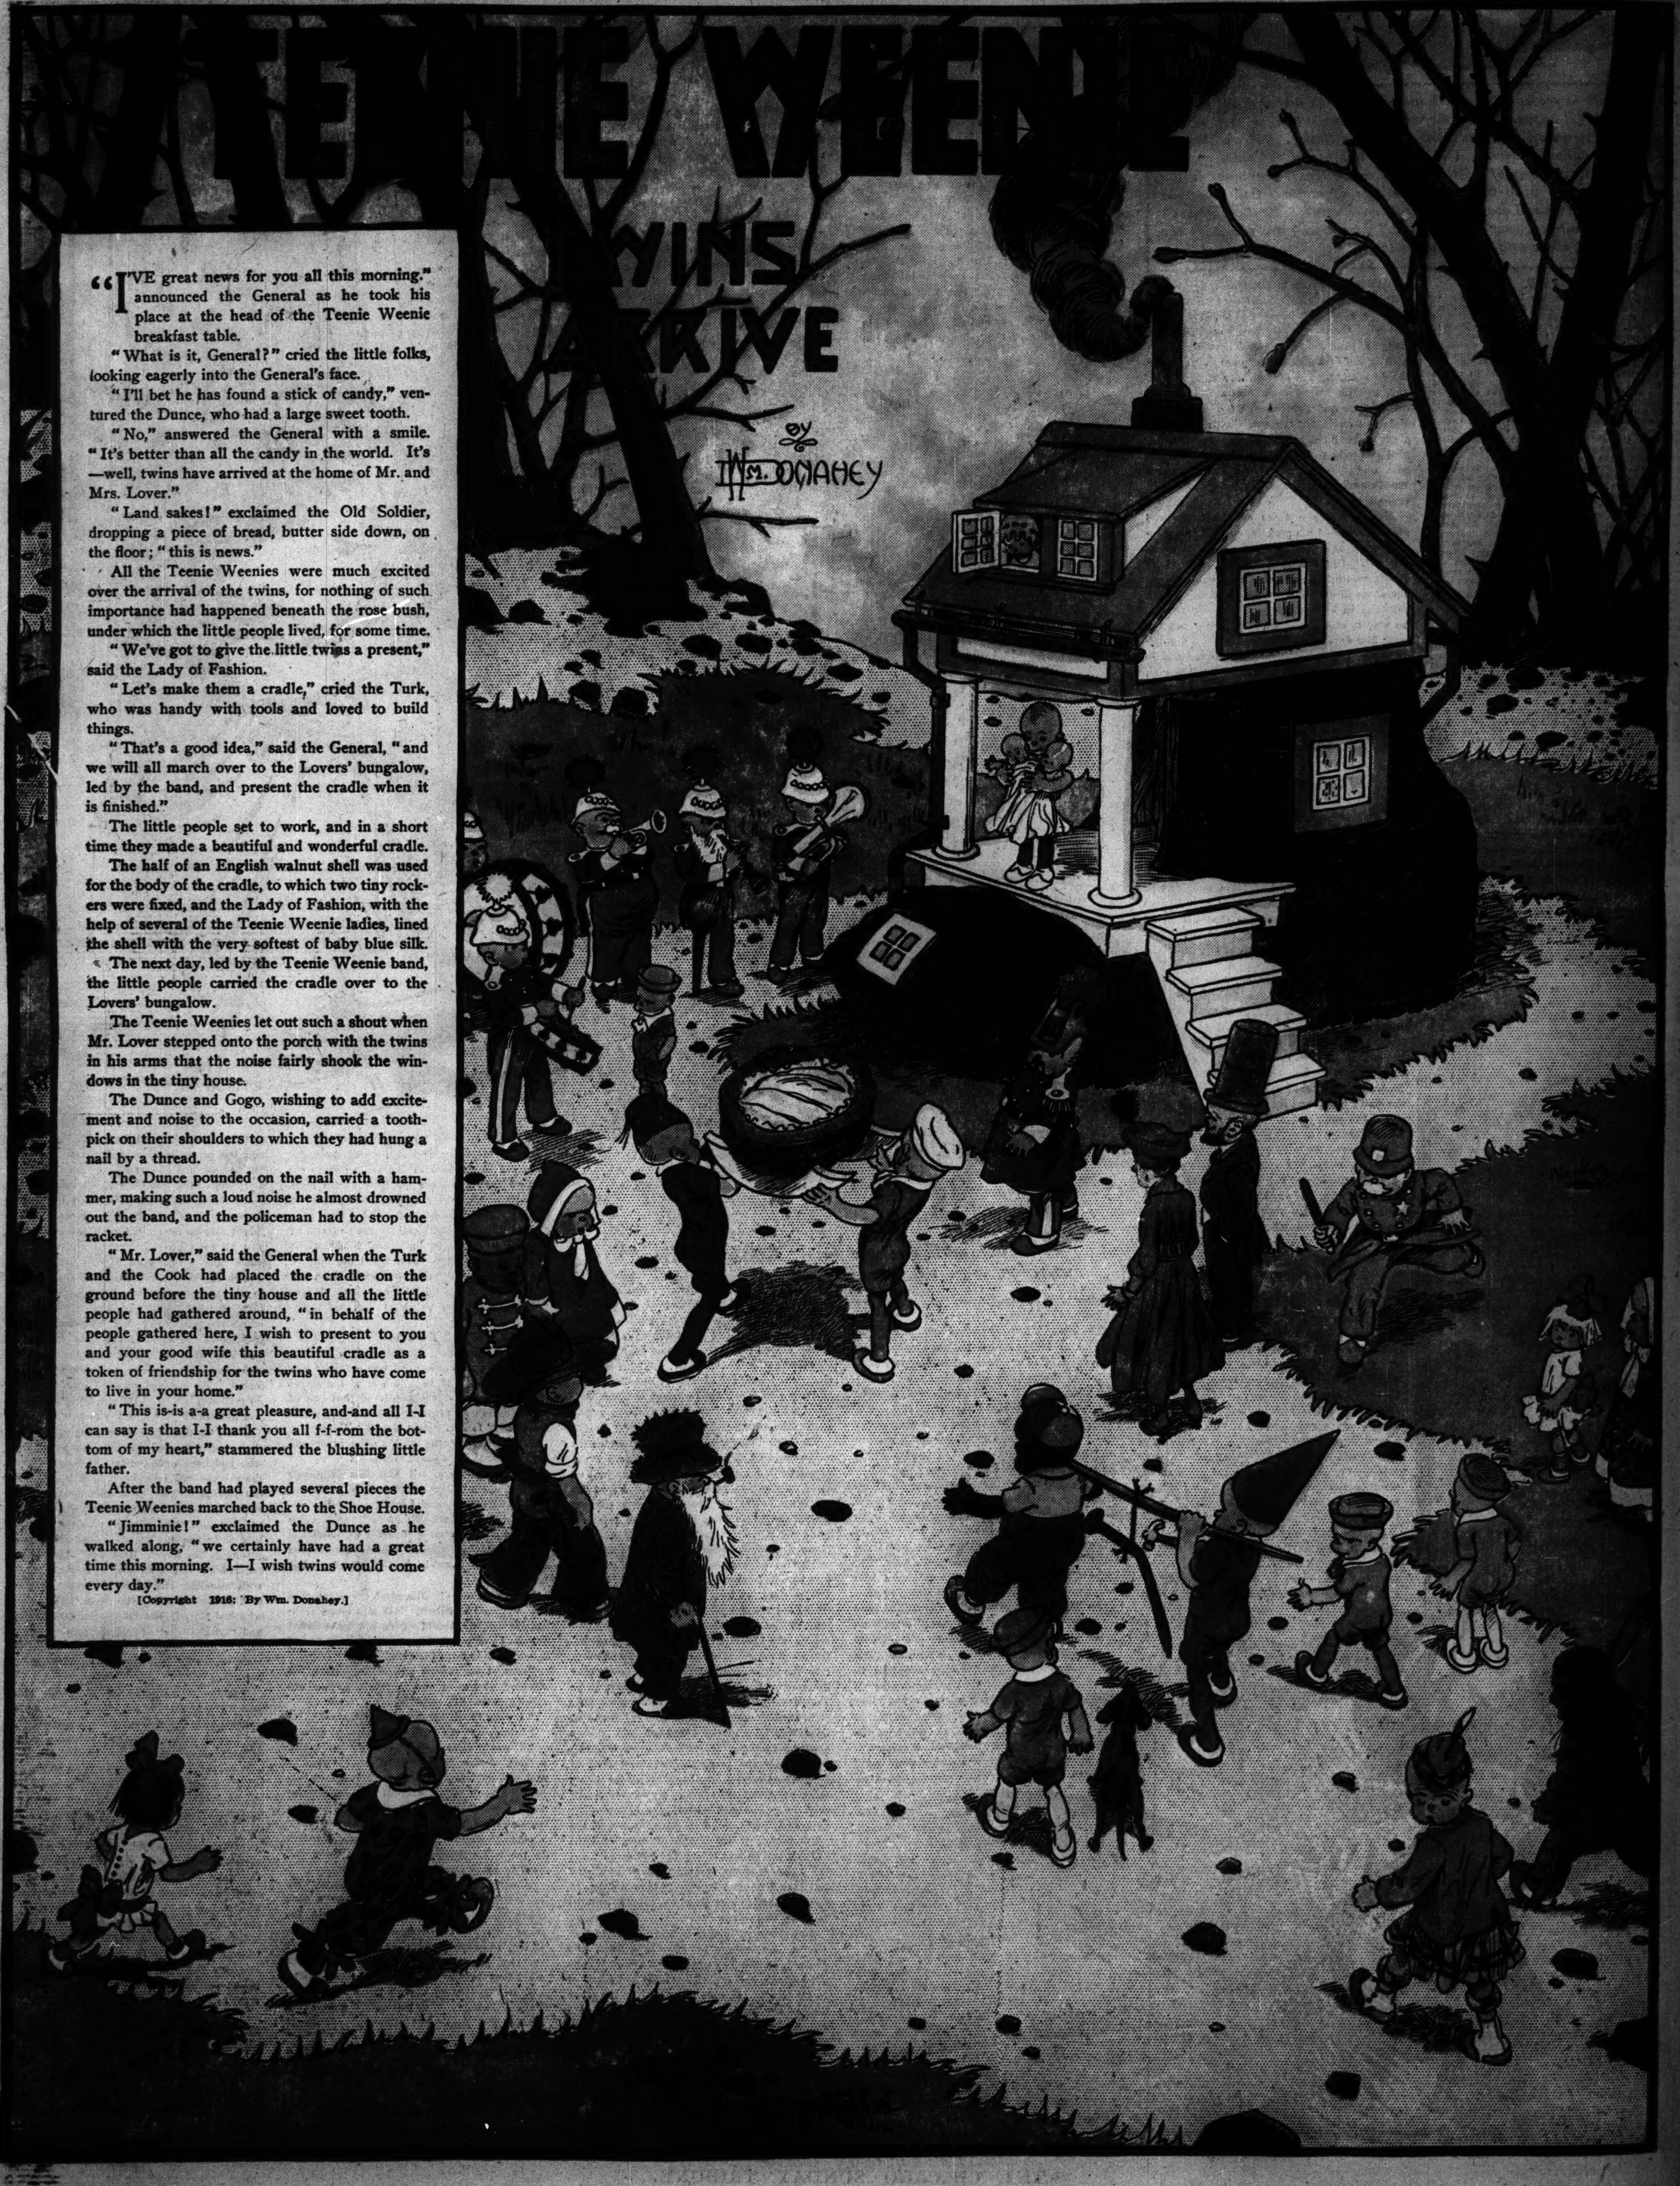
BY WM. DONAHEY



"I'VE great news for you all this morning," announced the General as he took his place at the head of the Teenie Weenie breakfast table.

"What is it, General?" cried the little folks, looking eagerly into the General's face.

"I'll bet he has found a stick of candy," ventured the Dunce, who had a large sweet tooth.

"No," answered the General with a smile. "It's better than all the candy in the world. It's—well, twins have arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lover."

"Land sakes!" exclaimed the Old Soldier, dropping a piece of bread, butter side down, on the floor; "this is news."

All the Teenie Weenies were much excited over the arrival of the twins, for nothing of such importance had happened beneath the rose bush, under which the little people lived, for some time.

"We've got to give the little twins a present," said the Lady of Fashion.

"Let's make them a cradle," cried the Turk, who was handy with tools and loved to build things.

"That's a good idea," said the General, "and we will all march over to the Lovers' bungalow, led by the band, and present the cradle when it is finished."

The little people set to work, and in a short time they made a beautiful and wonderful cradle.

The half of an English walnut shell was used for the body of the cradle, to which two tiny rockers were fixed, and the Lady of Fashion, with the help of several of the Teenie Weenie ladies, lined the shell with the very softest of baby blue silk.

The next day, led by the Teenie Weenie band, the little people carried the cradle over to the Lovers' bungalow.

The Teenie Weenies let out such a shout when Mr. Lover stepped onto the porch with the twins in his arms that the noise fairly shook the windows in the tiny house.

The Dunce and Gogo, wishing to add excitement and noise to the occasion, carried a toothpick on their shoulders to which they had hung a nail by a thread.

The Dunce pounded on the nail with a hammer, making such a loud noise he almost drowned out the band, and the policeman had to stop the racket.

"Mr. Lover," said the General when the Turk and the Cook had placed the cradle on the ground before the tiny house and all the little people had gathered around, "in behalf of the people gathered here, I wish to present to you and your good wife this beautiful cradle as a token of friendship for the twins who have come to live in your home."

"This is-is a-a great pleasure, and-and all I-I can say is that I-I thank you all f-f-rom the bottom of my heart," stammered the blushing little father.

After the band had played several pieces the Teenie Weenies marched back to the Shoe House.

"Jimminie!" exclaimed the Dunce as he walked along, "we certainly have had a great time this morning. I—I wish twins would come every day."

WITH each returning season the desire for life out of doors increases and beautiful clothes are originated for women who enjoy the festivities of the garden or flower embattled piazza. In the illustration several most interesting creations are depicted, for the new modes possess great charm.

At the left a dainty dress of salmon pink linen is pictured, and, while it is still rather cold to adopt such attire in northern states, yet it is well suited for the needs of women who sojourn in the south at this time. Buttons and soutache braiding make effective trimming on this model, the latter being disposed in large rectilinear shaped panels about the hem of the skirt. The flaring pockets that follow the lines of the bodice are located by rows of self colored buttons and a quaint touch is revealed in the fan plaited organdie from which the cuffs, yoke, and collar are fashioned. In deference to fashion's mandates a pleasing dash of color is introduced in the prim little tie of peacock blue velvet ribbon which apparently holds the yoke in position.

The broad brimmed hat accentuates this color note, for it is developed from peacock blue hemp trimmed with ribbon of the same shade, while the facing of black and white striped linen hints of the favor that is accorded such fabrics this season.

A rich black taffeta is chosen for the charming dress depicted in the center of the group. The circular skirt is extremely wide, for at the hem it measures fully eight yards around, and its spreading appearance is further accentuated by the heavy cords that seem to buoy up the skirt. Oddly shaped flaps mark the points where little pockets are cleverly inserted. These correspond perfectly with the bodice, which is quaintly snipped about the waistline. The sleeve, too, is finished in similar style, while about the shoulders a huge organdie collar is gracefully draped. This is hemstitched, and where the collar is fastened two simply fashioned burnt orange and wistaria flowers tied with peacock ribbon are tucked into the bodice.

Black leghorn is chosen for the handsome chapeau that crests this creation. An edging of white organdie softens the brim of this attractive hat, which is adorned with flowers that match those on the dress. The trimming of peacock blue grosgrain ribbon lends another bright note to this fascinating creation.

Characterised by features that recall a decidedly picturesque era in dress, the gown at the right is originated in gray voile and net. The high collar is decorated with a narrow ruffle of gray ostrich, a trimming that is also cleverly used on the skirt. The bodice owes its individuality to an odd outstanding fold that is lined with nile green silk, and this is, by the way, apparently held in position by a drab gray grosgrain ribbon that girds the shoulders and is formally bowed in the center front. Nile green silk is also chosen to line the soft folds of the overskirt, while dainty flowers made of silk decorate the net sleeves.

The younger generation must not, however, be overlooked, and one of the loveliest frocks for the school girl is illustrated at the left of the group. This is made of cream net, with ruffles on the shoulders and cuffs. A lattice work belt is developed from old gold grosgrain ribbon and old blue rosebuds.

The crown of the leghorn hat is outlined with flowers, while a gold ribbon is slipped through the brim and tied at one side.

The little 5 year old will adore the dress of blue batiste, while its simple but effective style will doubtless please her mother. The smocking, which makes a delightful decoration, is done in black and white thread, and a row of feather stitching marks the depth of the hem. The collar of sheer batiste is also embroidered with blue, for the child is equally insistent that her clothes possess the individual touch that marks those of her mother.

A hat of dark blue straw is selected to give the final finish to this child's costume. This is ornamented with flowers and old blue ribbons.

MEN AND WOMEN

MORE women than ever before attended a prize fight on the continent of North America, witnessed the Willard-Moran fight in Madison Square garden on March 25.

The Female of the Species.

"They represented all the social divisions and subdivisions into which women are portioned off," Irvin Cobb reported, which answered the first exclamation of, "What kind of women could they be!"

Sensitive organisms recoiled at the thought of women looking on at "red dye running down the fighter's cheeks and staining his pickled shoulders. . . His face a chunk of gory raw beef," etc.

"Women must be becoming more brutalized," they thorized.

But sober reflection discloses no twentieth century development of woman's taste for brutal sports. Throughout history—both human and animal—the female of the species has proved as brutal as the male in her worship of the conqueror, and her seeming pleasure at the blood spilling necessary to the making of the champion.

Two stags fight. One is killed. The doe, who has been witnessing the ugly duel, rushes to the side of the conquering stag.

In the human family nothing could have been more brutal than the Roman sports at which women—fashionable and otherwise—were present in vast numbers. When the conquering gladiator downed his adversary and turned his eyes up to the gallery for a decision as to whether his opponent should be let live or die, feminine thumbs were turned down (which meant death to the downed one) and shouts for blood from female throats were heard most frequently.

In modern days and modern countries the bull fight survives as a gala occasion for the women. And what more brutal sport than this?

More modern still our football games—in which nobody can deny a strong element of brutality—are attended by women and girls in hordes, and their cheers and enthusiasm at a particularly rough tackle are not drowned out entirely by those of the males.

Perhaps it is the elemental conqueror-worship spirit in womankind that urges them on to that most brutal of all present day sports—the prize fight. And, perhaps again, woman's veneer of civilization and culture is no deeper than the war has proved man's to be.

When a Feller Needs a Friend.

A committee of the National Tailors' association decided at a recent meeting that the wife should pick her husband's clothes. "Next to a man's wife," they blushingly admit, "the tailor is the only person who knows just what the husband needs, even though he doesn't want it." [Business of chuckling by wives whose husbands have disdained their Christmas offerings of socks and ties!]

Gracious! But what frightful domestic wrangles would ensue were this new "woman's right" enforced generally!

It's plain to be seen why the tailors' association would encourage this policy. But can't you imagine poor husband's frame of mind if wife decreed that the dull grays or browns to which he has been consistently addicted since he stepped out of his Lord Fauntleroys were not as flattering to his skin and eyes as a peacock blue, for instance! Or if she got the idea into her busy little head that a "corset" coat would bring out his Apollo lines much more effectively than the comfortable, roomy outline for which he had always shown a preference!

Imagine what an incongrous parade we might witness on the boulevard were woman's idea of smart clothes actually wished on the men! According to her present status, his trousers would be hooped and cut high enough to show an inch or two of garralous socks; his waistline diminished to an ephemeral measurement; his collar points tickling his ears, and his hat varying in size and shape from a pillbox to a thing of outlandish proportion.

I guess until we can put up a better argument by example we womenfolk would better let the men do their own shopping. As long as they are willing to submit graciously and financially to our dress vagaries, we'd better leave well enough alone. Think you not, my sisters?

The Eternal Feminine.

Infidelity is the one unforgiveable offense to the woman who loves. It is the one and only means by which a woman's faith in the man to whom her heart is given can be shattered. She will forgive him drunkenness. She will forgive him cruelty. She will forgive him gambling, forgery, theft, lying, laziness, or excess fat—provided she believes she is the one woman in his life.

If she is sure that he loves her and her alone she is unwilling to believe in the face of the most damning evidence even a murder charge against him.

But let her faith in his fidelity to her be broken and her faith in him is gone forever. She can believe anything of him then. His laziness, cruelty or any other pet vice which love had blinded her against heretofore suddenly grows into a mountain of wrong and more often than not is the cause for separation or divorce.

This is illustrated most forcibly in the case of Mrs. Waite, whose faith in her husband's innocence on a charge of murdering her parents was implicit until the discovery of the fatal "other woman."

BELTS AND CAPES ON THE NEW SPRING SUITS

Drawn from Special Clotilde Designs by

1274—Girl's coat, 10 to 14 years. For the 12 year size will be needed 4¼ yards of material 27 inches wide, 3 yards 36, 2⅝ yards 44, or 2 yards 54.

1275—Girl's skirt, 10 to 14 years, with or without bodice. For the 12 year size will be needed 2½ yards of material 36 or 44 inches wide or 1⅛ yards 54 for the skirt, with ½ yard any width for the bodice.

1276—Girl's coat, 8 to 14 years, in two lengths. For the 12 year size will be needed 4¼ yards of material 36 or 44 inches wide or 3¾ yards 54 for the longer coat; 3⅛ yards 36, 2⅝ yards 44, or 2¼ yards 54 for the short coat, with ⅝ yard 27 inches wide for the collar, cuffs, and belt.

1277—Girl's skirt in four pieces, 10 to 14 years. For the 12 year size will be needed 3½ yards of material 36 inches wide, 2⅜ yards 44, or 2 yards 54.

TODAY I am showing two spring suits for the young girl of school age. Warm weather draws near and by the time the suit is made up spring warmth will have made its wear quite possible.

The cape model is one of the newest 1916 designs, although the other model is just as smart. The short shoulder cape on the jacket is one of the most popular styles of capes, and since capes are to be so much worn such a model as this cannot help but prove satisfactory and serviceable.

The suit linings for these models should be of some bright, attractive material, not too light for durability's sake, but festive enough to lighten the coat when the spring breezes whirl about and catch up the corners of the belted coats.

The skirts that go with these jackets are new, up to date in every line, and amply suited to fill all the needs of the young girl's every day wardrobe.

As always, these patterns have no ephemeral characteristics to take away from their essential practicality. For this reason they are doubly welcome to women whose taste is so discriminating as to avoid styles that are too extremely up to the last minute.

Judging from the favorable comment I have been receiving on these patterns from readers all over the country, the new seam allowance, which is a definite extension from the basting line, is proving extremely popular. By means of a recent invention I have been able to offer the perfect cutting line and the perfect sowing line. This, together with the diagrams that are shown on each envelope for the cutting and the making, combines in achieving patterns of unusually excellent value, for the remarkable price of 13 cents.

Fell Through Door.

I experienced the most embarrassing moment of my life one evening after I had been for a walk with my gentleman friend. I was very tired, and as my friend did not accept my invitation to come into the house, I leaned wearily against the front door. Just at this moment the door suddenly opened and I fell into the arms of my sister's suitor, who was just leaving. His many apologies for opening the door so suddenly did not help to relieve my embarrassment. D. W.

Her Pail of Beer.

I got on a street car and the only vacant seat was with an elderly man. When he got off the car he left a pail half full of beer where he was sitting. No one noticed it, but when I was getting off some one said, "Say, girlie, you left your pail," and the man got it for me. I told him it wasn't mine. But I guess everybody thought it was just the same.

"O, No, Kind Sir," She Said.

When I was a girl I took a job as servant in a hotel. On retiring at night I passed the open door of the guests' room and bid good night to the landlord. Suddenly he called me back, asking if I would take a nightcap before going to bed. I answered: "No, thank you, sir; I always tie my hair in a handkerchief."

She Repeated It.

It happened in high school during a recitation in physical geography. It was a study that was extremely dull and uninteresting to me, and, I think, to the majority of the other pupils, too, as most of them would almost fall asleep during recitations. Consequently, I rarely could recite when called upon.

One day the teacher after calling upon me admonished me that if I did not know my lessons better I would fall in the final examinations. "Get up and make a bluff," whispered the boy who sat opposite me, "I'll prompt you." As we both sat in the back seat, I thought I could get away with it.

"Name the eight planets that revolve around the sun in the order of their distance from the sun," was what the teacher asked me to do. I knew no more what they were than I had knowledge of Chinese. But I got up to recite.

The boy opposite me whispered "Mercury." I repeated "Mercury." He whispered "Saturn." I repeated after him in a dull, mechanical voice, hardly knowing or paying any attention to what I was saying. He said "Uranus," and I repeated "Uranus"; then "Neptune," I repeated "Neptune," and then he said "spittoon." And I repeated it! For a moment there was silence, but when the sleepy class grasped what I had said they all turned around to look at me and started in to howl and shout with laughter. The teacher sent me to the office for misdemeanor.

So They Both Yelled.

Some months ago a cousin wrote asking me to meet her husband at the station, adding: "He is deaf, so speak out loud to him." When the train pulled in I scanned passengers until I saw the right man approaching who answered the description given in the letter. I marched up to him saying in a loud voice: "Cousin Tom, I'm so glad to see you." He, smiling, fairly yelled almost at the same moment, "Well, Cousin Alma, I'm mighty glad to see you," placing stress on the pronoun.

To our surprise we saw that we were the objects of convulsed attention on part of bystanders and I hastened to cry, "I'm not deaf—speak lower." Then he shouted, "Neither am I, but I see that wife of mine has played us a trick, for she told me that you were deaf, and I see she has told you the same about me."

The embarrassment was intense, but the joke was too good, so we shook hands again and laughed heartily. Meanwhile the onlookers caught the spirit of the fun and gave us a jolly laugh that said: "We understand."

Does Woman Ever Propose?

What Started Things.

It was at our annual charity carnival that Bruce's wife proposed to him. She and another girl were the gypsy fortune tellers of the evening. Of course Bruce must have his fortune told, so he crossed their hands with silver and the other girl started in. However, in the midst of it there was a telephone call for her and she hurried off with: "Here, Elsie; I've given him a past and a present; will you finish him up?"

"All right, I'll take care of his future," was the astonishing response as Elsie reached for his hand.

Bruce had the presence of mind to murmur: "O, if you only will!" He didn't know her from Eve, and she had never seen him before, but that was what started things with them, and now they are "living happily ever after." Selah!

She Caught the Thief.

A hint to unsophisticated young men: Do not become imbued with the idea that there is no harm in stealing a kiss. Perhaps not real harm, but often unforeseen results.

I once perpetrated just such a theft and the blushing and smiling young woman at my side cooed softly, "and now we're engaged, aren't we?"

Did you ever know a woman who proposed? "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your name will not be published. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

Of course, you see, I was in for it. We were married shortly afterward and now have two of the finest youngsters in the land.

The question of which one of us did the proposing is a subject which my wife never allows me to mention. M. E. G.

ITCHING ECZEMA FOR SIX MONTHS

Face and Body Covered with Blisters. Started to Spread. Child Very Cross and Could Not Sleep.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My niece suffered with itching eczema for nearly six months. Her face and body were covered with blisters which broke open and started to spread, and as soon as one blister opened a few days later more eruptions would appear. Her face was a fright to look at and the child was very cross and could not sleep nights.

"Then I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using two boxes of the Cuticura Ointment together with the Cuticura Soap she was entirely healed." (Signed) Miss Therese Selesky, 2016 Cortland St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 19, 1915.

Waiting for Mother.

ETHEL HARDEN, with her elder brother, younger sister, and widowed mother, found themselves in the possession of but a few hundred dollars after paying the funeral expenses of the husband and father. Mrs. Harden had a sister, who, with her husband, had taken up a piece of government land out on the vast prairies of the west, and she urged the Harden family to join them in their new western home. So, disposing of their household goods, the Harden family decided to leave Chicago and try their fortunes in the pioneer country.

After reaching their destination Ethel, her mother, and brother each were successful in filing upon good pieces of government land adjoining the married sister's home, in this land where one may ride for a day and never see a tree—nothing but rolling hills covered with short grass, upon which an occasional herd of well bred cattle is grazing, each animal bearing the brand of its owner, and where an occasional Indian from the near by reservation rides by; where people living twenty and twenty-five miles apart are neighbors, and the young people will ride horseback twenty-five miles to a dance at a neighbor's house, or shack, dance all night to the music of a couple of violins, or mayhap an accordian and a mouth harp, and after a simple breakfast return to their various homes.

As their fund of money was getting low Ethel, who had finished high school in Chicago, succeeded in obtaining a county certificate and secured a small school some thirty miles away, and while teaching there she met a young ranchman, Tom Brakmann. During that winter they became good friends, took long horseback rides, attended such amusements as the country afforded, and had excellent times. Tom always had plenty of saddle horses and Ethel made use of the opportunity and became a splendid horsewoman.

The close of the six months' term of school found the two engaged to be married, and Ethel went to her home. Her mother strongly opposed the idea of her marrying, finding all kinds of objections to Tom, so finally, in order to keep peace and feeling that her duty was to help her mother, she broke her engagement with Tom. Tom could not see it that way, and as Ethel started to go with another young ranchman, Frank, he concluded that she did not care for him, and he made up his mind to forget her, and immediately commenced paying attention to a neighbor ranchman's daughter, and thus the two drifted apart.

In a couple of years the brother married and settled down to stay in this new country, and Ethel and her mother, having made final proof and secured title to their land, moved to a large western town, where they might procure work. Ethel secured a position in a local bank as bookkeeper and her mother did private nursing. Thus they were able to pay back some money they had found it necessary to borrow.

Tom often thought of his former sweetheart, but was sure that Frank had gained her love, and wondered if Frank would not at some near time bring her back as his wife. Early in the fall the two young ranchmen were each out rounding up their cattle from the range preparatory to shipping them to market. This usually takes a number of days, and the two fell in together and rode for several days.

One day a number of letters and cards fell out of Frank's pocket and Tom picked them up, and as he handed them to Frank he could not help but recognize the writing on the card which lay on top of the bunch. Frank noticed the look of recognition that passed over Tom's face, and remarked that the card was from Ethel. Nothing was said for several minutes, when Tom asked when Frank was going to bring her back. Frank replied that he did not expect to do that, but hoped in about a year to bring her cousin, whom he met on one of his visits to Ethel's town.

A few weeks later the two ranchmen shipped several carloads of cattle to market, and on their return home stopped off at the town where Ethel and her cousin lived. As Mrs. Harden was expecting to marry a business man of that town before long Tom and Ethel were able to overcome her objections to their marriage, as she really had no serious fault to find with him.

Tom is busy these days building an addition to the ranch house, making things as convenient as possible, and has bought an automobile, which will cover long distances much faster than horses, and Ethel and her mother are busy with interesting preparations, for it is expected that there will soon be a double wedding in that western town, with Ethel and her mother as brides.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Impulsive.

> Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

YOUR direct frankness is almost brutal if it were not for the generosity and intuition that govern your nature. Even so, you do not always choose your words, and you can be relied upon to fight for your rights. You have a strong conviction as to what belongs to you, and if you give up a thing, it is because you choose to, not because any one forces you to.

The activity of your brain makes you impetuous and restless, but if your employment is congenial and requires some mechanical ability, it will counteract the restlessness caused by the brain work. Then, and then alone, will you become thoroughly efficient.

If you get into a lawsuit, and are convinced that you are right, you will not give up so long as there is a thing left to fight over, no matter who gets the spoils. In such a case as this is your extreme impulsiveness shown. When this is combined with your natural stubbornness and intuition, not many things can withstand the trio. Fortunately for you, your judgments are not often far out of the way, and the outcome of what you are engaged in is usually right, although you are not always satisfied with the result.

Inasmuch as the symbol of this sign is the ram, it's only natural that you are lively and energetic and fond of both music and dancing.

You are not a bit of a shirk nor will you allow any one under you to be lazy. If in charge of a business, nothing escapes you, and though the results may not come up to your expectations, the employer is satisfied.

You are always striving, striving, not only for yourself but for those dear to you; if a business man, your aim is to leave your family well off. Your friends are many, and in them you can see no faults; you begrudge no sacrifice for them, no matter how great. Ordinarily, your insight into others' characters is keen, so that this partiality towards your loved ones undoubtedly grows out of a willful blindness to their imperfections.

Public affairs interest you; if you live in a small town, you will be a leader in the village activities. People will listen to you and follow your lead, for they seem to have confidence in your judgment. You have a perfect passion for spreading your knowledge, which makes you a natural teacher, lecturer, and writer. And the tactful way in which you can impart this learning disarms opposition. You are subject to inspirational bursts of eloquence, wit, and learning, seemingly beyond your natural abilities. But be careful lest you give up everything to your work and so sacrifice health and usefulness and thus spoil your wonderful inspirational powers.

In your love affairs you are apt to be fickle till you find your real mate. But then all is different; before you may have been a bit hard and critical, perhaps a little indolent and unsteady at your work, but now you grow nobler minded, more generous, and reach heights never before attained.

Inasmuch as your love of nature is so intense, it behooves you to be careful in the selection of your life mate. 'Tis better far for you to be rejected than to choose one not worthy of your love. Your union with a Sagittarius person, provided your nationality and social position are about the same, will likely prove a happy one. Marriage with those in your own sign will be a fortunate union if the two heads do not try to lead at once. Libra, your opposite, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, will prove a congenial mate.

Besides the work already mentioned you will find success along the following lines: Editor, critic, banker, jurist, department head, or machinist.

Your two most fortunate weeks for beginning new enterprises are those beginning April 13 and Nov. 29. Your colors are blue, pink, and white; birthstones, diamond and amethyst.

They're About to "Make Up."

"Dear Miss Blake: I knew a young man for about five years, and three years ago we became good friends. A year ago one of our friends thought she would enjoy herself if she saw us parted, so she told this gentleman something or other against me, and told me things against him.

"After this girl made trouble we stopped speaking for quite a time, and during that time I was sick and heartbroken. His gentleman friends always told me he still cared for me, even though he was taking another girl friend of mine to places of amusement. We met at a party on New Year's, and spoke.

"Since then he has taken me home from places. Last week we had a long talk, and we are going to a party at the end of this month. He said he had a great many questions to ask me, and I fear one is if I will keep company with him again. I love him dearly. What shall I do? B."

Accept, if he asks you. Neither of you is especially at fault, so why not bury the hatchet and let true love take its course? Talk things over and straighten out those yarns, then agree to believe in each other rather than in idle gossip.

Calls Five Times a Day.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a lady friend who has been going with a gentleman since the first of the year, going out three or four times a week. The other evening he called to take her to the show and found her sick. When the doctor called he took the prescriptions to the drug store to be filled and would not accept the cost of them from her. Now, Miss Blake, do you think he cares for her? He has never mentioned it, but while she was sick he called four or five times a day to see how she was. She likes him better than any of her friends. Should she drop all of them for him? A."

Sounds O so much to me as if he was exceedingly interested. I shouldn't worry about his intentions, if I were your friend. It hasn't been long since the first of the year, and you ought to give him a little more time. But I see no reason why she should drop her other friends; that won't hasten matters any.

Proper to Marry Italian?

"Dear Miss Blake: Is it customary for an American girl to marry an Italian? Many people say that it isn't, and that such a marriage would never be happy. Is this so? C."

Not customary, but not uncommon, a matter which you and your parents alone ought to decide. It isn't a question of nationality, but one of true worth of the man in the case.

Goes with Younger Boy.

"My Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 18 years old, but no one will believe my age. Every one says I can't be over 16. I really don't dress old and I wear my hair down my back a good deal. I go with a boy younger than 18. Is it wrong? He looks older than I do. Give me your advice. "X. Y. Z."

How could a few months' difference in ages make your "going together" wrong? If your family approves of this combination, why should you worry? You'll never find me the one to scold about a little discrepancy of this kind, provided it doesn't get too high up in years.

Doris Is Neutral.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young lad of 17 and go out with a girl about twice a week. Nearly every one of my friends tells me that I am too young to go with a girl. Will you kindly advise me whether I am doing wrong? J. S."

It's a question whether you prefer following your friends' or your family's advice—mine don't count, if your parents are living. And, by the way, how about the girl's family? Haven't they something to say about the matter? You are young to have a "steady," but they and their friends do do it, I venture, so why "pick on you"? I'm neutral.

She Was "Crazy About Him."

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 14, in high school. The boy I like best is there, too. The other day I wrote a note to a girl friend and told her I was crazy about him. She gave the note to him and he acts so funny lately. I am afraid he don't like me. Could you advise me how to win his confidence? Thank you. "M. P."

You'll never win his respect, let alone his confidence, if you go round spreading the news that you are crazy about him. That's enough to scare away the bravest suitor. Stop it; act as a well bred girl of 14 ought to act; have your boy friends, but treat them as good pals. "Cut out" this simpering, smirky "stuff." Perhaps in time he will get over his fright and seek your friendship, but don't you keep after him. That's the wrong kind of a start for a girl of your age to make.

They Would Pop Question.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls, 16 and 17 years of age. We have been keeping company with two young men near our own age. We have allowed them to kiss us and hold our hands. Do you consider that proper? One of the boys has gone away. Is it proper for both of us to correspond with him? We know that they both love us dearly, but neither has hinted toward proposing. Do you believe in leap year proposals? "B. AND D."

Frankly and emphatically, I do not think it was proper for you to allow these liberties. You may not think this a just criticism, but if you have been following this corner you have read my views on the subject. Certainly you are not thinking seriously of marrying these fellows at your age, for I can't believe that any girl in her right senses would deliberately and with malice aforethought plan to propose to a man. I know it has happened, but I'm of the opinion that in most of these cases the "popping" was accidental. The boys may act as if they loved you, but let me tell you girls that doesn't mean they are intending to marry you when they grow up, so that is one reason why this "early loving business" is all wrong.

Cornelia, Your Chance Is Slim.

"Dear Miss Blake: Please tell me what conclusion to make about this young man.

"He comes to see me quite often. He never asks for a date—just comes. He says he thinks a lot of me, but he also goes with another girl more steadily and takes her to shows and things.

"One night he stood on the corner and debated which place to go—to my house or hers. He finally went to hers. He also asks me what I am going to do when I finish my course at school. I like him very much and would like your opinion about such a fellow.

"Shall I let him come any more or not? I thank you. C."

It sounds as if you had a rather "slim" chance of winning out, but, of course, one can never tell! I wouldn't let him drop in whenever the spirit moved. You be out a couple of times when this happens; insist upon his treating you with as much respect as he does the other girl; don't act too interested, and, above all, don't deliberately try to "cut out" the other girl.

She Wouldn't Turn Swede.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16. I used to go out with a boy of 21. He is a good fellow. The time I was going out with him he always treated me nice. Then I went away to visit my sister. He did hate to see me go and wanted me to stay, but I had promised my sister that I would go and see her. She was so glad that she sent my fare.

"He wrote to me all the time. When I got back he told me that he couldn't come to see me, as he was sick in bed. He stayed fourteen miles from home, so he couldn't come and I haven't seen him since.

"He is a Swede and I am French. He wrote and told me he wouldn't marry me unless I turned Swede. I haven't answered since New Year's. What shall I do? "D."

And so he wants you to turn Swede; just about like asking a leopard to give up its spots, seems to me. I think you were a wise girl not to pay any attention to such a letter. I hope you never do answer it. He needs to be taught a lesson, and I think the only way to impress it will be to ignore him entirely. Then when he does come back, as I am sure he will, you won't be bothered by any such queer requests.

Mother Bars the Way.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16 and my mother does not believe in my going out with boys, and I am in love with a certain boy and he wishes to take me places. All of my boy and girl friends go out together. Will you please advise me what to do about it? P. C."

I'm not the one to interfere in this matter of family discipline, for I have learned long ago that, hard as it may be for you to believe now, our parents are right nine times out of ten. Aren't they even willing for you to have the young people come to your home in "bunches"? I don't believe in this steady business at your age, but you ought to be having plenty of good times otherwise.

She Is Dignity Itself.

"Dear Miss Blake: In one of the departments I work for is a young man whom I like very much. I am 21 years young, but have never kept steady company with any young man. From things I have heard I am under the impression he likes me somewhat.

"We have spoken mostly on business. I am a stenographer and he brings his letters to me. Would it be proper for me to invite the young man to call on me under these circumstances? I have never had the courage to do this, thinking it was the man's duty, although some girls have told me to invite him.

"Perhaps this is the reason I have never had many men callers.

"I have also heard some young men remark that they would not ask for my company, fearing I would refuse, or, in other words, turn them down. I cannot imagine what there is about me to give that impression, although I do walk in a dignified manner. But why should that frighten any one? Do I meet the right sort of men? I try to be congenial. Several of the young men are college graduates and I should think they would understand that a girl has to act dignified.

"Your reply will be appreciated. "G. E. H. L."

There's a difference, my lady, between being stiffly dignified and properly so. You can be a jolly, good pal, without showing much of this dignity, but a man will realize that it is there in the right degree and will like you all the better. I never believe in mixing personal matters with business, and I think you will be wise to leave the first move to the man, which is the proper thing to do, anyway. College graduates are "mere mortals" like all the rest of us, so that your faith in their judgment is ungrounded. Try forgetting yourself completely when talking to a man, don't think: "I wonder if he likes me." Just say to yourself: "I don't care whether he likes me or not. I'll act natural." Personally, I imagine this dignity is caused by a certain degree of self-consciousness.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"MY mother is an invalid, 74 years old, with sciatic rheumatism, and is almost entirely helpless. She read in the paper about an ear trumpet which Mary R. had and of the snake ear tube J. Le D. had, and wished me to write for one of them. We would send the postage for it if we knew how much to send. We are able to buy only the necessities of life and cannot get mother an ear trumpet. Mrs. C. B."

I am sorry the report that the ear appliances have been bestowed elsewhere. Has any one else an ear trumpet or anything of the sort to give to this invalid? I will put her address on file and hope some one may send for it. It is hard enough to be poor and crippled with rheumatism without the additional affliction of deafness.

Shoulder Brace Wanted.

"I would like very much to have the shoulder brace offered in the paper. I have lost the address of the person who offered it. S. E."

This has been given away, and I can only hope that some one may see this letter and offer another such brace. I will keep the writer's address.

Must Stay Indoors.

"I would like to have the address of V. E. R., who offers quilt scraps, post cards, and magazines. I would be glad to get them, for I am almost entirely a shut-in. Mrs. A. H."

Again I must report that the articles have been given away. Can some other Cornerite supply this shut-in's demand?

Making Things for Home.

"I am a beginner in housekeeping and am anxious to make nice things for my home. I have written you on various subjects before, but never received any reply to my letter, nor received the address I asked for. I would now like to ask if any of your Cornerites would send me samples of crochet edging, suitable for towel edges or handkerchief edges. I will make any reasonable return for the favors. I would like to have the samples as soon as possible. I have often seen requests in your letters for an infallible remedy for bedbugs. I herewith give a remedy that is never failing. Two applications at the most to walls, beds, or woodwork will dispel them forever. Take a quart bottle, get 10 cents' worth of carbolic acid in it, fill the balance of the bottle half with gasoline and half with turpentine, shake well, and apply to beds or woodwork by using a small oil can. The second application is sometimes not necessary, but makes the cure sure. This can also be used on mattresses by placing them before a window where air can strike them. Leave windows open when using and for a few hours afterward. The remedy does not stain anything, and the odor will soon disappear. M. G. L."

I am at a loss to understand your failure to receive answers to your letters. Any communications addressed to me in the care of THE TRIBUNE should reach me. When a stamp is inclosed, as should always be done if a personal reply is asked, such a reply is sent promptly, and letters which are to appear in print are used as rapidly as possible, in the order in which they come into my hands. I trust your fortune may be better this time, and that you may soon receive the samples you wish of crocheted edgings, etc. Thank you for the remedy for bedbugs. Such cures are always in demand and one may succeed where another fails.

Faces a Crippled Future.

"Once before I appealed to the Corner with an unusual request and got what I asked. It was a wig for a poor lady. Now I come to beg for a medical battery to be used by a lad of 13 who is gradually developing spinal deformity and leg paralysis. One leg is now one inch shorter than the other, but the doctor says if the child had one of those batteries, so that he could treat himself, he would get better. He is the eldest of six children, and the mother is in the hospital with tuberculosis of the hip. She has been there for three months and will have to stay for many more. The family is poor. I am poor myself, but am keeping one of the little ones without price, and will try to pay freight on the battery. I would like it in good condition and with directions for use. Please print this request as soon as possible, as the poor boy gets worse and worse. Some one asked how to get rid of bedbugs. An old hotel man told me he used epsom salts, powdered fine and blown into every crack and cranny of the beds and bedding. I always varnish the bedstead and slats, and if the springs are of iron I build a fire out of doors and pass the springs through it, or varnish them. If you have mattresses, clean them with turpentine and make a case of stout muslin that can be sewed up tight. Then beat the white of one egg until dry and whip into it slowly, a little at a time, 10 cents' worth of mercury. It takes about half an hour to incorporate it thoroughly. Put it in every nook and crevice with a stiff feather or a small brush. It kills every bug that walks over it. The stuff will stay on for two or three years. M. C. C."

With all my heart I hope that the battery needed may be found for the poor boy who is facing a crippled future. I know such batteries are expensive and not common possessions, and yet we have done so much through the Corner that I trust this again may also be made. The helpful suggestions for getting rid of vermin will also be welcomed. I am sure, with all the prophylactics which have been offered, there is no reason for further annoyance from the pests.

Bits of Cheer.

"I wish especially to commend your column. I turn to it and read it the first thing almost and feel that every little thing we can do really helps. I wish also to indorse your opinion and that of Mrs. A. S. on the eleventh commandment. It is most truly fair and sensible. I have been able to help several of the constituency with glasses, belts, cloth, etc., and have without exception received replies of thanks, full of good will and genuine gratitude. Here is a verse which always cheers me when I read it:

It only takes a little love to make this life more sweet;
It only takes a little cheer to make the day complete.
It only takes a little smile to brighten all the way—
So here's a little bit of each to make a sunny day.

"Mrs. T."

Always we are grateful for such friendly words and for bits of cheer like that embodied in the verse, which is something it would be well for us to cut out and keep where it is easy to get at it. The addresses asked for by Mrs. T. were sent at once and I have no doubt that before this she has gladdened more lonely hearts. I am much pleased to hear her report of prompt acknowledgments of her kindnesses. We get complaints of the omission of such now and then.

Glad to Contribute a Mite.

"A few weeks ago a Cornerite asked for postage stamps. I have a few from foreign countries that I will be pleased to send her. I love to read what you and the Cornerites have to say, and I feel that a mighty blessing is being sent forth from this department. I am glad now and then to contribute a mite. E. H."

The lack of the signature of the correspondent who asked for stamps makes it impossible to supply her address. I am happy to receive the pleasant words said of the Corner, and I am grateful for the picture inclosed for myself. It is always agreeable to get an idea of the appearance of any of my unknown and yet valued friends.

Blessing to Many.

"I am writing for one of the addresses given in the Corner. We who have every blessing can scarcely realize what it means to be shut in on a ranch such as I have seen in my travels. The Corner is a blessing to many in all walks of life, and I congratulate the helpers on bringing a bit of sunshine into those lives that lack it. Mrs. B. D. R."

The address asked has been given. Thanks for the kind words said of the Corner. The helpers deserve all the praise spoken of them.

What is the 7th Point?

From Maine to California, from Texas to Hudson Bay, millions of people have been asking "What is the 7th Point in Sterling Gum?"

In practically every town, city and village in the United States and Canada, the published six points of superiority have brought Sterling Gum fast-growing popularity.

But the seventh point still remains a riddle.

Point ⑦ What?

Now, we are offering liberal prizes to those who send us the best suggestions for the Sterling Gum Point 7.

Before you make your suggestion for the 7th Point, read the following:

The Following Story Unfolds the Secret of the Famous Point 7

To most people chewing gum is a mystery. They may know that different chewing gums are made from different ingredients. But that is about all. Here are facts which we believe you will be glad to know about Sterling Gum:

Your Sterling Gum is made from the following materials:

The basis is the pure sap of the tropical Sapota Tree—a natural gum.

This natural Sapota Tree sap is boiled, sweetened and flavored. The sweetening is simply pure cane sugar and pure corn syrup.

The flavoring is of two kinds—Peppermint (in red wrappers), Cinnamon (in blue wrappers).

There are some twenty varieties of the mint plant. The Sterling Peppermint is a product of the choicest, smoothest-flavored of these many mint varieties.

The spicy Cinnamon flavor is extracted from the Cassia bush which grows in the tropics.

The sap of the Sapota Tree, the cane sugar, the corn syrup, the Peppermint and Cinnamon flavors all come from the sap of some plant or tree. Nature herself supplies these delicious materials from which your Sterling Gum is made.

Requirements for Winning Phrase

When you read the above facts on the materials that Sterling Gum is made of, you will know all that it is necessary for you to know in entering this contest.

The first prize will go to the one whose suggestion, based on the above story, most impressively presents the natural purity of Sterling Gum—in the opinion of the judges.

Remember that your suggestion must be in six words or less.

The next best suggestion will win the second prize—and so on down.

It is understood that the Sterling Gum Company will have the right to use the 7 Point suggestions sent in by the prize winners.

The contest is easy to enter. Just think out your way of expressing the 7th Point. Then write it out in six words or less and send it in as directed in the conditions printed below. Even if you don't win the first prize of $1,000, you stand a chance to win one of the 7,777 smaller prizes.

PEPPERMINT IN RED WRAPPER CINNAMON IN BLUE WRAPPER

First Prize $1,000
Second Prize $500

Third Prize . . $250.00
7 Prizes—each . . $25.00
70 Prizes—each $2.50
700 Prizes—each . Box of 20 five-cent packages of Sterling Gum.
7000 Prizes—each . Box of 10 five-cent packages of Sterling Gum.

Conditions of the Contest

Sterling Gum Company employees cannot enter this contest.

If two answers are entitled to the same prize, the full amount of the prize will be paid to each.

All answers must come in on a postal card. On the back of the postal card write nothing but your 7 Point suggestion (six words or less) and your name and address. The postal may be mailed in an envelope if you choose.

Mail answers to Sterling Prize Judges
Room 319, 405 Lexington Ave.
New York City

You may send in as many suggestions for Point 7 as you choose. But each suggestion must be written on a postal card as directed above.

Contest Closes

All answers must be received in New York by midnight of May 15, 1916.

Answers will not be examined by the judges until after that date. The judges, therefore, cannot mail acknowledgments of the suggestions received.

Judges

The prizes will be awarded by the following committee of five well-known men:

John A. Sleicher, Editor of Leslie's Weekly.
Edgar Sisson, Editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.
Jno. M. Siddall, Editor of The American Magazine.
Frederick L. Collins, Editor of McClure's Magazine.
Robert H. Davis, Editor of Munsey's Magazine.

Announcement of Awards

The winners of the first 80 prizes will be announced in the July first issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Please do not write to the judges. They cannot correspond with individual contestants. Just make a note now of the date on which the prize winners will be announced in the Saturday Evening Post.

Now put on your thinking cap. Get your family to help you. Send in as many suggestions as you want to. All will be considered in awarding these many prizes. Do not write the Sterling Gum Company regarding the contest or its conditions as all suggestions will be judged by the Prize Committee named above.

A String of Pearls; Diamond Bracelet and Solitaire Miss Burke's Favorite Jewel Dressing

says Antoinette Donnelly

Billie Burke, $4,000 a Week Tribune Movie Star, Wears a Solitaire That Cost $9,000.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NOT nearly so simple as it sounds is the favorite jewel dressing of Miss Billie Burke, the $4,000 a week TRIBUNE movie star! She has one string of pearls which cost $50,000, and a second one with which to alternate which cost $100,000. Perfectly matched and exquisitely colored pearls are both strings. And rarely ever is the golden Gloria seen without one or other of them on.

Her solitaires—for she has two—were built primarily to beatir envy in the soul of every romantic girl whose eyes might light upon them. But let me say in Miss Burke's defense, they are worn in no such spirit—she being too nice a girl to be guilty of any such thought. One—the smaller one—is at least three carats, brilliantly white. The other, almost twice as large as the first—the biggest diamond I ever saw on any human hand—and which she confided to me cost $9,000, was the engagement ring given to her by Mr. Ziegfeld, her husband.

Her diamond bracelet is a flexible affair and expensive. She has three of these flexible bracelets. Besides the one already mentioned, she has one of emeralds and diamonds and another of pearls and diamonds. In addition, Miss Burke has several velvet bracelets upon which are mounted lovely jewel combinations.

In addition to the string of pearls, the bracelet, and the solitaire Miss Burke sometimes adds a brooch, of which she has several of exquisite design. One was particularly lovely—a bow knot of pearls, which cost $10,000.

Miss Burke's jewel box was like her wardrobe—a matter of continual wonderment as to how one such "ittle-bitty" girl could ever expect to wear them all. But with her jewels, as well as her clothes, she has her favorites, and the remaining articles are left to shine unseen.

For instance, Miss Burke has a diamond tiara, to which she is addicted not at all, and for which we should be grateful. Not that it isn't a lovely tiara, but she is too young and her hair is so glorious that it would be painting the lily were she to bejewel her hair. She has a dog collar of diamonds and emeralds, worth $25,000, but she much prefers her string of pearls. She owns an amazing number of rings. One that might make you a trifle envious was a $15,000 ring of four emeralds in an unusually lovely setting. A vanity case with a diamond face, several gold bags with jeweled settings, and lavallieres of excellent workmanship are a few of her other jewel possessions.

Miss Burke has a fondness for black velvet or black cord neck dressings from which are suspended jewels. From one black velvet cord hangs a design of four pearls, graduating in size from a small to a large pearl. Another bit of neckwear was a cord from which suspended an attractive design of carved crystal, worth $5,000; another such lavalliere held up an emerald worth $3,000. A miniature of her mother surrounded by diamonds of a half carat size is an especial favorite with the fascinating little movie star.

With such an opportunity for a reckless lack of restraint as Miss Burke's jewel box offers it is delightful to find her with definite ideas as to what jewels should be worn, on what occasions, and which jewels should not be worn.

"I consider always the dress I wear and the occasion in connection with the wearing of jewelry," she said. "When I wear tailor mades I like best to wear a little finger ring, a wrist watch, and a simple brooch in my blouse. When I wear a ring on my little finger I never like to wear one on the next finger. If I wear a solitaire, then I wear the small finger ring on the other hand. I do think that a solitaire is more becoming and attractive in every way if worn alone on the left hand."

I noticed particularly in the combinations of stones in Miss Burke's collection of jewelry there was perfect taste. No fatal note like rubies and turquoises trying to get along harmoniously in the narrow confines of a ring! No emeralds and ruby striving likewise! Where several different stones were used there was always perfect unison. Pearls and diamonds were combined and emeralds and diamonds.

"I remember the ugliest impression of a hand I ever carried away," said Miss Burke, "was that made by a woman whose fingers were fat and short. On the third finger of her right hand she wore three rings—one a large ruby, another a large turquoise, and the third a small emerald. Her second finger and her small finger on the same hand bore massive dinner rings of highly ornate workmanship. The same characteristic was carried out in the woman's dress—color combinations all out of harmony and jet trimmings entirely overdone.

"I much prefer the single color tone in a ring; that is, I like diamonds alone, emeralds alone, pearls alone," said Miss Burke. "But there are combinations that I am fond of, too. For instance, pearls and diamonds I like very well. Pearls, diamonds, and emeralds also are effective in combination. Sapphires and opals make a striking contrast. Emeralds and rubies are positively ugly worn together, I think. Two stones that are strong in color suffer when together.

"The same rule should apply to wearing certain colored jewels with certain colored clothes," continued the little TRIBUNE movie star. "For instance, a large emerald would look grotesque with a red dress; likewise a ruby ring would look badly with a turquoise dress, and so on. With diamonds and pearls you cannot make a mistake with any color dress."

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IF there is a new idea in salads we find it in the present fashion of cutting the vegetables in the tiniest dice, or in straws or julienne shape. To make the tiny dice it is first necessary to cut the vegetables in the straws and then into dice. Only a few of them may be chopped, for this gives a quite different effect.

It is possible that this idea or fashion got its start from the Chinese cooks in our midst who, for instance, decorate a chicken chow main, which is a mountain of noodles, mushrooms, and but little chicken usually, with julienne strips of chicken meat as long as the entire breast and not more than one-fourth of an inch square. It is hardly correct to call this decoration shredded chicken, as is sometimes done.

String beans are shredded for salad use; that is, they are prepared as the French and English always do in cooking them. The latter, who use the green scarlet runner bean so much, render it attractive by cutting the large pod diagonally across in the thinnest of slices, and they have been preparing string beans in this way for at least a hundred years. Charles Lamb speaks of this business of cutting French beans (this is what the English call string beans) and says: "The odor of those tender vegetables to this day comes back upon my senses redolent of soothing recollections. Certainly it is the most delicate of culinary operations."

Delicate operations are what make universally good cooking. One must have an innate or developed sense of nicety or it is almost impossible to make a fine salad in the American sense, which is not the cosmopolitan sense. This sense may be something quite different from the sense of cleanliness, although the two should go together. However, I have seen an immaculately neat person serve a salad that was not at all delicately cut or mounted. It was thrown together.

To my mind the cutting and mounting of salad materials counts at least 50 or 75 per cent in the making process, allowing about 25 per cent for the making of the dressing.

The present method of cutting salad materials gives an opportunity for using onion in salad more effectively than formerly. A spoonful of finely chopped onion may lose itself in a salad mixture, but greatly enhance the whole. This is particularly the case in a combination salad, one which is often made coarse and sloppy, though so much favored.

It is easy to cut a cucumber in strings and then in tiny dice. A tomato needs to be cut in halves crosswise, and the seeds and juice squeezed out to be used for soups and sauces, since so much water as this is not pretty or pleasant in a salad and wastes the dressing. Radishes cut in dice blend much better with other material than in any other way.

A cooked new beet may be beautifully cut in many different devices, but grated it lends itself well to both garnishing and mixing. French people use it with many green salads, especially the mâche or corn salad.

The materials for cooked salads, whether the much talked of Russian or others, are as many as there are vegetables. Any of the cold greens, spinach, mustard, dandelion, endive, or chicory, and especially escarole, which is so often what the Italians mean when they say "salat," are gratifying cold with a French dressing.

A cold boiled artichoke is quite as good and most seasonable now. The leaves of this may be used in mounting a salad, and the bottom is much used for this and other purposes. When only a few of the leaves are used it is a good plan to tip them with a dot of mayonnaise or dip them in it. Cold carrots if correctly cooked make a fine salad and may be mixed with peas or with fish, or used for garnishing. Little cauliflowers, all by themselves on a lettuce leaf, or in a wreath of cress, make a charming salad for a white meal, and they add to various mixtures of cooked vegetables. Cold cabbage is always usable, and in many ways. Cooked okra is good cold with a French dressing and especially in the cabbage okra combination. Kohlrabi served in the same way is as delicate as possible. Not only cooked celery root or celeriac but the other celery cooked is most savory with French dressing and cooked celery tops are especially delicious so.

And then there are the cool fruits, but it is getting time to leave out the hearty nuts from our salads. Fish salads are highly seasonable and almost any cold broiled or boiled fish can be mounted on a lettuce leaf, garnished with some beet perhaps and used. The aspic salads should soon be abandoned, for which they may be good in winter, they may be unsafe in warm weather. As to the springing green leaves of weeds we know too little about their use, and they are mostly inaccessible.

A Bitter Salad.

It is better to take bitter foods in springtime than to go to a sanitarium. The dandelion has long been a dependence for those who realize the health value of its tonic minerals, but it is much easier now to get the milder curly or German endive. One large plant of this makes ample greens or salad for four people, and this plant is often procurable without any of its center blanched.

Carefully remove the coarser and bruised leaves and throw away. Separate the others and wash carefully and put on to cook in less than a cup of water if you are a careful cook. Cover the kettle, and when the water boils turn the fire to the lowest point. In twenty or twenty-five minutes most endive will be tender, although the coarser plants may require longer. Take off cover and dry off water, turning and pressing with a wooden spoon. When sufficiently dry take from fire, and if you want to make it nice chop fine, add butter to taste while yet warm, and if you choose pack it into small molds, but it tastes just as well unchopped and not molded. Serve with a French dressing, flavored with garlic.

French Dressing with Garlic.

Take a rather flat bowl and rub the bottom well with the cut end of a clove of garlic. It is not necessary to take off more than one layer of the skin. Leave the other layer on to protect your fingers, and so that the same clove may be used many times. Cut off the tip the first time and a fresh slice each time used. Add your salt—I say make it slight of amount—a generous shake of paprika, your tablespoon of vinegar to each three of oil. With an egg whisk give the dressing a few whacks, and in a minute it will be as thick as cream, unless you have a great quantity, which you do not need, but people are in general wasteful of French dressing.

It should never be added to a green salad which is not thoroughly dried by wiping or by swinging it dry in a basket or cloth. The dressing will not otherwise coat each leaf as it should. In other words, it will remain with the water in the bottom of the plate and be wasted.

A Trefoil Salad.

For special occasions people like to use the half or the most of a lemon skin for small quantities of relish or salad, especially in case of the strong smoked fish. The tip ends must be cut off so that the shell thus made will stand firm, and the rag as well as the juice all carefully removed. One combination may be boneless herring, grated beet, and cottage cheese sprinkled with paprika. These things, and more, are often mixed, but the mixture seems slightly barbarous to me, and if to be served together I think the quantity of each that a half lemon shell would hold quite sufficient, especially of the strong fish.

Scald boneless herring for five minutes, that is, allow to stand in boiling water that long, then heat up in butter or bacon fat, break in small bits, and season with onion juice, lemon juice, and the slightest suspicion of cayenne pepper or as much paprika as is to taste. As it cools mold in a little butter. It is good without any dressing so seasoned. Some French dressing may be used on the grated beet, and nothing is needed with the third filled lemon shell, but any dressing like a good cooked one may be used with the cheese. Mount the three filled shells on a lettuce leaf or in a bed of cress.

This is a hearty salad for a meal that is otherwise light, say one that begins with a light and not positive flavored cream soup.

Julienne Carrots for Salads.

Wash and scrape carrots, slice down their length, and then cut a long carrot into about three parts, and these parts into matches. If cooked in a covered pan and but a little water over a bit of fire, do not add sugar, otherwise allow a scant tablespoon to a bunch of carrots and some butter if you choose, although they are fine without it. The water should be all cooked away, and new carrots in a closed boiler will cook tender in fifteen minutes in half a cup of water and in the end the cover must be removed, the fire turned up, and the remaining water cooked away. Use water to cover only if cooked without cover. Use alone on a lettuce leaf with French dressing or in any mixture, especially with the peas and beans and beets of the Russian salad.

Imitation Horseradish.

Horseradish is excellent in beet salads and in some cooked mixtures, but it is sometimes easier to make the following imitation: Mix together an even teaspoon of mustard and one-fourth teaspoon of salt. Mash this into one boiled potato, then add three tablespoons of oil, one of vinegar, and a bit of sugar. Use as a dressing or with cold sliced meat.

Standard Cooked Dressing.

One egg, two tablespoons of vinegar, four tablespoons of milk, two teaspoons of oil or butter, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon of powdered mustard, a pinch of pepper. If butter is used instead of oil it is put in just before the whole is taken from the fire. If oil is used, mix it thoroughly with the dry ingredients, then add the egg and beat for several minutes, then beat in the vinegar for a minute. Add the milk and put the whole in a double boiler, cooking until thick and stirring all the time. It will take nearly ten minutes for it to cook. It can be thinned when used with whipped or plain cream, colored with tomato juice, spinich juice, beet juice, and mixed with various piquant additions.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers to Beauty Seekers.

YOUR RUTH: Simply because a girl of 16 uses powder, rouge, and an eyebrow pencil is no reason why she should not be a good girl. There is no harm in using any one of these things, but they must be used artistically and carefully. It is the overuse of these toilet accessories that brands a girl as coarse and common. Of course if you have a "peach and cream" complexion then it would be better not to indulge in their use. Use them sparingly, however, if you have not, and I am sure you will have no further cause to be broken hearted fearing you will be looked upon as a "bad" girl.

REBECCA P.: Indeed, I do think hair dyes are harmful to the hair, and therefore I do not recommend dyes or bleaches of any sort. They are apt to ruin the hair, and it is never the same after it has once been dyed. Dyes leave the hair coarse and brittle. It is unfortunate that your hair should turn gray when so young. It would be impossible to say what causes it. It may be hereditary or it may be caused from worry or ill health. Try to build up your health and keep yourself in good physical condition. The condition of the hair is always affected by the condition of the body. It may be that scalp massage would help to keep it from turning more gray. The massage stimulates the circulation and promotes a proper flow of blood to the roots and gives them nourishment. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for scalp massage if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

INTERESTED: Try putting little strips of court plaster over your lips at night to keep your mouth closed. Do not sleep on your back, as your jaw is more liable to droop in that position. There is really but little you can do now to correct the fault. It should have been corrected in infancy. Your nervous, excitable condition may be due to a run down system and need of rest. Build up your health by lots of fresh air, sleep, and a nourishing diet. Take a walk each night before going to bed, not long enough to tire you, and I am sure the bracing air will rest your nerves and promote sleep. Clothe yourself warmly enough so that you will not be chilly or shiver.

ELIZABETH: Three pints of water should be consumed each day to aid the beauty of the complexion and to keep the body in good condition. It should be taken in generous quantities before retiring, as well as in the morning and between meals. For constipation and billiousness two glasses of cold water should be taken before breakfast, with an interval of twenty minutes between, the last glass being taken one hour before breakfast. Peroxide is good for removing stains from the hands. Add a few drops of ammonia to a 50 per cent solution of the peroxide. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for chapped hands if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

BROKEN HEARTED: Go right on drinking all the water you can, little broken hearted girl, for it is not the water that makes your face break out. It is undoubtedly because of the things you eat. Of course, you didn't tell me if you ate much candy or pastry, but there isn't anything that will play havoc with the complexion like such things. Eat simple, nourishing food, drink lots and lots of water, and do not allow yourself to become constipated. A glass of cold water taken the first thing in the morning will work wonders toward clearing the complexion. Glycerine does not agree with all skins. It may be soothing to yours, however.

RUTH O.: Rubbing a few drops of glycerine and rosewater in your hands while they are still moist will often counteract the rough, red look. Do not place your hands in hot water or water in which a strong soap has been placed. Hot water will always make the hands red. Bathe your hands in tepid water, using a pure bland soap, and dry thoroughly. I have a formula for chapped hands which I shall be glad to send to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

LITTLE ANNA: Once in three weeks is often enough to shampoo the hair. You can overcome the oily condition by using a good tonic and then it will not be necessary to wash it so often. A rundown condition is often indicated by excessive perspiration of the palms. The only treatment for this trouble is an internal one. Build up your system, get lots of fresh air and exercise, and eat simple, nourishing food. Frequently bad circulation will make the hands red and unattractive. I shall be glad to send you formula for excessive perspiration and instructions for the care of the hands and nails if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

RACHEL: Cold hands are an indication of poor circulation. This is an excellent exercise for toning up the circulation all over the body: Make a convenient lunge forward, say with the left leg, stretch the arms out sideways and swing them around so that the hands, palms uppermost, describe small circles. The circles should be described from front to back; that is to say, the hands should move upwards to make the front half of the circle and downwards to make the back half. The hands move almost from the waist line to half a head height above the shoulders in describing these small circles. The final circles should be large, in order to render the shoulder joints supple. Now shift the position of the legs, lunging forward with the right, and swing arms around the reverse way, so that the hands describe the front half circles downwards. The stronger you get the faster the circling may be done. After some practice you should perform sixteen circles the one way and sixteen the other.

Painful Swollen Veins Quickly Relieved and Reduced

Mrs. R. M. Remler, of Federal, Kansas, writes an interesting account of her success in reducing a severe case of enlarged veins that should be encouraging to others similarly afflicted. She suffered with badly swollen and inflamed veins (in fact, one had broken) for more than seven years before she became acquainted with Absorbine, Jr., and used it. Absorbine, Jr., was faithfully applied for several weeks, and to quote from her letter, "The large knots in the veins left, it was all nicely healed, and has not bothered me since."

Absorbine, Jr., is an antiseptic liniment—healing, cooling and soothing. Safe and pleasant to use. $1.00 and $2.00 at your druggist's or postpaid. Liberal trial bottle postpaid for 10c in stamps. W. F. YOUNG, P. D. F., 308 Temple St. Springfield, Mass. —Advertisement.

WAKE UP FEELING FRESH AS A DAISY

Get a 10 Cent Box of "Cascarets" for Your Liver and Bowels.

Tonight sure! Take Cascarets and enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced. Let Cascarets liven your liver and clean your thirty feet of bowels without griping. You will wake up feeling grand. Your head will be clear, breath right, tongue clean, stomach sweet, eyes bright, step elastic and complexion rosy—they're wonderful. Get a 10-cent box now at any drug store. Mothers can safely give a whole Cascaret to children at any time when they become cross, feverish, bilious, tongue coated or constipated—Cascarets are harmless.

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

25 cent bottle of "Danderine" makes hair thick, glossy and wavy.

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and luster, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp. Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.—Advertisement.

Canopied Bed for Girl's Room.

Anita de Campi

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

IT is always a pleasant task to plan new fittings for the young girl's bedroom, and this season a number of cunning schemes for the trimming of the bed offer themselves with the alluring assurance that they are pretty, girlish, and can be carried out at a trifling expense.

Nothing nowadays is new unless it is old fashion, and so the most old fashioned of all beds, the caponied one, is the latest thing.

Much to be envied is the girl who can have a genuine colonial bed with tall, straight posts—slender ones, of course—with pretty chintz hangings. But equally to be admired is the girl who contrives the effect of a canopy by using a simple framework and treating it with adjustable draperies. The canopies of today are merely trimmings—they serve no other purposes than a decorative one. They are as entirely unlike the canopied bed of olden times as can be.

In the feudal days canopied beds were made almost airtight to protect the occupants from the cold and drafts in rooms inadequately heated, if heated at all. The penetrating chill of the rooms necessitated the use of heavy hangings and even the preliminary precaution of passing a warming pan between the sheets before taking a cold plunge into the interior of these cumbersome contrivances.

The following quaint lines, taken from a travelers' guide, are irresistibly quotable. They are from Percy Macquoid's Anglo-Dutch dialogue book for travelers of the Elizabethan period:

"Traveler—My shee friende, is my bede made, is it good?

"Chamberlain—Yea, sir, it is a good feather bed; the scheetes be very clean.

"Traveler—Pull off my hosen and warme my bed; draw the curtains and pin them with a pinne. My shee friende, kisse me once and I shall sleep the better. I thank you, faire mayden."

The little bed in the sketch is a neatly devised arrangement. It is not a canopied bed, as might be imagined, but a bit of home carpentry—a framework made of two inch uprights, with the chintz draperies gathered upon little brass extension rods. These are easily removed so the curtains and valance may be laundered. The lining is white.

Throughout the room just described care has been taken to repeat all of the multicolors stamped on the chintz pattern in separate details of the room. The lamp shade is of American beauty silk. The little bedside table is black. A bright yellow vase is placed beside a black and white striped box. A periwinkle blue cushion is thrown carelessly into the big dark oyster shell green fireside chair, an old gold screen stands before the fireplace, and a pair of tall brass candlesticks carries a touch of this color upward. The walls are simply calcimined a light gray tinged with green.

Radical was the change lately effected in a young girl's bed by the unique use of chintz. The bed was brass, one of the "continuous post" kind, and she had grown tired of this metallic show that so fascinated her at first, so she made a perfectly plain slip cover of chintz. The head and foot slipped into the cover as neatly as a folded note in an envelope. The lower edge on the side toward the bed extended only to the mattress, while on the outside an added ruffle extended it clear to the floor. A cover of this sort is the simplest thing in the world to make, as it does not even require tie strings, buttons, or snaps of any kind.

It is the fashion now where twin beds are used to stand them close together and have one extremely wide spread to cover them both during the daytime.

New bedspreads are made of colored material with a ruffle at either side and an openworked cover on top. The openworked cover is supposed to come only to the edges of the bed top and not to hang over the sides, but the silk ruffle of the under part comes to the floor.

Shirred silk covers are much admired. They are made of china, rajah, or taffeta, and the shirrings are corded. The gathers run lengthwise of the bed. The outer edges that hang to the floor are left loose to form a ruffle. With these shirred covers no bolster is used. The pillows are laid flatly down at the bed head and the cover extends up over them.

Chintz matching the wallpaper is popular for draped or canopied beds. The ruffles are often edged with taffeta ribbon, and droopy looking bows of taffeta ribbon tie the curtains together at the covered posts.

Many of the new canopy beds are made with paneled wooden tops matching the low panels at the head and foot. Really until the curtains are adjusted to them they look for all the world like long legged tables attached to the beds. Ruffled muslin curtains are hung with rods and rings to the under "aprons" of the canopy.

Rather striking yet plain and sensible is this bed trimming for a man's room. The top quilt in rather dark silk is about six inches smaller all the way around than the top sheet. The sheet is folded up on the outside and buttoned to the comforter. It is also laid over at the top edge, but of course tucked in at the foot. This leaves a six inch white linen margin turned back at the top and up at the overhanging sides. The buttons are sewed to the comforter and are of silk like it. The buttonholes are worked into side hems on the sheet.

Stiff round bolsters are no longer in use. The most popular arrangement for the pillows now is to lay them flat and either draw the long bedspread over them or to lay a breadth of contrasting material over them, tucking it in over and under them and letting the ends hang down. Whenever the bed head is so placed in the room that the morning light would strike the eyes of the sleeper the bed is made up with the head as the foot, and then two pairs of pillows are used, one pair at the head and one at the foot of the bed, and they are covered as described above. Widths of silk are often pulled across the head and foot of brass bed frames so that only a little of the brass, the top rim, perhaps, is left showing.

A ruffled spread has five little lace edged flounces evenly ranged on the overhanging sides. Pillows are not used under this spread; the whole top lies perfectly level. The pillow must be put away during the daytime.

Answers to Inquiries.

P. W.: With fumed oak furniture see that a little of the ground color of the fumed oak—that is, a dark brown—is tinged into the other colors that you use. If you do this the brown will be what is called a key and all of the other colors will be bound to be harmonious.

C. J. S.: Cut out borders as a rule are extremely ugly, especially those huge floral ones. If possible by some means cover it. If you use the figured paper in your rooms use a tiny, inconspicuous figure; let it be in some fabric effect. Your assortment is so miscellaneous that it is really necessary to paper your rooms alike to give them any feeling of unity. Use sunfast casement curtains over the marquisette, placing the marquisette close to the glass.

* *

S. A. W.: I think your proposed plan to throw your dining room and living room into one is an excellent one, if the structure of the house permits. The best informal chairs I can suggest by way of dining room and living room chairs are the colonial mahogany chairs known as "Chippendale." These come in different shapes, so that while they all have the same seating height, the backs are varied, making them look less like a dining room set than they would otherwise. You have made the best selection in the color of your side walls. You will find it difficult to enamel Georgia pine, yet it can be done with proper treatment first. An attractive pair of drop leaf tables made something after the style of the gate leg has the drop ends squared off. One of these small tables is used ordinarily, and when it is necessary to have a large table to accommodate more people, the other table is set to it. Ordinarily one of the tables is left with the leaves dropped, standing against the side wall, and serves as a buffet. You will find a pair of these tables most convenient. It is impossible to select a rug for you in a vague, theoretical way without seeing the one that you have.

* *

B. K. L.—I cannot tell you how to put the covering on your lamp shade without knowing the size and shape of the wire frame. Many of the newest frames are shaped much like an umbrella top, only that the outside edges are rounded into scallops. These are invariably covered first with an interlining of thin muslin, stretched tight to them, without fullness of any kind. The silk is then drawn snugly on over the muslin and the scalloped edges are trimmed with heavy fringe. If you have one of the older style round frames with an open top the silk must be gathered to the frame at the sides. Yes, with what you have, yellow would be a good color. Let it be amber rather than canary color. Your choice of paper is excellent.

F. J. G.: Your bedroom paper is charming. Use sunfast or taffeta for your draperies, the shade of pink, like the flat wild roses in the paper.

* *

L. P.—Which one of your questions was it that I overlooked in my reply to you? My correspondence is so large it would be difficult to find the letter which you wrote to me several weeks ago. I am glad you are pleased with the advice I gave you.

* *

C. E. F.: Yes, it is necessary to remove all previous varnish from the surface of your furniture before beginning to lacquer it. I regret it is impossible to give names in this column.

* *

D. E.: If you have your portieres corresponding in color with your side walls you save your rooms from having a patchy effect. A tan brocade would be lovely, especially if a dull tone is chosen, with just a glint of gilt thread. Rose color for your portieres would disappoint you and rob your rose lamp shade entirely of its effect.

* *

G. M.: In both of the rooms you describe, I should use a shade of jade green on the side walls. Your letter is not quite clear. Do you intend to have all of your rooms done over?

* *

P. J. R.: In regard to the use of charcoal and down draft instead of a chimney in the building of your sun parlor, to the best of my belief it would be a mistake. Charcoal is pure carbon. In burning with a down draft it would be sure to give off carbon dioxide, which is disagreeable, and might give off carbon monoxide, which is a deadly poisonous gas. To insure against this your down draft connected by a galvanized iron flue with the chimney in the basement, about thirty feet away, would have to create a perfect vacuum. This could only be done when the fire in the furnace with which the flue is connected was roaring hot. On mild days when the fire was subdued the thing would not work. Why not have a fireplace with a chimney and smokestack built in your sun parlor? If the stack is made of brick, it need not be ugly. Indeed it could be made charming with benches built in on either side of the fireplace.

C. C.—I think in a five room house that you will find it more satisfactory to have the woodwork and the furniture alike in dining room and living room. Tan and cream go well with the dark oak. Keep both rooms alike. Mahogany and oak do not go well together. Wicker chairs will go well with what you have. Have you a vase of some sort that you could make into a base for your lamp? It would be prettier than a wooden base. I have seen an ordinary brown bean jug effectively used as a lamp base with a yellow silk shade. Use chintz curtains, having a tan ground, and let your light silk pillows repeat all of the colors on the chintz. It would be nice to have valance continue clear across the tops of the three windows of your bay. A combination tea table on wheels, with drawers and folding top, serves all purposes, both of buffet and serving table. Use as much of your glass and china as you like in service, but do not have it displayed when not in use. Enameled furniture in light colors is popular for bedrooms. The best decorators now are partial to the tint of enamel called old ivory. You must be guided by your own taste in the matter of the paintings you have. Without seeing them I cannot advise you.

M. S.: In such a room as you describe, with golden brown cloth side walls and rather dark solid oak finish, I have lately seen rugs of a real prune color used with excellent success. The lamp shades in this room should be a clear amber color.

* *

W. C. O.: The drawing you inclosed in your letter suggests chairs of a charming shape. I think that they will be more pleasing in the long run than the first ones you had in mind. No, I do not think that all of the walls must be dark in your studio because you find it necessary to have the east wall dark. Put your molding about six inches from the ceiling. Fill in all of your wall spaces with a border about five inches wide; this you can get by buying a role of striped paper printed in figured strips of this width, and cutting the paper up into strips. If you have several shades of colors in this figured strip, your east wall may be in one of these shades and the other three walls a lighter tone of the same. Since you have a shawl and quaint decorated furniture, let your side walls be neutral. A pearly gray would be good. If you can find for your border something with a black ground, you might have your east panel done in black. This will be striking. The east wall might be a deep brown and the side walls faun color. The material for your curtain can be monks cloth.

DAHLIAS:

How to Grow Them Successfully.

FOR many years the dahlia has been one of our most popular flowers, but there has been much complaint of failure in obtaining a full crop of blossoms before early fall frosts injure the plants. The fact is, we have, until lately, only half understood the requirements of the plant, and we have given it a treatment that was not calculated to insure the best results.

We have thought it necessary to start the roots into growth in the house in early spring, and the result almost invariably has been a weak growth which stunted the plants when they were transferred to the ground, as they lacked the stamina they needed in adjusting themselves to the change from indoor to outdoor conditions. The consequence was that they were so backward in development that frosts generally injured them before they had perfected the first crop of flowers.

We have learned it is not necessary to start this plant into growth before putting the roots into the ground. If we wait until the weather is settled and the ground warm, and plant our dahlias then in a rich soil they start into immediate growth, and go steadily ahead, and give us a generous number of fine blossoms long before the plants started in the old way ever did.

I have set out tubers in the latter part of May, and had flowers from them in late July, and from that time on to the coming of frost, thus making it possible to have at least two months of bloom.

It is necessary that the ground in which we plant the dahlia should be rich, for a strong, steady growth is needed in order to obtain the best results. In a soil of only moderate richness growth will be slow, and development will come too late in the season to be satisfactory.

Give it a soil well supplied with plant food and see that it has so much water that its roots are always moist. Support it well, to prevent it from being broken down by sudden winds and heavy storms, and you will find it one of the most satisfactory of all garden plants.

There are several distinct classes of this flower. The "show" dahlia is a large, double flower, rich in color and effective in garden decoration. The "decorative" type has semi-double flowers, borne on long stalks, and is, I believe, the most satisfactory variety for general use.

The "singles" have but one row of broad petals and are showy. The "cactus" type has petals twisted and curled in such fantastic manner that they give one the impression of flowers gone crazy. The "pompones" are miniature "show" dahlias, so dwarf in habit that they are used as bedders. The same rich wide range of color runs through all the members of the family, from purest white to darkest scarlet, crimson, purple, and yellow, with intermediate shades of pink, cherry, delicate rose, and dainty cream—surely the most exacting taste can be suited so far as color is concerned.

There are many varieties in which these colors are combined in such a way as to make the flowers wonderfully striking, the petals of dark colors being tipped with white, or vice versa, and others striped and blotched with strongly contrasting colors. The "decorative" sorts and the "singles" are excellent for cutting.

Have You Met a Nervy Flirt?

Who was the nerviest flirt you ever met? What did he say? And what did you say? Was the incident funny or otherwise? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of page only. No manuscripts returned. Address Nervy Flirt Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune."

The Ultimate Nerve.

After we moved to Chicago I went out to see the town. I had not walked far when I heard some one near say, "O-O-O, some one new." He followed me, which was embarrassing, because it made me feel green. He soon came up and got me by the arm and started some of that stone age stuff about where he had met me. I made no reply to anything he said, so finally tired of talking to himself he said good-by and added that he would see me soon.

By this time I was lost, but walked bravely on. I had not gone far when I saw a policeman coming and with him a man. My heart beat with joy because I could ask him where I was. When he war near enough to speak to, the man that was with him yelled "My wife." I saw it was that nervy flirt that had walked me.

I was taken to the station. There he insisted I was his wife and we had been married in Denver about two years ago. I thought it was a joke and I told them how he had come up and spoken to me. The policeman that was with him said he had known us for years and I just came to Chi to get away from him, but ran into him the first thing.

When I heard this I was so frightened I couldn't see. I couldn't think. What would mother say? My head was a whirl. Was I dreaming?

Well, to make a long story short, this had to be ended in court, where Nervy swore I was his wife, but I was successful in proving I was not. Talk about "nervy flirts," can you beat that for nerve?

His Shame Was Pitiable.

I had been married a couple of years, when I returned to my home, a college town, to visit my relatives. About 7 o'clock one evening a young girl of 17 and I were carrying a suitcase a couple of blocks to the home of a friend, when a nervy but very dapper little freshman thought he would like to strike up an acquaintance.

The young girl was frightened and wanted to run when she saw the freshie coming toward us with a smile and bow and offering to carry the suitcase. Her astonishment was complete and satisfaction was written all over the fellow when I handed the suitcase over to him. As we walked along I did all the talking, never giving him a chance to say a word.

When we arrived at the house I took the suitcase and gratefully slipped a dime into his hand. When he protested, I gave him a nickel more, and we disappeared into the house, leaving a most crestfallen and disgusted freshie looking at his tip.

He Was Kin.

While in Berlin I started out one day to visit some relations whom I had not seen for ten years. Walking down Rosentahler Tohr, I noticed a nice looking old gentleman, in whom I thought I recognized an uncle of mine. I looked at him closely, when I passed him. I turned and looked at him again and saw that he also seemed to recognize me. I stopped at a confectionery store, further on, when this same old gentleman came in and invited me to have a cup of hot chocolate with him.

Then I knew I had made a mistake and encouraged an old flirt. I paid for my purchase, and walked out to take a car While waiting for one, again the old gentleman spoke to me, so, as I felt that I had really encouraged him and did not care to argue with him, I told him I could not understand German. Then I boarded the next car.

I spent a pleasant afternoon with my relatives, telling them what had happened to me that afternoon. We all had a good laugh over it. My aunt begged me to stay to dinner and meet my uncle, for I had been a great favorite of his, when a child. I did not have long to wait. I heard my cousin say to some one that had just entered the front hall: "Papa, come here and see our pretty cousin from America." And in walked the old gentleman of Rosentahler Tohr. The poor old fellow's consternation was pitiable, so I decided to spare him, for he whispered to me that it had been his first offense, and he would lose his home if it were known.

A few days later I met that same old gentleman at the same confectionery store, and he not only treated me to a cup of hot chocolate but presented me with a pretty ring. I do believe that I have cured him.

Water Cure for Flirts.

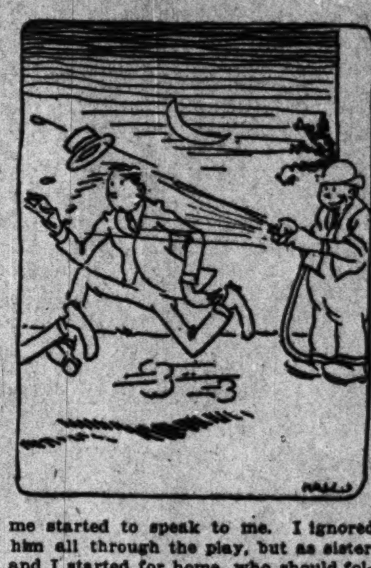
Have I met a merry flirt? Yes, not only one, but two at one time. One summer evening sister and I went to a picture show. Next to us were two nice looking young men. After we had been seated a while, the young man sitting next to me started to speak to me. I ignored him all through the play, but as sister and I started for home, who should follow us but the same two young men. They soon started to speak to us again, but I told them to run along.



"Nervy, did you say? They followed us home. When sis and I saw they would not leave we decided to give them a good dose that they would remember.

As we arrived at our door we told them to wait outdoors, that we would be out again immediately. When once in the house we quickly told the story to our uncle. As he had been watering the lawn a short while before, he went out the rear entrance, took the hose, and marched to the front door, where stood our merry flirts, patiently waiting.

Uncle gave them a good shower and they took to their heels as fast as they could, while we gave them the ha-ha. I often meet the same men, but they never try their stunt on me again.

Drug Store Lothario.

One bitter cold morning I dropped into a drug store to wait for a car. The clerk said good morning, and as a matter of form I answered him. He brought me a chair, and in a few minutes returned with a glass of hot malted milk, which he was sure would warm me up a bit. He also handed me his card and a small block of paper to write my phone number on. He said he wished to call me up. Just then some one else claimed his attention and I wrote on the block, "Jennie Jones, Chicago," and just caught the car in time.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons from little stomach, liver, bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if cross, bilious or feverish.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out of sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, or has stomach ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

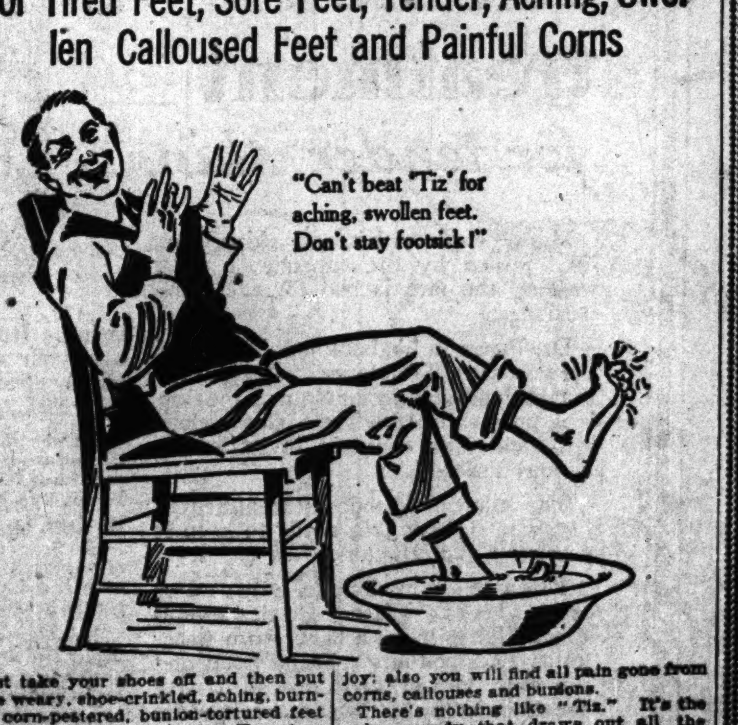
"TIZ" FOR FEET

For Tired Feet, Sore Feet, Tender, Aching, Swollen Calloused Feet and Painful Corns



"Can't beat 'Tiz' for aching, swollen feet. Don't stay footsick!"

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath. When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel.

Row 3—Repeat row 1, except that 4 t. are added in ch. of 3 making 11 trebles.

Row 4—Repeat row 2, adding 4 t., in ch. of 3. The pattern finishes with eighth row, always adding four trebles in chain of three.

In row nine divide the heavy treble with chains of seven and 1 ch. 2 t. [4 times], repeating 7 ch., 3 times and 1 t. 2 ch. [4 times], three times. These chains of seven make a pretty beading for ribbon.

For the sleeves, only the beading is used, finishing at the top in a straight line at the lower edge by turning with chains of five.

The Office Chatterbox.

"I WANT to tell you about a girl who works in our office," writes Miss Amy N., "who is such an incessant chatterer that she has made a nuisance of herself to everybody. There are six girls in the office, and for five of us our business hours are made hideous by this little disturber. Her work is not quite as heavy as that of the other girls, therefore she has a little more leisure than any one else in the office, which she occupies in talking to some one or other of the girls, but always in such a loud tone that she disturbs everybody else.

"Her chatter is always about herself, which makes her not only a nuisance but a bore as well. She not only prevents us from doing as much work as we otherwise could accomplish but she is making some of us so nervous that our jobs are becoming hardships.

"Don't think we have calmly put up with this annoyance. There isn't one of us who hasn't tried to discipline Miss T., but to no avail, as our snubs have produced little effect. I have told her repeatedly that I was too busy to listen to her and she has airily remarked: 'O. you go right on working while I tell you all about it.' It's exasperating.

"In spite of her constant chatter, Miss T. somehow gets her work done fairly quickly and accurately, and the boss doesn't know what a detriment she is to the rest of us. We have hesitated about making a complaint, as she probably would lose her position, which we all know she is absolutely dependent on for her living. But as snubs, and even rudeness, have failed to suppress her, we shall be driven to this extreme measure to get rid of her."

A chatterbox is a great nuisance and should not be tolerated in a business office. The writer of this letter would be justified in making a complaint to her employer, even though she knew that her associate would lose her position. In fact, she owes it to her employer to bring this matter to his attention, for although the chatterer does her work fairly well she interferes seriously with the work of five others.

Besides getting on the nerves of her fellow workers, this young woman is responsible for one of the many economic problems which office managers and efficiency experts spend so much time and money trying to solve. So it is up to Miss N. and the other girls in the office to see that this nuisance is brought to the attention of some one in authority. Then Miss T. can be either permanently suppressed or removed.

It is inexcusable—this constant chatter about ourselves—and becomes a dreadful bore. Only the self-centered and thoughtless indulge themselves so. We are so taken up with our own affairs that we have no thought but of ourselves. If we stopped to listen once in a while, we might save ourselves the danger of losing our jobs and our friends as well.

My Clothes Tricks.

This department appears every other day in "The Daily Tribune."

That "clothes make the woman" is a truism you can't deny. Haven't you found this out? Haven't you found that a change of color scheme in your clothes made you more attractive? Haven't you found good corsets to have improved your figure? Haven't you found certain dress patterns trying and different lines in the make of your clothes flatteringly transforming? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Clothes Tricks that Have Helped My Looks." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Antoinette Donnelly, Chicago Tribune.

Nice to Everybody.

It wasn't clothes tricks that changed me so much as the way I fixed my hair, and the cultivation of doing good to others.

Until I was 18 I was a gawky, awkward, modest girl with huge rimmed spectacles, a pug nose, and oily, stringy black hair. People did not take much interest in me, and I never had a beau, although I was well dressed and well mannered.

So I took matters into my own hands and went to the oculist and got a pair of inconspicuous nose glasses. That helped. Then I tried my hair different angles before the glass to get the best "do" for the shape of my head, and the line with my nose. This helped more.

I had a pair of nice bright brown eyes, my one redeeming feature, and I made it a habit to be nice to every one and to smile whether I felt like it or not.

The transformation worked wonders.

M. E. W.

Looks Slim in Green.

I am fair, fat, and 40. The first needs no remedy; the fatness I try to make less noticeable by wearing mostly striped dresses, cut on long lines. I seldom wear a shirtwaist, as this is apt to make my figure appear stouter. I select corsets long over the hips, in order to reduce the size of them, also rather high at the bust, as I have found that the low bust corsets give the appearance of being short waisted. I give the preference to green dresses, as I have found this color excellent to give a slender appearance. Dark blue comes next, also black. I never wear white dresses, though I should like to, as they make a person look stout, the same as white shoes usually make the feet appear larger than in brown or black shoes. To remedy the last "defect," my age, I wear my hair low in the neck, as this gives a youthful appearance, with a few stray locks on the forehead. I do not effect a silly, girlish manner, yet try to look cheerful and pleasant at all times.

E. S.

Too Plump for Frilly Waists.

I had the plump person's usual penchant for wearing frilly waists with much fullness gathered into yokes and a high waisted skirt. When people remarked how fat I was getting I wondered what was wrong, as I weighed no more than I ought for my height. I changed my mode of dress, wearing the tailored waist and the skirt plain. It seemed to make the desired difference. Skirt and waist of one color are best when possible.

A. S.

Simple Styles More Becoming.

I never wear fussy clothes. I find simple styles with good lines more becoming. I never wear dark colors next to my face, cream or white always look better. Whenever I wear anything white, waist. collars and cuffs, or trimmings, I always try to have them spotless. Dirty white is anything but flattering. I always have my dresses made slightly high waisted, as I am long waisted, and I find them much more becoming this way. I always wear good corsets. One good corset will outwear three cheap ones and always keeps its shape.

M. S.

Change in the Coiffure.

When I was about 18 years of age I had a heavy head of dark hair, which was straight. Usually I wore it plain, parted in the middle or to one side and combed back loosely into a soft knot at the back.

I was going to school at the time and as there was to be some sort of "doings" one evening, I decided to curl my hair or wave it in front. The words and remarks of astonishment and praise from my girl friends over my improved appearance caused me to be more zealous in this regard ever after.

It surely works wonders in my appearance, transforming me from a plain, sensible looking female into a decidedly decent looking individual.

I know of no other trick that has, or could, work the change in me that this does.

G. B.

Against the Advice of Every One.

Being a rather tall girl, I have always been advised to wear large hats, whether they were the latest style or not, for friends and millinery saleswomen said they would make me look shorter. However, I envied the girls who wore small, jaunty hats and last winter I decided to try one against the advice of every one. I bought an inexpensive small hat and have never enjoyed wearing anything as much, for it is not only easy to keep on the head, but it keeps my hair neat, makes me look younger and much more stylish, and every one asks me why I never wore a small hat before, as it is much more becoming than any large hat I ever had and does not make me look a bit taller.

The new treatment for tender skins

Many people with tender skins have been misled by the superstition that washing the face is bad for the complexion.

Dr. Pusey in his book on the care of the skin says, "The layer of dirt and fat that such persons accumulate on the skin is a poor substitute for a clean, clear skin, and is a constant invitation to various disorders."

The following Woodbury treatment is just what tender skin needs to keep it attractive and resistant.

Dip a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to the face. Do this several times. Then make a light warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and dip your cloth up and down in it until the cloth is "fluffy" with the soft white lather. Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are thoroughly cleansed. Rinse the face lightly with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

See what a difference this famous facial soap treatment will make in your skin in ten days—a promise of that loveliness which the steady use of Woodbury's brings to a tender, sensitive skin.

Do this today! A 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment. Go to your druggist or toilet counter today and get a cake. Begin at once to get the benefits of this treatment for your skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is for sale by every dealer and druggist in Chicago and, in fact, by dealers everywhere throughout the United States and Canada. Made by The Andrew Jergens Co., New York and Cincinnati.

Our Book Department Is Taking Orders for the Handy Volume Issue of the Encyclopaedia Britannica

At an Astoundingly Low Price

A Britannica is essential to the development of the culture of every home. Just think of how it will help you help the children. For "Don't bother me" is no reply to a question. Yet it, or something to the same effect, is the one answer you give to half the questions of your boy or girl.

And it is wrong to leave such questions unanswered. For it discourages the desire of the young ones to learn and so retards their development.

But with an Encyclopaedia Britannica in the bookcase the children can no longer stump you.

For, whatever they want to know—history, geography, literature—you'll find it fully explained in the Britannica, by an authority on the subject.

So a Britannica brings you real close to your boys and girls, for it enables you to superintend their study, to make their home lessons less irksome and more interesting.

And you'll find in the Encyclopaedia the information on things that will make you more companionable to your family, more interesting to your friends.

This complete reference library, a work that hitherto has been extremely costly, can now be bought for

1.00 Down and 10c a Day (In the Handy Volume Edition)

It comes in 29 volumes—printed on costly India paper, page size 8⅝ in. x 6½ in., as convenient to read as a magazine.

We guarantee that in the Handy Volume issue of the Encyclopaedia Britannica there is every word, every illustration and every map that appears in the large, expensive edition. In fact, the one essential difference is that of price.

A Saving of 64%

A visit to our Book Department will give the most convincing evidence of the uncommon worth of this edition of the Britannica.

A Very Unusual Purchase of Wilton Rugs

THOS. L. LEEDOM & CO., owners of the celebrated Bristol Carpet Mills (Philadelphia), and manufacturers of high grade Wilton rugs, moved their New York sales room from 30 East 21st St. to 230 5th Ave. Rather than move the rugs that were on display, they disposed of them to The Fair, together with all the duplicate patterns that they had on hand at the mill. This factory surplus includes the popular sizes as well as larger ones; also hall runners—all at very remarkable price concessions. The mill operated by Thos. L. Leedom & Co. is among the oldest and most reputable in Philadelphia, and this wonderful purchase may be considered as a sensational transaction, because it comes just at the time when all rug manufacturers are advancing their prices. We are quite elated over this purchase, and know that those who attend this sale will have every reason to rejoice.

He Made an Egg Sandwich.

We had been neighbors and sweethearts for years, but I just couldn't make up my mind to say the long wished for "yes." They say a kind son makes a kind husband, but even that didn't have much effect on me. I went over to their house one morning when his mother was sick in bed and found him in an immaculately clean white apron baking the most delicious looking bread that I ever made away over out of sight. He cut a loaf and made me an egg sandwich that made one forget the common old egg sandwich, and—well, I think that is what won me.

Not by Running After Him.

I haven't been married so very long and don't just know how I won my mate. Surely not by my good looks, although I'm not homely, by any means; not by my cooking, as I worked nine years in an office and had nothing to do with cooking until after I was married, although it didn't take long for me to "catch on," and my husband says I'm a good cook.

One thing I am certain of—I didn't win Mr. Mate by "running after him," as so many girls are doing nowadays. I have too much pride, and whenever I did in any way act a little too "anxious" I regretted it bitterly and took care never to let the same thing happen again. My motto was, "If they want me they will come after me."

Some who read this will say: "I'll bet she didn't have many fellows." Wrong again; I went with a number of different fellows and had a good time.

Mr. Mate won me by being courteous, kind, and ready to do anything for my enjoyment and pleasure, by always keeping his dates with me, unless something real important happened; then he would telephone, letting me know the circumstances. He is just the same today.

Taking Care of the Baby.

When my girlhood chum had been married some time and a dear little boy had come into her life she used to ask me occasionally to stay at her home in the evening to care for the baby while she and her husband went to some entertainment. I was glad to do this, as the youngster was a darling and never cried.

One evening while I was "on duty" the baby's uncle came in and, finding me alone with the little one, proceeded to make himself thoroughly agreeable. After that he used to share my vigils with me quite often and called at my home to take me out at other times. When the baby had reached the short clothes stage the uncle and I were busy looking over bungalow designs.

Today I am the mistress of the dearest little home ever built, and in it is a nursery containing two small beds, and we are all as happy as the day is long. It was my attention to the baby that won my mate.

Not a Bit of a Hit Was He, at a Glance at a Dance, Thought She.

It happened at a summer resort just two short years ago,
A quiet spot in Michigan, where things were rather slow,
Until one night I met three young men at the hotel dance,
One of the three and I disapproved one another at first glance;
Though a handsome college student, still I thought he was a prude
And he treated me with such disdain as to be almost rude!
[illegible]
Conceited, thought I—fastidious, too, for his clothes he knew just how to wear,
And "bookish"—next morning I caught him reading "Vanity Fair!"
For one whole week our greetings were but civil and polite,
But something made me change my opinion on the following night.
There was to be a barn dance at a farm some miles away,
And all the young folks had been planning for the fun all day;
Some girls suggested that the little tots should stay at home,
And as for "old folks" going, they needed no chaperone.
I didn't quite approve of this, but never said a word,
But it wasn't long before our "conceited friend" made himself heard:
"Unless the married people and the little ones go, too,
I think we'll all stay home," then looked at me and asked, "Don't you?"
I surely was surprised, but agreed it would be wrong
To have the young folks go without a chaperone along.
And although some were grumbling he made three trips in his car,
To bring the mothers, fathers, and all, though the distance was quite far.
I could not help but admire how he handled the affair,
And everybody said 'twas the best time they had while there.
The grandmas, babies, old and young, all liked him you could tell,
For he showed consideration for the old and young as well.
And as for fun, indeed, he acted nothing like a prude,
And as the evening wore on, no longer was he rude,
We found so much in common, it took me by surprise,
And I haven't any doubt that with him it was likewise,
Thereafter—but why tell it?—I simply want to state,
That his consideration for old and young alike is what won me for his mate!

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Got Mad and Forgot.

A short time after we were married I had occasion to take a train at 8 o'clock one morning. The cab failed to come after me and my husband was forced to carry my bag to the station, only a few blocks. It was cold; his hat blew off, and he had so completely lost his temper by the time we reached the station he forgot to buy my ticket or to kiss me goodby.

She Discussed Browning.

Before I met my husband I had heard that he enjoyed reading Browning more than anything else, and because he seemed attractive to me I studied that author more assiduously than I should otherwise have done.

As we met often, he heard a great deal of Browning from me. I plied him with questions as to his opinion on Rabbi Ben Ezra and Del Sarto until I quite got to enjoy Browning.

During this period we became engaged and married.

One day he said to me: "Can't you cut out the Browning? The idea of having always to breakfast opposite an intellectual feast nearly lost me a wife, but you were so attractive in spite of it that I just couldn't give you up." And he looked dubiously at me.

At this I shouted with delight and told him then and there that I had doubted my ability to hold out much longer. And we both felt better.

ETIQUETTE.

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

Praise in Public.

THERE is an old saying: "Praise to the face is open disgrace." It is poor taste to praise any one in the gushing manner which is often practiced by a certain type of woman. Any overdemonstrativeness, or excessive use of endearing terms, or expressions of affection or admiration in public is bad form.

Many people—women principally—are addicted to one or more of these errors of judgment. Such open adulation is rarely pleasing to the recipient. It is usually embarrassing to bystanders as well as to the object of the adulation.

It is better to err on the side of reticence, leaving your affection and admiration to be taken for granted or understood by the object of it than to put your sentiments all into words. There is nothing so thrilling as a little word of commendation from one who almost never praises.

A. J.—For a party of twelve young people of from 12 to 16 years of age, can't you play some of those games that tax the mind somewhat? You could try an old fashioned spelling bee. Or provide each person present with a piece of paper and pencil and let all draw a noun, an adjective, and a verb from a trayful of such written on folded slips of paper. Each person must write a verse of any length bringing in these words. When written the papers are folded and placed in a basket and read by some one. The others guess as to the identity of the author. It is surprising what amusing, original rhymesters will be discovered in an average company.

S. S.: The most suitable costume you can wear at a luncheon followed by a concert or a lecture is a well made walking dress or suit, consisting of a coat, skirt, and blouse. In fact, such a dress is in good taste for any daytime function.

JOHN: You can quite properly offer the young woman you escort to the theater a cup of chocolate or some ice cream and cake after the play, but don't take her to a restaurant and give her a rich supper and wine to drink. It is neither proper nor wholesome.

* *

WORRIED: How does your husband want you to address his parents? I should consult him on the subect. If he has no ideas or wishes in the matter, wait until you meet them, and if they seem formal in manner use Mr. and Mrs. in speaking to them. If they are friendly and make advances then ask them in what way they would prefer that you address them. Many devoted and affectionate sons and daughters in law always use the formal title in speaking to or of their parents-in-law. Act toward the newly engaged young woman whom you know only slightly in a simple, unaffected way. Congratulate her and give her your good wishes when you next meet her, but don't go out of your way to do so. The golden rule, however, is a wise one to apply in all such cases.

* *

T. R.: The bride's parents or relatives, whoever give her her wedding, pay for the carriage to and from the church, if the ceremony is performed in church. They also pay for any entertainment that follows the marriage service, such as a reception, luncheon, or supper. The groom pays for the wedding ring and the clergyman's fees. He also sends the bride and her bridesmaids, if she have any, their bouquets. The bride's family provides the going away carriage or motor. It is their last official expense for her. After that her husband is responsible for her expenditures in connection with her.

AN APRIL MORNING

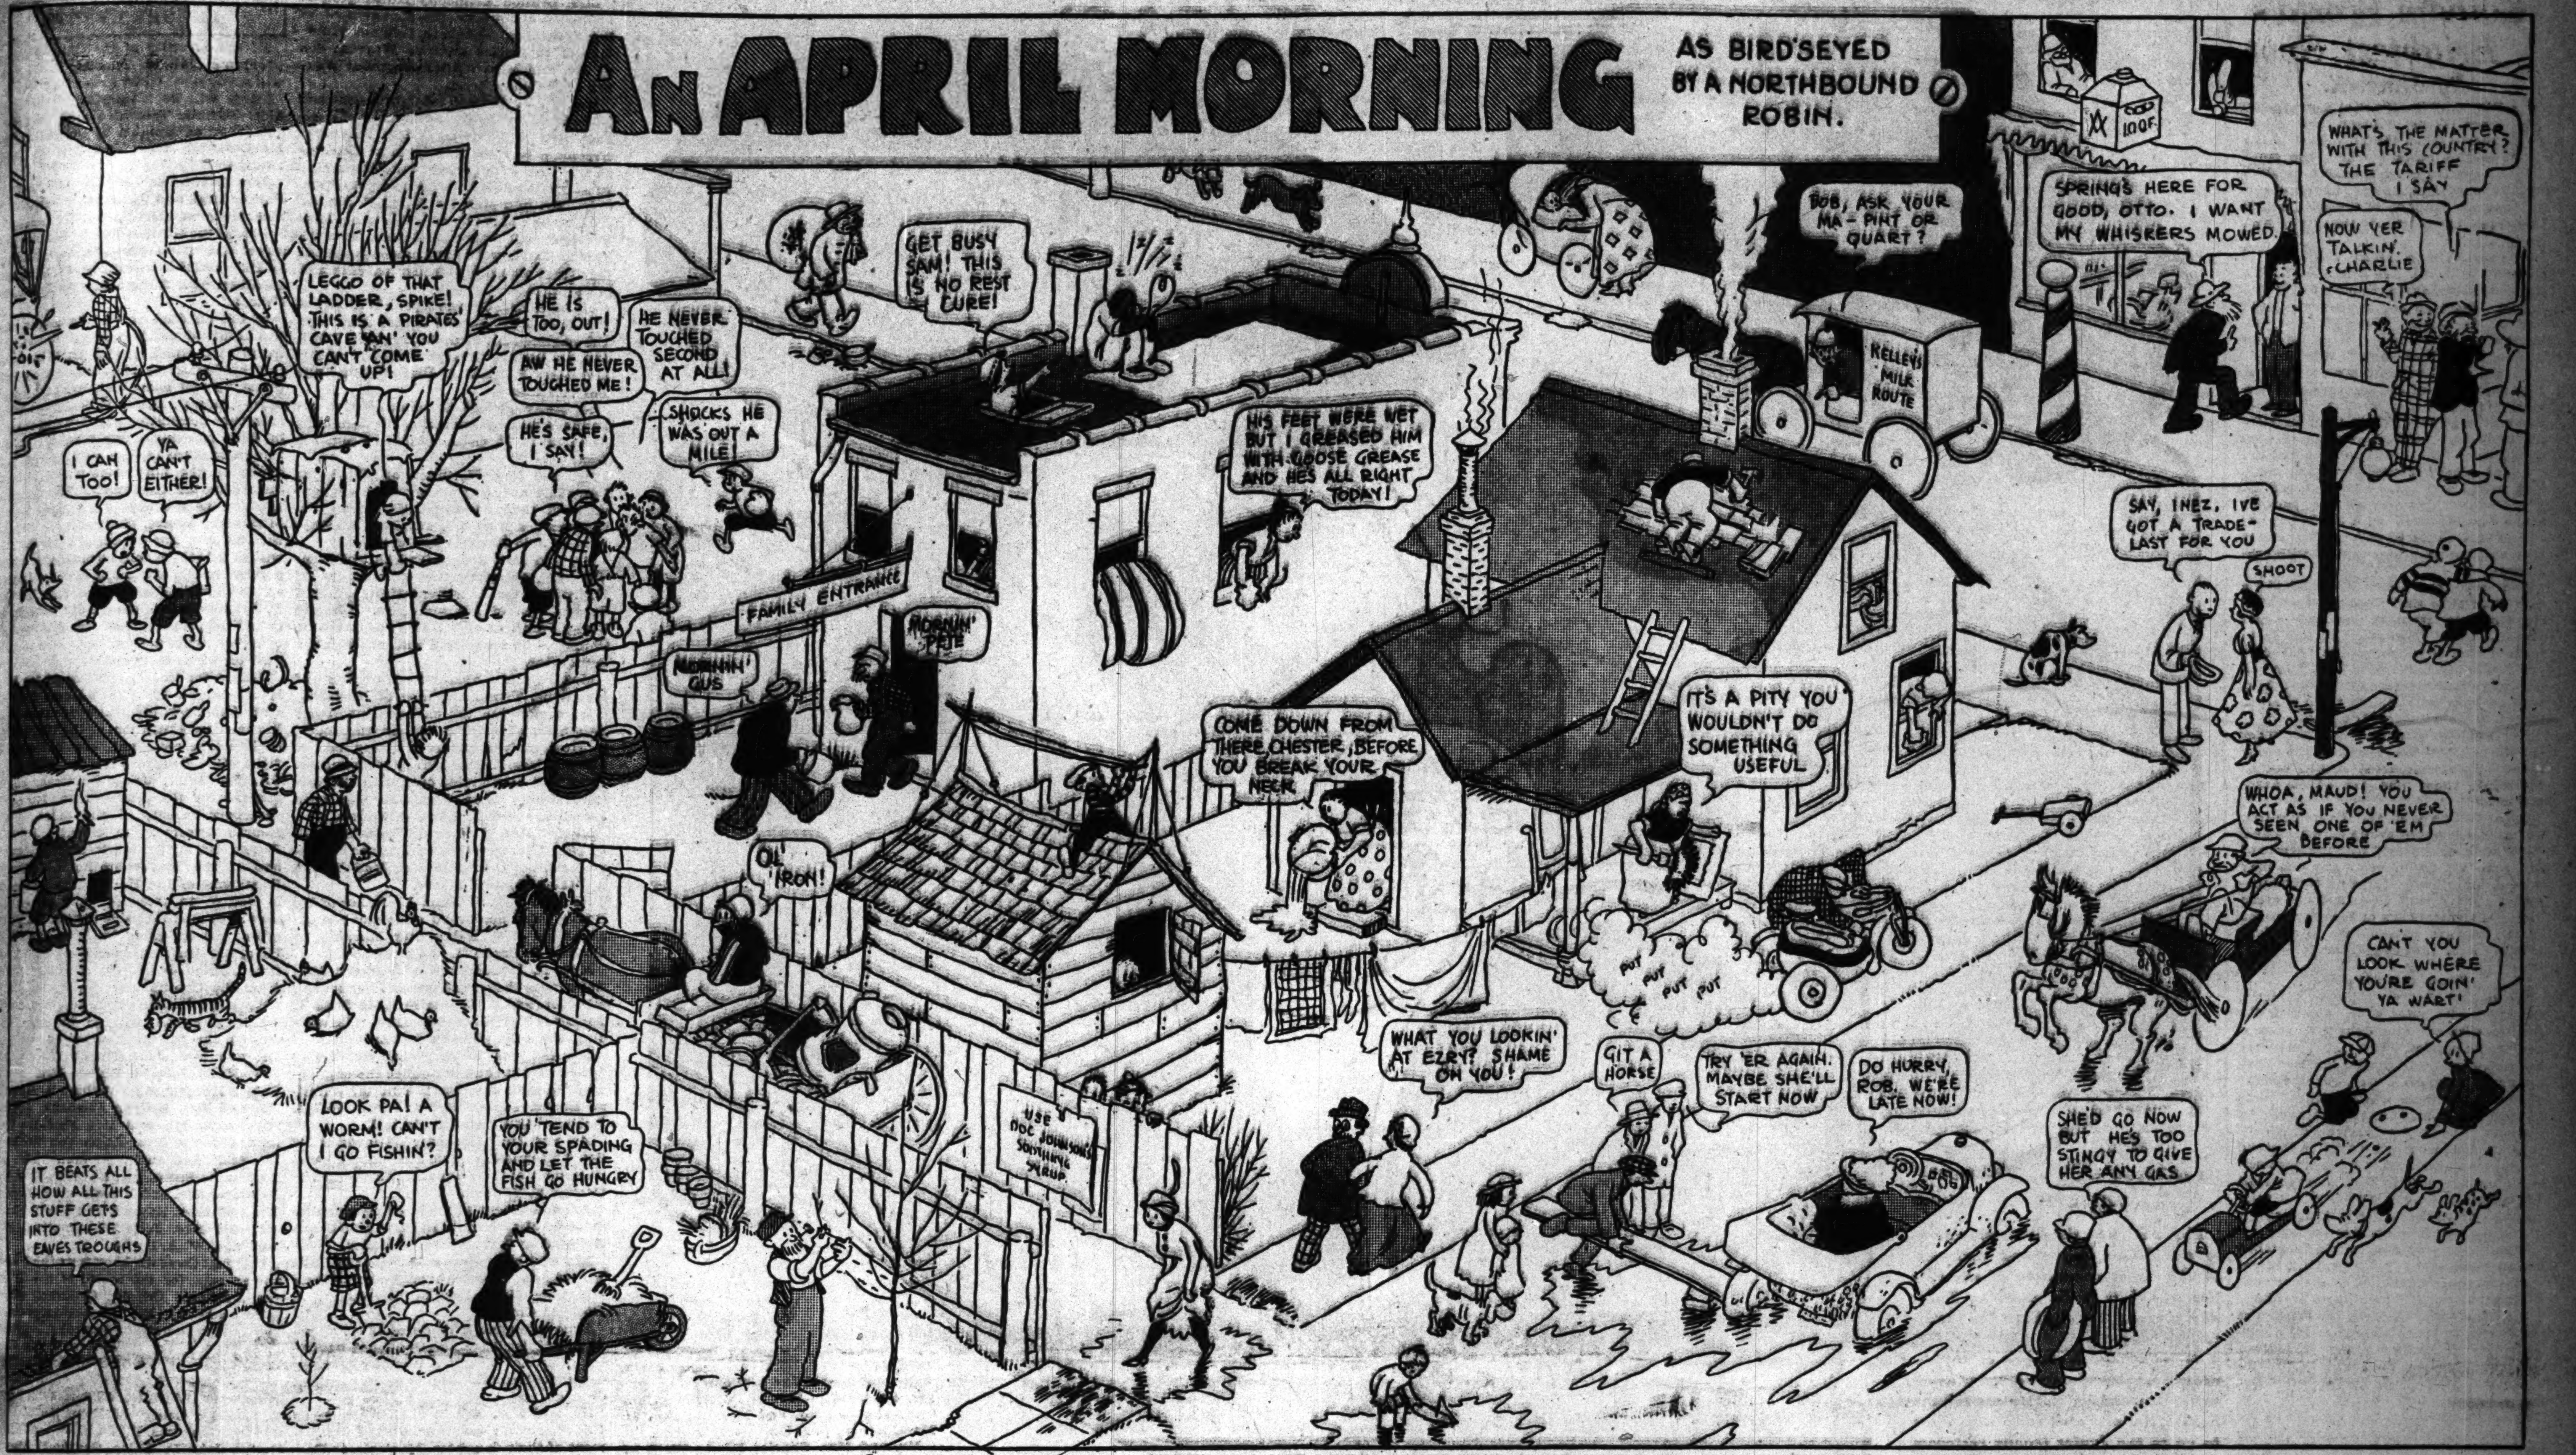
AS BIRD'SEYED BY A NORTHBOUND ROBIN.



LEGGO OF THAT LADDER, SPIKE! THIS IS A PIRATES' CAVE 'AN' YOU CAN'T COME UP!
GET BUSY SAM! THIS IS NO REST CURE!
BOB, ASK YOUR MA—PINT OR QUART?
IOOF
SPRING'S HERE FOR GOOD, OTTO. I WANT MY WHISKERS MOWED.
WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THIS COUNTRY? THE TARIFF I SAY
NOW YER TALKIN', CHARLIE
HE IS TOO, OUT!
HE NEVER TOUCHED SECOND AT ALL!
AW HE NEVER TOUCHED ME!
HE'S SAFE, I SAY!
SHUCKS HE WAS OUT A MILE!
I CAN TOO!
YA CAN'T EITHER!
KELLEY'S MILK ROUTE
HIS FEET WERE WET BUT I GREASED HIM WITH GOOSE GREASE AND HES ALL RIGHT TODAY!
SAY, INEZ, IVE GOT A TRADE-LAST FOR YOU SHOOT
FAMILY ENTRANCE
MORNIN' PETE
MORNIN' GUS
COME DOWN FROM THERE, CHESTER, BEFORE YOU BREAK YOUR NECK
IT'S A PITY YOU WOULDN'T DO SOMETHING USEFUL
OL' IRON!
WHOA, MAUD! YOU ACT AS IF YOU NEVER SEEN ONE OF 'EM BEFORE
PUT PUT PUT PUT CAN'T YOU LOOK WHERE YOU'RE GOIN' YA WART!
WHAT YOU LOOKIN' AT EZRY? SHAME ON YOU!
GIT A HORSE
TRY 'ER AGAIN. MAYBE SHE'LL START NOW
DO HURRY, ROB. WE'RE LATE NOW!
SHE'D GO NOW BUT HE'S TOO STINGY TO GIVE HER ANY GAS
LOOK PA! A WORM! CAN'T I GO FISHIN'?
YOU 'TEND TO YOUR SPADING AND LET THE FISH GO HUNGRY
USE DOC JOHNSON'S SOOTHING SYRUP
IT BEATS ALL HOW ALL THIS STUFF GETS INTO THESE EAVES TROUGHS

By Mme. X.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The western hemisphere seems to be the only part of the earth's surface where the sun—metaphorically speaking—is shining just now, and the apex of this cheerful zone, the pinnacle of peaceful though clamorous prosperity, is the city of New York.

It is not hard to realize when you are here—for this col. has flitted east for a week—that you are in the biggest, richest, gayest, smartest, most worldly minded city in the world. Nineveh, Babylon, Carthage, Rome—none of them ever touched New York as it is today.

Even a noisy band of striking tailors, who surged about Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street last Monday afternoon, bearing large placards in their hats announcing that they had been on strike ten weeks—even they looked well clothed and well fed. Restaurants, great and small, high priced and low, down town and up, are crowded; playhouses are packed; shops are thronged with eager buyers; streets and cluttered with motors; street cars and busses are congested with passengers.

And right here is one who would sing a duet with Miss Emily Larned, that hitherto lone voice crying in a wilderness, and urge all other Chicagoans to join in to make a chorus which shall call so loudly for double decker motor busses on our parkways and pleasure drives that those who are now withholding them shall be forced to yield to popular clamor.

The people pay for the parkways. They should be given the opportunity to enjoy them. Such enjoyment should not be limited to those who can afford automobiles.

Upper Fifth avenue and Riverside drive are as much boulevards as any we have. They are avenues lined with the homes of the rich, yet for 10 cents any one may take a long, lovely drive on these highways; a drive with views over the green vistas of Central park or the open spaces of the Hudson river. And no resident grudges it to the bus patrons.

Seats for Women.

Apropos of Gotham's public vehicles, the Chicagoite notes a few points of difference with our own delectable passenger traffic service. The manners of the average street car patron in New York are much better than ours. There is a far greater percentage of vacating of seats by men for women than in Chicago. In Chicago this courtesy is almost nonexistent. Even old women are allowed to stand in our cars unless some younger woman gives up her seat to her. Also in New York there is no one who does not take pains to move up or down, if necessary, to make room for another passenger.

Then, though of a more old fashioned design than ours, the New York street cars are much cleaner, much better ventilated than our stifling, disease breeding, degrading cars. The few and small roof or floor dust traps that pass for ventilators in our modern street cars are a poor substitute for the long, narrow windows that push open in the space between the roof and sides of a New York car. Furthermore, such an offense as spitting is practically unknown in the Gotham public conveyances. Both front and back platforms are as clean as a private vestibule, while—well, just look at ours!

Much to Occupy Average Woman.

There is no trouble in the disposal of time for the average woman spending a week in New York. Besides trying on every hat in Fifth avenue, inspecting every frock, sport suit, and cloak, and visiting all the "antiquaries," there is Fanny Locke's play, "The Great Lover," the Bandbox theater, Beerbohm Tree, the Metropolitan opera, the Midnight Follies, and a dozen other first class shows. For the more serious minded there is the new Meneb tomb at the Metropolitan, a visit to the Morgan library, lectures at the Colony and the Cosmopolitan clubs, and visits to picture galleries and studios. This nearly runs the gamut of this column's undertakings.

The fashions are just about what Chicago dressmakers and milliners have been displaying for some weeks. Recent importations from Paris, from the studios of Drecoll, Cheruit, and Poiret have a rather sloppy general effect, with a hideous cut of the neck which local dressmakers hasten to assure you will have to be altered for American women. Hats incline to exaggeratedly broad brims or to the high and narrow effects we met early in the season. Cloaks are large, loose, befurbelowed, and more than ever tending to obscure all the lines of the figure and to make the lean and meager individual look as burgeoning as that massive, overfed female who is fast becoming such an American type.

An Evening at the Bandbox.

Fannie Locke's play is still drawing packed houses, though how full the houses would be were not Leo Dietrichstein playing the great lover is open to surmise.

To go to the Bandbox theater, there to pass an evening with the Washington Square Players, is to breathe once more the rarefied atmosphere of the Lake Forest Players, the Little theater, and the dear, departed Chicago Theater company combined. Sensing immediately this subtle something which always accompanies any revolt from the conventional and accepted, with that curious intuition which becomes vibrant in contact with the indefinable, we gazed at the ornate yet chastely decorated walls of the shrine to drama, which is unjustly and frivolously dubbed the Bandbox theater, and it seemed quite natural to find Mrs. "Harry" Hubbard, one of the chief stars of the Aldis playhouse, and her husband in a party sitting just back of us. She is studying dramatic art here while Mr. Hubbard is devoting himself to sculpture, spending hours daily at his studio.

There's no immediate prospect, alas! that Mrs. Hubbard will act (and she's a charming actress), or Mr. Hubbard will "sculp" in Chicago. They have rented their quaint, white cottage at Lake Forest, opposite the Onwentsia club, to the Russell Tysons for the summer, while their next winter plans are vague.

Latest Shriek for Completeness.

The Colony club, the most fashionable and luxurious woman's club in the world, is not yet shaken down and at home in its new quarters at Park avenue and Sixty-second street. Many of its members sigh for the old, smaller, cozier surroundings in Madison avenue. But certainly their hearts must swell with pride as they take their country cousins up to the imposing Georgian mansion and show them the entirely up to date and beautiful interior.

There is no men's club, nor superior hostelry in New York (and that now means the world) that can teach this woman's organization anything in the way of running such an institution. With their corps of white capped cooks, their liveried footmen, their neat maids, their thoroughly trained bath women, manicures, masseuses, and coiffeurs, they are a perfectly run machine, while their writing room, reading room, ballroom, dining rooms, bedrooms, "beauty parlors," gymnasium, and huge mirrored and marble lined swimming pool are all the latest shriek for completeness and exquisite taste.

Tell of Women in the War.

New York society, such of it as is not reviving and refreshing itself at southern and western resorts, is running to lectures nowadays. And many of these take place in the stately ballroom of the Colony club.

Last Sunday afternoon Mrs. Charles Russell, an American woman, whose marriage to an Englishman has anglicized her more utterly than you would think possible, spoke there on what Englishwomen of rank and family were doing to aid in the war. She was followed, and, between you and me, eclipsed by Miss Kathleen Burke, a great grandniece of Edmund Burke, the famous English orator, and I wish greatuncle Ed could have heard her speak on the work of the Scottish hospital corps in France, Serbia, Greece, and Corsica. His gift of speech has not diminished as it has come down to this collateral descendant.

We have heard many agreeable, interesting, able speakers on the various phases of this war and the innumerable needs of those affected by it, but never such an inspiring, vivid, delightful, and moving presentation as that made by Miss Burke. To begin with, she's such a "nifty," debonair, completely attractive little person herself, as she stands up in her jaunty Scotch fur cap, smartly made white serge suit—uniform, I almost said—with her hands either clasped behind her back or in her pockets, that she captivates the eye even before she arrests your attention with her rich, full voice, and her well regulated, but irresistible flow of words.

The Scotch hospital units, which have done such fine work just behind the various battle fronts, are entirely composed, from the head surgeon down to the last orderly, of women—and women thoroughly trained each in her rôle. Miss Burke says that they struggled for and gained utterly the confidence of every military department with which they came in contact. So much so in the case of the grim, completely businesslike French army fighting on a section of the western front that the surgeon general told them to go to the railway station and pick out their own wounded.

Miss Burke hopes in May to come out to Chicago.

At the Colony club last Tuesday there was a solemn "conference" (in the French use of the term) on the subject "Are Women Educated?" You can guess the consensus of opinion on this subject. That same afternoon at the Cosmopolitan club Commissioner of Police Arthur Woods gave a talk to the Parents' league (an institution as alive and alert as our own Chicago P. L.) on how to keep boys out of the police courts.

Mr. Woods' engagement to Miss Helen Hamilton, which has been recently announced, has created much stir in New York. Miss Hamilton is a tall, dark, handsome young woman of 19 summers (there are no winters at that age) of a decided personality and force. She is a granddaughter of the late Pierpont Morgan and great-great-granddaughter of Alexander Hamilton.

Mr. Woods, who is one of the striking figures in New York today, is twenty-four years older than his fiancé in years, though not in any other way, as she is mature for her age, while he has the vitality and vivacity of a man half his age.

The marriage is set for early in June.

New York blossoms with Chicago people just now, among whom are Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Crane, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, Mrs. Henry Dibblee, Mrs. John R. Gott, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Rutter, Miss Mildred Blair, Miss Margaret Billings, and Mr. Higinbotham.

Count von Bernstorff is a familiar figure in Fifth avenue, together with a lot of other diplomats.

WEDDINGS.

Miss Sylvia Annenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Annenberg of 4141 Malden street, and Jay Cassrell, 925 Irving Park boulevard, were married at the Congress hotel on Tuesday by the Rev. Abraham Hirschberg. The matron of honor was Miss Helen Livingstone and the best man was Henry Cassriel. The bridesmaids were Miss Ida Annenberg, Miss Esther Bernstein, Miss Esther Rose, and Miss Rosie Rose. The ushers were Leslie Livingstone, Paul Gates, Leon Cassriel, and Louis Rose, the master of ceremonies being Charles Lando. A wedding dinner and dance followed the ceremony.

Miss Jane incent, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Vincent of the Virginia hotel, has set April 24 for her marriage to Joseph Shumway Barker. The ceremony will be celebrated in St. James' church by the Rev. James S. Stone. Miss Vincent's younger brother, Ensign Jack Vincent, U. S. N., a recent graduate from Annapolis, will be best man. Mrs. Charles Ridgely of Springfield, Miss Vincent's grandmother, will attend the wedding.

The wedding of Miss Loire Andrews, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Albert H. Andrews, 4714 Greenwood avenue, and Don Elgin White, son of the Rev. and Mrs. A. M. White, 4342 North Hermitage avenue, will take place the evening of April 24 at 8:30 o'clock at St. James' Methodist Episcopal church. The service will be read by the father of the bridegroom. The maid of honor will be Miss Margaret Cole and the bridesmaids are to be the Misses Annelie Wyckoff of Baltimore, Md.; Kathryn Frazey of Brighton, Ia.; and Helen Pyne of Chicago. Warren O. White, a brother of the bridegroom, will serve as best man. The ushers will be Charles E. Vear, W. Albert Kemp, Lester R. Cook, and Dr. Davies Lazear. Albert H. Andrews Jr. will act as ring bearer. A reception will follow the service at the home of the bride's parents.

The bridal party is announced of Miss Edith Ogden Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carter H. Harrison, and Cyrus Edson Manierre, son of William R. Manierre, whose wedding will take place April 25. Miss Harrison has selected two maids of honor, Miss Elizabeth Thurber of Detroit and Miss Gertrude McCarthy of Chicago. Mrs. Carter H. Harrison Jr. will be matron of honor. The bridesmaids will be: Miss Alice Manierre, a sister of the bridegroom; Miss Isabelle Stroh of Detroit, Miss Elizabeth Hamilton of Detroit, Miss Lucy Lacy of St. Joseph, Mo.; and Miss Araballa Schwerrin of San Francisco. The bridegroom will have Sidney Miller of Detroit as best man and as ushers Harold Manierre, his brother; Carter H. Harrison Jr., brother of the bride; Allen McLane of Baltimore, John Goodlet of Kansas City, Henry Yeiser of Cincinnati, Field Goltra of St. Louis, and Otto Wood of New York. The ceremony will be performed at 4 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, 3150 Sheridan road. The members of the family will be the only guests of the ceremony, which will be followed by a large reception.

Last Wednesday at 4 o'clock the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Cramer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Cramer of Lake Forest, to James G. K. McClure Jr., son of Dr. James G. K. McClure, president of the McCormick Theological seminary, took place at the home of the bride's parents. The wedding was quiet, with only the members of the immediate family present. The ceremony was performed by the father of the bridegroom. The bride had one attendant, Mrs. Donald Ryerson. Archibald McClure served his brother as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Scheuerman of Kansas City, Mo., announce the approaching marriage of their niece, Miss Marion Sattler, to Julian Eisenstaedt, son of Rudolph Eisenstaedt, on Wednesday at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City.

The wedding of Miss Beatrice Cohn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cohn of 4328 Michigan avenue, and Harry A. Levy will take place tomorrow at 6:30 o'clock at the Congress hotel.

A reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Turner, 1318 Independence boulevard, last Sunday night in honor of the engagement of their daughter, Belle, to Eli Daiches. When the guests arrived in the evening they were surprised to learn that the marriage took place early in the afternoon. Mr. Daiches is a son of Rabbi and Mrs. I. H. Daiches of Leeds, England.

Mrs. Fannie E. Noson announces the marriage of her daughter, Ethel Marie, to Dr. Robert G. Walker Jr.

FUTURE EVENTS.

At the meeting of the Chicago Lawn Woman's club on Tuesday J. H. [illegible] will speak on "What Arbor Day Means."

There will be a meeting of the South Side Catholic Woman's club on Friday afternoon at Knights of Columbus hall, Sixty-second street and Cottage Grove avenue.

The Parent-Teacher association of the Parker High and Elementary schools will hold its next meeting on Wednesday at 3 p. m. at the Normal college, Sixty-eighth street and Stewart avenue. Dr. Nathaniel Butler of the University of Chicago will speak on "Some Important Aspects of the School."

In the building at 171 Wabash avenue thousands of articles donated to the rummage sale which begins on Wednesday for the Children's Memorial hospital are piling up and being ticketed and priced. Mrs. Tracy C. Drake is chairman of the furniture committee and reports the gift of fifty paintings, bric-a-brac, and antique furniture from a well known residence on the north side which is being dismantled by the family. The names of the donors are not to be made public. Miss Mary Chase, chairman on pictures for the sale, has arranged a contest, the winner of which will be presented with a portrait in oils of himself or herself painted by Virginia Keep Clark. Mrs. Watson F. Blair, who is in charge of the rummage committee, reports that over $2,000 worth of silver articles have been sent in to be sold for what they will bring.

Tickets for the benefit concert for Mlle. Hendrica van der Flier's Home for Belgian War Orphans, which is to take place in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel tomorrow night, can be obtained from Mlle. HAIR ON FACE AND UNDER ARMS

This method for removing superfluous hair is totally different from pastes and rub-on preparations, which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. To rob hair of its vitality you must use De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory. It attacks hair under the skin, as well as on the skin. Imitations of De Miracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations because they lack certain ingredients that De Miracle alone contains which give it the power to devitalize hair. Well groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from limbs and under arms as well as from face, neck and arms. Insist on the genuine De Miracle and you will get the best hair remover ever offered the public. Be sure to buy De Miracle by name and you will avoid disappointment. Furthermore, you will get the only depilatory that contains a binding guarantee which entitles you to your money if it fails. In $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you buy a bottle at The Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner's six stores, or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. A-7, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.

ELITE STYLES says

"It is worthy of the highest praise." Genuine magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called endorsements of bogus magazines which are used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories.

North End Club Plans Vaudeville and Russian Tea.

By Hazel Whitaker.

MOST good enterprises end in a blaze of glory, and so it is with the women's clubs at this season; the chorus in each "is assembling for the hit of the year." Right in line is the North End club, of which Mrs. Charles Stearns is president, for it announces a society vaudeville and Russian tea by the art and literature class on Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. at the Wilson theater.

Mrs. Elwin Roser is general chairman and Mrs. Richard A. Connell chairman of the entertainment committee.

A truly gala conclusion this will be to a course of six lectures on art and literature that have been given during the year. As proof here is the program: Violin solo, John Ward Allen; vocal solos, Mrs. Andreas G. Wackenreiter and Miss Pearl Headford Williams; mandolin, Miss Ruth M. Dionne; character songs, Miss Christiane Marshall; basso, Herbert Cheetham; harp, Miss Edna W. Ballard; æsthetic club swinging, Mrs. Herman Sammers, accompanied by Ira Hamilton, Charles Siegman, and Adrian Sammers. Mrs. Medill McCormick of the National Congressional union will talk on "Suffrage."

The honorary guests are to be Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, who has been so active in child welfare work in Chicago; Mrs. Joseph K. Bowen, president of the Juvenile Protective association; Mrs. James W. Morrison, president of the Chicago Suffrage association, and the presidents of all federated clubs in the Tenth district.

The young ladies' auxiliary will act as ushers and the following women will pour: Mrs. George Watson, Mrs. Martin K. Northam, Mrs. Benjamin Severing, and Mrs. Harold Sperling, assisted by Mrs William H. Farrington, Mrs. Nathan B. Lewis, Mrs. Charles M. Aldridge, Mrs. William Westerlund, Mrs. John Holmes, Mrs. Edward Portman, Mrs. William F. Donahue, Mrs. Robert M. Babbitt, and Mrs. Emory G. Nonnash.

This club, which was organized in 1897, is therefore one of the oldest on the north side, and has a resident membership of 300. Its enterprises and aims are widespread, not least among them being its philanthropies, one of which is the maintaining of four scholarships for girls from homes where they would, otherwise, have had to become bread winners as soon as the law permitted.

The club has two exceedingly unique and ambitious undertakings to its credit, the Chautauqua week inaugurated last summer and which the club hopes to make an annual affair. Like most large clubs that have not yet attained "a home all their own," the North End women have as their rosy dream a clubhouse, so they are trying slowly to increase the nest egg without, in any way interfering with their regular philanthropies. The Chautauqua not only helped in this cause but afforded all north siders a vast amount of real pleasure and benefit.

The other is the North End Club Bulletin, published every two weeks by the co-editors, Mrs. W. E. Cloyes and Mrs. Kauffman Von Sicht. This contains full reports of all business transacted in the preceding weeks, committee lists, etc., and was paid for entirely by the advertising, which, by the way, was not restricted to local merchants.

The last meeting of the club year will be held at the Edgewater Country club on April 10, at which time the new officers will be elected and by-laws considered. A luncheon will conclude what the members feel has been an unusually successful year.

Miss Marion McDonald and Miss Mildred McDonald are twins who are active in the preparations for the dancing party of St. Mary's (Notre Dame) College club, which will be given in the gold room of the Congress hotel on Friday evening, April 28.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

The Chicago Woman's club will hold its regular literary meeting in Recital hall, Fine Arts building, on Wednesday at 2 p. m. The program, under the general subject of "Club Home," has been arranged by the building committee. Mrs. John H. Buckingham and Charles Wacker will report on a site; Mrs. Katherine Knowles Robbins and Irving Pond will report on plans, with stereopticon illustrations, and Mrs. Charles Guy Bolt will report on subscriptions. Three orchestra concerts are given every Sunday in Fullerton hall, Art Institute, the first at 3 o'clock, the second at 4:15, and the third, which is devoted to opera music, is at 8 in the evening. The reform department will have a department luncheon tomorrow noon. Miss Ethel De Long will speak on "A Far Corner in the Cumberlands." At the meeting of the study class in modern philosophy at 2:15 p. m. tomorrow, Prof. George H. Mead will speak on "Social Service in World Policies." The art and literary department will hold its monthly business meeting in the northeast parlor on Wednesday at 10:35 a. m. The philanthropy department will have a breakfast on Saturday at noon.

Theodore Hinckley of the University of Chicago will speak on "The Shakspeare Tercentenary" at the meetings of the Chicago Woman's Outdoor Art league on Tuesday at 12:30 p. m. in the rooms of the Chicago Woman's club.

Stonewall chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet on Thursday at 2 p. m. at the Great Northern hotel.

The Daughters of Indiana will hold their annual meeting on Tuesday at 1 p. m. at the Congress hotel.

Astonishing Invention!

Gives 60% More Tone Value

60% more tone value—60% more true, more real, more life-like. 60% more full, more round, pure and soft! A marvelous invention that has solved the one last phonographic problem.

At last it is possible to reproduce a record of any band, any orchestra, instrument or song actually as it was originally rendered—100% faithful—100% tone value—100% clear—an actual, living duplicate of the original. Never before with any phonograph has this wondrous achievement been possible! And the Pathephone genuine, smooth

Sapphire Ball Does It!

Every other machine loses actually 60% of the tone value and detail of a record. You hear it less than half as good as the artist originally rendered it. Because every other machine uses sharp-pointed needles and records with narrow V-shaped grooves. The pointed needle running in the narrow grooves has only one point of contact, and picks up only 40% of the record's tone value and detail. But the

Pathephone

Sapphire Ball, running in the wide arch-shaped grooves of Pathe records, has a direct, constant contact of 40 points. Thus 100%, instead of only 40%, of the delicate colors and overtones are picked up and carried to you. Each note is full, round, pure and soft—not thin, sharp, harsh and metallic. The Pathephone Sapphire Ball never needs changing. Our patented Tone Control permits any record to be played as loud or soft as you wish. Pathephones $15 to $[illegible]. Payments to suit you.

The Toy Shop was formally opened yesterday morning by Mrs. John Alden Carpenter in the Marshall & Fox studios, 706 Lincoln parkway. Hundreds of French dolls and toys made by disabled soldiers and destitute widows were placed on sale with a group of young women in charge of Mrs. John W. Root as saleswomen, among them being the Misses Lucy Arrick, Judith Mabbatt, Dorothy Keeley, Grace Tuttle, Elizabeth Hinde, Margaret Bentley, Sara Rozet Smith, Helen Pauling, Helen Hinde, Marie Louise Root, and Alice Buckingham, and Mesdames James B. Forgan Jr. and Chauncey J. Blair Jr. Mme. Charles Le Verrier, who has come from Paris to sell the toys and to raise funds for the continuance of the work shops there, is stopping at the Virginia hotel, where Mrs. Carpenter also has opened headquarters for information. Mrs. C. Morse Ely and George F. Porter are assisting Mrs. Carpenter on the executive committee. Mr. Porter is to display a number of French paintings, the product of stranded artists abroad, which he hopes to sell for the purpose of sending the money back to them. The Toy Shop is open to the public from 10 until 6 daily and there is no charge for admission. There is a small charge for tea which will be served at 4:30 daily. Mrs. William V. Chalmers will be tea hostess this afternoon, when the members of the French theater company will be guests of honor, and Tuesday Mrs. Edward S. Moore and Mrs. Honoré Palmer will preside. Tomorrow evening there will be a toy costume dance following the dinner at the Casino club. The dance will be held on the top floor of the Perry-Smith house.

The young society girls who formed the Lenten Service club this year are doing a vast amount of good work on Friday afternoons for the American Red Cross. They meet every Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. H. Scriven, working under the supervision of a trained nurse. At every meeting the groups change their work so that nobody does the same thing twice.

PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm D. Vail, who have been spending their honeymoon at Palm Beach, arrived in Chicago yesterday. Now Comes the Dollar Sale

Once every year, we turn the full power of this Spiegel organization over to the people of Chicago. We open our ledgers to personal credit so wide that a family doesn't need to have much more than a desire for a home in order to get it. We make thousands of new customers in this way, and we strengthen the friendship ties with thousands of old customers.

This Spiegel Buying Power and the Spiegel Credit System have been responsible for more comfort and more luxury in the homes of the people than any two other business methods of the last hundred years. Today, the family on $20 a week actually enjoys more comfort than the royal families of Europe three centuries ago.

BUYING POWER

We show you definitely on this page just how much cash is required for any purchase you care to make. We do not merely advertise easy terms. We advertise just how easy those terms are.

On this one page we show you seven articles that can be bought by you for $1.00 cash. We show you six other articles (two of them sets) that can be bought for $2.00 cash. And we give you the assurance that there are scores of other articles in the Spiegel four stores that can be bought on the same terms. You are welcome to any of these articles at these extremely low prices and upon these remarkable credit terms. This is the month of our Dollar Sale, and the sign on the door says "Welcome."

ART

by Louise James Bargelt

APRIL promises to be a decidedly interesting month at the Art institute, despite the idea prevalent that, with the approach of spring, interest in art and things artistic wanes considerably.

Of bizarre appeal is an oriental painting, "Bamboos in Wind and Rain," purchased recently. The artist, Wu Chen, of the Yuan dynasty, is considered one of the four great geniuses of that period, and this fantastic portrayal of bamboos in a driving tempest is an exquisite piece of work. It is in his bamboo paintings that Wu Chen excels, although he has done some exceptionally fine landscapes.

The charmingly decorative lines of the bamboo have made of it a frequent motif in both Chinese and Japanese art. There are some sixty varieties of it, according to eastern authorities, and about it hovers a thousand year old superstition. It is said to produce seeds with the magical power of supplying crops in times of famine, and is furthermore often cut in tortured, twisted shapes, that worshipers may wrest from the gods the desires and wishes of their hearts.

Lovers of Persian art and those interested in various examples of paintings from Persia and India will enjoy the collection of albums, or Mouraqqa, which have been loaned to the museum by Edward E. Ayer, the well known traveler and collector of oriental drawings, scrolls, calendars, and miniatures. There are some adorable illuminations of old European manuscripts. One, "Book of Hours," is daintily embellished with some 400 little birds, illuminated borders, and miniatures quaintly interesting to the uninitiated as well as to the learned person.

Nor is there any scarcity of exhibitions to come. This week, commencing April 6 and lasting until April 23, there is the twenty-ninth annual architectural exhibition. Increased emphasis is to be given to the already intimate relationship existing between architecture and the allied graphic and plastic arts. The exhibits accordingly are to show mural decorations, sculpture, and craftsmanship work, as well as the worth while architectural achievements of the day.

Owing to the fact that four organizations have combined forces on this exhibit, it is anticipated that it will be a most effective expression of work accomplished. The Architectural Society of Chicago has secured the coöperation of the Art institute, the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and the Illinois Society of Architects. Much is expected from this joint control.

Other exhibitions to follow this one are:

April 13 to April 20—An exhibition of Newark posters.

April 25 to May 7—The annual exhibition of the Art Students' league of Chicago; an exhibition by the members of the Palate and Chisel club, including sculpture, painting, and etching wood block prints, and a special exhibition of sculpture by Stanislaus Szukalski.

May 11 to June 7—Annual exhibition of American water colors and pastels and miniatures, including the rotary exhibition of the American Water Color society, and a special exhibit of paintings by William Ritschel.

Grace Revelin, a former student of the Art institute, has had the signal honor of having one of her pictures bought by the French government for the Luxembourg gallery. One of the miniatures of Martha Baker of Chicago also has a place there. Janet Scudder, another former student of the institute, has received a medal from the French government for a work of hers.

An exhibition of paintings by modern French artists is to be held from April [illegible] to 12 at Lincoln parkway and Huron street. The entire proceeds from this exhibit are to go to the "families of destitute French artists' fund."

Exhibitions at the galleries this week:

From March 25 to April 10 is an exhibition of original drawings and etchings by Joseph Pennell, showing "London in Wartime," at Albert Roullier's art galleries.

Marden's Spanish Olive Oil

The Oil With the True Olive Flavor

We have been importing this oil for years for a little circle of epicures—personal friends, the chefs of some famous hotels—just a few particular people whom no other oil, after this, would suit. And because these few liked "Marden's" so well we decided to offer it to the American public—the Nation of Epicures.

Now, your dealer can supply you with MARDEN'S SPANISH OLIVE OIL, straight from the groves of sunny Spain, the greatest oil producing country in the world—real virgin oil, the first pressing of the finest fruit that grows; oil with the true olive flavor. If you appreciate a good salad; if you realize the value of fine olive oil as food; especially if other oils do not please you; make the acquaintance of Marden's.

Approved by Harvey W. Wiley, Director of Good Housekeeping, Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health.

Approved by Prof. Lewis B. Allyn as conforming with the Westfield Pure Food Standard.

NEW YORK SOCIETY.

Smart Set Ready to Flock Again to Gala Newport.

By Mme. Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—Most of the activities of New Yorkers are taking place outside of New York. As some one said, smart people are having their fling in the south with one hand while making their plans for the summer with the other. The cold weather has made an extended stay in the south pleasant. Indeed, the registers in high class hotels of Aiken, Palm Beach, and Hot Springs read like the chronicle of the opening of a season. New arrivals as they alight from their private cars announce to friends already assembled that we of New York are now planning some ice skating parties for July and are organizing a winter sport club for the summer. However this may be, the cold winter and the late date of Lent this year enables the overworked financier to pass Easter with his family in the fashionable strongholds of the south.

From such protected positions, where the winter winds of April cannot get them, the polite world is mentioning that this season will be "pioneer year" at Newport. Those who have forsaken the summer capital for seasons past will spend at least July and August there. The current prediction of several years ago that Newport was on the brink of becoming unpopular was a mistake. Residences, many of them, were unoccupied for season after season, and they looked decidedly run down at the heel. But one by one they have regained the attention of their owners and are being repaired. Some owners are planning to live in their places themselves, others are renting, and one man has gone so far as to sell.

You may remember that I mentioned some time ago that only one real estate transfer had taken place in Newport among the summer colony for many years. Perry Belmont bought the combination residence and stable on the Ocean drive of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont that had belonged to her late husband and had never been occupied by her since his death. Now another transfer is recorded. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Whitehouse will reutrn this year as landowners. They bought a big place on the Ocean drive near the lifesaving station and overlooking the sea.

Big Year at Newport.

Harry Payne Whitney, who has found the place far and away too unexciting previously, has now sent up an order for a $20,000 ballroom to be added to his villa on Bellevue avenue. He and Mrs. Whitney plan to pass their season there. Heretofore for many years they have been content with a few weeks passed with Mrs. Vanderbilt, head of the house and mother of Mrs. Whitney, at the Breakers. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt are said to be negotiating for the purchase of a place. Mrs. Seth Barton French, another absentee for many seasons, comes to Newport this year with her daughter, Miss Clarice French, who is to be presented next summer.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman of New York will go to Newoprt for the first time. She has taken a cottage for the season. Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, who has been away from Newport for the last two seasons, will be in her place in Hallidon Hill. You will remember that she has for some time past been in the Philippines on missionary work. She will not return there at present. Mrs. James Haggin, one of the richest widows in society, will occupy the Haggin estate this year. She has not been in Newport before for two seasons.

I have mentioned several times lately the rage for private cars and for extending hospitality to a large party of people by taking them on a little trip to Palm Beach or California. Sometimes as many are transported for a month's entertainment, all bills paid, as the late Mrs. Astor and other celebrated entertainers invited to a ball for a few hours. These women were deemed the extravagant hostesses of their day. I think that even the richest of them would have thrown up their hands at the idea of actually boarding their guests and racing them around the country for a month. But what I had in mind to mention now was the cost of a private car.

For a man and his wife to go down in a private car from New York to Palm Beach costs for transportation something like $1,600. That is for the mere run. While the car remains on a siding the owner must pay a flat sum of $50 a day to keep it there. Of course, he has private servants in charge of it, and their board and salaries are also expensive at places like Palm Beach. These expenditures apparently to some, however, represented merely incidental sums, for they keep their cars there for weeks, thinking nothing about the extravagance, and never using them, except sometimes as the settling for a little entertainment. They give dinner parties on them once in a while.

You Can Tell Two Million People Through The Sunday Tribune

MORE than 650,000 copies of The Tribune were sold last Sunday. Each Tribune is read by an average of at least three people—making a total of about two million readers.

For $700 you could have bought the entire back page of the Rotogravure Section—the beautiful pictorial feature which every Tribune reader is certain to notice every Sunday.

To appreciate how cheap this advertising is, figure the cost of doing it by mail. Postage alone on a postal card to two million people would be $20,000, and there would be the additional cost of printing and addressing. Yet you could not say as much on the postal—nor could you make it as attractive or as impressive as the rotogravure page.

Since Tribune advertising is so efficient yet so reasonable in price, it is no wonder that The Tribune last Sunday carried 29 columns more advertising than the other two Sunday papers combined.

APRIL

Spring.

FAIR and warmer. A day of mild sunshine; frost leaving the ground; soft under foot; trickles of water down the hillsides; stubborn patches of snow and ice in the sheltered hollows. Cold winds. Raw out of the east: an hour's work splitting logs; a flurry of snow; clear sunset and a half hour of the Aurora; a clear night sky; Arcturus promising hepaticas.

Snow. A drive of it over night, three inches on the ground; trees covered; shrubbery encased; all outdoors white, sparkling in the sunlight; a downy woodpecker at the suet box; a chickadee absurdly springlike in the wych hazel. Warmer.

Rain. A steady fall of it, emphasized by a wind driven downpour; swollen streams; brown earth emerging again from the snow, soggy and washed out in gullies. Colder. A quick drop in the temperature catching the dripping trees and shrubs and casing them in ice; a high wind, breaking down the dead wood and the weak branches; all outdoors swaying, creaking, snapping.

Fair and warmer. A miracle of transformation, a dramatic raising of the curtain; fields alive with robins, melodious with meadow larks; blue birds on the fence posts; red wing blackbirds in the marshes; fox sparrows in the underbrush; a sudden, theatric demonstration; an entrance with the element of surprise; soft wind from the south; the ponderable presence of spring, embodied, visible, appealing to the senses, comes with warmth and fresh odors, song and promise of permanence.

Colder.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

Brilliant Ball Given to Aid the Red Cross.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Red Cross ball at Rauscher's on Wednesday evening and the bag sale that preceded it on Wednesday afternoon was certainly the event in which society was most largely interested. The affair was for the benefit of the American Red Cross "preparedness," to care for our own sick and wounded "in case of trouble."

The ball of the evening was, of course, the more brilliant end of the affair, but really the bag sale of the afternoon seemed almost more interesting. Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Clark, the former "functioning," as the army men say, for the moment as a congressional wife of the president of the senate, rather than as one of the cabinet women, rallied the congressional women to the supplying of a marvelous table of miscellaneous bags. Mrs. Edward White led the Supreme court and judiciary circle in collecting and constructing workbags of every imaginable description.

The cabinet women, headed, of course, by Mrs. Lansing, undertook to furnish the travelers' bags, and you wouldn't have dreamed it was possible to ring so many changes on that theme. Mrs. Hugh Scott, Mrs. Josephus Daniels, and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt assembled the "service" bags at a booth to which the army and navy women of the entire country were proud to contribute.

Even admitting that Miss Boardman is a host in herself when she starts out to do anything, and that her general committee, including Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. Richard Townsend, Mrs. Robert Patterson, Mrs. E. H. G. Slater, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, and Mrs. F. A. Keep, are individually, and severally hosts in themselves and that they have been at work on this thing for several months, one still marveled at that array of bags, and at the wonderfully attractive decorations and display.

Bag Featured in Dances.

The bag idea was carried right through into the evening and the feature dances which were the feature of the ball. There was a bag dance featuring Miss Gladys Ingalls and Miss Frances Hoar, and a Bagdad dance, with Miss Frances Hoar as solo dancer, assisted by the Misses Frances Williams, Eleanora Morgan, Frances Moore, Helen Wolcott, and Elizabeth Harding, and Mrs. William A. Slater Jr.; a bagpipe dance by Miss Katherine McClintock, Miss Cora Barry, Miss Carolyn Ogden-Jones, and Mrs. Newbold Noyes; and a divertissement dubbed "The Bag. What's In It?" which included a pas seul by Manuela de Pena.

The only feature of the evening in which the bag was omitted was the lovely minuet repeated by request with the same graceful dancers as at the Beaux Arts ball. Among these was Miss Laura Delano, perfectly charming as a pink French marquise of the Louis XV. period; Miss Grynga Raybaud, Miss Carolyn Nash, and Miss Evelina Gleaves, their partners being Morris Volok, Lieut. Edwin Watson, Alva Bernhard, and Montgomery Angell.

The program of feature dances was scheduled for 10 o'clock out of courtesy to the president and Mrs. Wilson, who had taken a box and thought that the time they were surest to be in it. They had with them Col. and Mrs. E. T. Brown of Atlanta, and Miss Marjorie Brown, who are guests at the White House; Miss Bolling, Miss Bones, and Miss Margaret Wilson. The other boxholders were Mrs. Norman Williams, William A. Slater, and Mrs. Richard Townsend, all of whom brought guests whom they had been entertaining at dinner.

Dinner for the Manns.

Most of the other dinner parties of the evening wound up at the ball, quite the biggest and most brilliant of these being one given by Representative and Mrs Dunn of New York in honor of Representative and Mrs. Mann. It was one of the most elaborate dinners of the season, given in the red room of the Willard, with about sixty guests, and a most beautiful and elaborate scheme of decoration.

One doesn't wish to be cynical, nor to depreciate the real popularity of people like the Manns and the Hugheses, but one cannot fail in a presidential year to notice how much befeted and befeated possible presidential candidates are. Four years ago it was the Champ Clarks who were the center of the social whirl, no one in Washington doubting that the speaker would be the Democratic nominee. Now—well, don't let's be personal, but one can't help smiling, even as Genevieve Clark smiled four years ago, quite tolerantly, at the amount of entertaining that is being done in honor of even the darkest of the possible dark horses.

There were two other charity affairs, one on Thursday, also a dance and also at Rauscher's, for an association for industrial education in the mountains of Virginia, an association of which Mrs. Wilson is honorary chairman, and in which she is actively interested, and a dance and card party on Saturday night for the benefit of the philanthropic work of All Souls' church. Mrs. Frederic Delano was one of the women actively interested in the latter affair.

The Delanos ase not terribly interested in society as such, apparently not half as much as society is interested in them. The two girls have made no formal debut, but are constantly in demand. They are good looking, with plenty of brains, and they certainly do have good clothes and know how to wear them. Louise, the elder, was at the tea table at Mrs. Richard Crane's last Monday when Mrs. Crane was at home, informally, as she will be next Monday.

Another girl from Illinois who has made a warm place for herself in Washington without particularly going out for it, is Miss Virginia Le Seure. She has been entertaining as her home guest Miss Rosetta Samuel of Danville, who was the honor guest at Miss Le Seure's supper party Friday night of last week, preliminary to the Friday evening dancing class meeting. This week Miss Miriam Oakes of New York is also Miss Le Seure's guest. She arrived on Friday, and so this Friday's supper party—they seem to have developed into a weekly stunt with Uncle Joe's little granddaughter—was given in honor of Miss Oakes.

35 inch Faille Francaise

One of the very popular weaves, fine heavy cord, just what you want for your Easter suit and coat, black and colors, street shades, special at, yard...................... 1.48

Again resounds the call of the April Sale of Silks, again the great majority of women of Chicago who are planning to buy silks for Easter gowns are awaiting this famous Annual Sale—again we can, in the face of almost insurmountable trade conditions, point with more than pardonable pride to the vast assemblage of silks ready for you to choose from—more silks than we have ever had before, larger varieties than we have ever had before, greater values than we have ever had before—three very strong statements, but three statements that we can satisfy every one, after even the most cursory inspection, are justified. Whoever demands good silks, standard silks, silks that are dependable and fine, will appreciate the April Sale. The tremendous volume of the silk business of this great Store and the fact that we buy and sell strictly for cash enables us to plan on a scale possible at no other store in America—that is why the foremost importers, mills and converters strive for our favor—that is why we always have ample stocks of the newest weaves and colorings, as well as the staple sorts, whenever you want them. Judge for yourself how helpful the April Sale is from the few items it is possible to quote here.—(Main Floor and Basement—State Street.)

The Annual April Sale of Corsets

—Third Floor—Center—

Our Corset Store has been called by thousands of women, as well as by any number of physicians, "a department of health and instruction." We insist that all of our corsetieres knows where every organ in the body over which she is going to place a corset is located, also the location of the important nerves and blood vessels, which of the vital organs require room and freedom of action and which require support, and that she fit corsets accordingly. This is what we call hygienic service. It is at your disposal without a penny to pay for it. During the April Sale we aim to impress the real importance of proper corseting and the importance of the proper corset for your individual figure. In the wide diversity of styles we carry there is a model that is the correct one for your figure. The first corsets we shall tell you of are

The Famous "Nemo Corsets" for Stout, Medium and Slender Figures

How many women know that Nemo Self-Reducing corsets and Nemo Self Help Wonderlift corsets provide two distinct kinds of hygienic service—each has its own function and renders a service quite different from the other, neither takes the other's place. Nemo Self Reducing corsets are made exclusively for stout women; their function is to reshape and reduce full figures. Nemo Wonderlift corsets are made for women of every figure.

Style No. 567, for example, is designed for the slender even emaciated form, with concave abdomen, while No. 998 takes care of the very large figures with heavy, pendulous abdomen. Between these two extremes are models for all the intervening types.

The mission of the Nemo Wonderlift Corset is to do the work of weakened abdominal muscles, uplifting and supporting the vital organs. This support acts as a tonic to the entire system by relieving pressure and strain on the nerves and nerve centers. It also aids the digestive processes by preventing ptosis (falling) of the stomach and liver. Why will you purchase your corset in an indifferent manner, when you can have the service of one of our trained corsetieres, who has carefully studied the different models and knows how to choose the exact model for your individual requirements and fit and adjust it perfectly, giving you comfort, style and health, and without extra charge?

Big Attendance Planned Today in All Churches.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

TODAY is go to church Sunday. It is expected that the 1,400 churches of all denominations will be filled with worshipers. Two years ago a systematic campaign of publicity was carried on from a central headquarters in Association building in promotion of the first general go to church day in Chicago. At present more churches are engaged in special meetings than at any previous time and each church is devising plans of its own to secure the attendance of its membership and of all who are in its congregation. The Chicago Church federation has through its secretary, the Rev. W. B. Millard, received pledges from nearly all of the coöperating churches that the day would be observed.

The Holy Name society, which Archbishop Mundelein characterized as the most important of the societies of the Catholic church, has entered on a period of special activity since the archbishop's unqualified indorsement. Each parish has been requested to send to the secretary of the society not later than April 15 the names of a committee of five who are to advance the work in the parish. The committeemen are to become big brothers to the boys of the parish and especially those who are found to be drifting away from parental and church obedience. It is intended that the Holy Name society will do in a spiritual way what the St. Vincent de Paul society does in a physical way for either the neglected of the wayward. The Holy Name society is a national organization having as its object the suppression of profanity, vulgarity, and obscenity and all irreverent uses of the Holy Name and the cultivation of a more zealous devotion to attendance upon the holy communion. The officers of the archdiocese are: The Rev. F. J. Haarth, spiritual director; A. J. Shevlin, president; C. J. Crane, first vice president; J. S. Quinn, second vice president; M. Sarsfield, treasurer; J. J. Enright, recording secretary; E. S. Wolford, corresponding secretary; J. J. Gubbins, financial secretary; J. Rogers, marshal; J. R. Ford, chairman of the executive committee.

An offering for the suffering people of Poland will be taken up in all of the Catholic churches today. It is said 20,000,000 are affected by the conditions brought on by the European war. Pope Benedict XV., the bishops of Poland, and Archbishop Mundelein united in making the appeal for liberal contributions.

Gen. Ballington Booth, founder of the Volunteers of America, a commander-in-chief, with a staff of over 500 commanding officers stationed in 100 cities, will speak at 8 o'clock at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall. His subject will be "The Man with the Second Chance."

President Clifford W. Barnes, who has returned from an extended absence in California, will preside, and also resume charge of his Bible class at the early meeting of the club. Claude C. Hopkins, president of the Lord & Thomas company, will serve as Scripture reader, and Maj. Gen. Edward Fielding, vice president of the Volunteers, with headquarters in Chicago, will also take part in the program.

As the son of the late Gen. William Booth of England, founder of the Salvation Army, Gen. Ballington Booth came into his present work naturally. For some years he was associated with his father in England, then served as commander of the army in Australia, and finally in the United States. In 1896 he withdrew to establish the Volunteers. Mrs. Booth, better known as Maud Ballington Booth, has aided in her husband's work, and in addition has made a name for herself by devoted service in behalf of convicts.

Gen. Booth is widely known as a writer of gospel songs. Among them are "The Cross Is not Greater than His Grace," "You've Carried Your Burden," and "Over and Over like a Mighty Sea." Gen. Booth will also address the Pennsylvania society tomorrow. Yesterday he was a guest of honor at a luncheon at the Blackstone hotel, given by Fred A. Poor and other business men interested in the work of the Volunteers.

A Methodist Episcopal church is to be built in Lamanda, Cal., to be called the Morton Culver Hartzell Memorial church. The Rev. Mr. Hartzell, who died Feb. 17, was well known in Chicago, by reason of having held two pastorates here and because of his activity as a crusader against vice. At Lamanda, Cal., he raised $10,000 for the purchase of the lots on which the new church will be erected. The church was the last pastorate held by him before his decease.

Preliminary programs of the interdenominational Bible conference at Winona Lake, Ind., Aug. 25 to Sept. 3, include among the speakers William Jennings Bryan, the Rev. John McNeill, Bishop W. A. Quayle, the Rev. George W. Truett, the Rev. Paul Rader, the Rev. Matt S Hughes, Maude Ballington Booth, Prof. Edward A. Steiner, the Rev. E. L. (Fighting Parson) Williams, and Daniel Poling. The Rev. S. C. Dickey is director of the Bible conference. An interdenominational missionary conference will be held at Winona June 23-30. Mrs. C. W. Peterson of 10903 South Hoyne avenue is chairman of the publicity committee and will furnish programs to those who inquire.

The Rev. John H. Carsten, pastor of the La Grange Baptist church, will terminate his pastorate on April 30. Dr. Carsten has been pastor at La Grange for more than five years.

The Rev. David A. Davy, pastor of the Unity Evangelical Lutheran church, Balmoral and Magnolia avenues, will celebrate today at 10:45 the tenth year of his pastorate. His sermon will not deal in reminiscences so much as in the future. His subject will be "Do It Now." The congregation will begin the erection of a new church this spring.

The Rev. William Chalmers Covert, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, is delivering a series of five Lenten lectures at the homes of his parishioners. Next Tuesday at 2:30 the lecture will be at the residence of Mrs. Philo A. Otis, 1709 Prairie avenue, on the subject, "Deborah, a Study in Womanhood and Public Service." Other meetings will be: April 11, Mrs. Henry M. Curtis, 4943 Blackstone avenue; April 18, Mrs. W. M. Derby, 4857 Kimbark avenue, and April 25, Mrs. L. J. Lamson, 3720 Grand boulevard.

The Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church will be the speaker at the Baptist Social union banquet Tuesday evening at the Hotel La Salle. His subject will be "National Preparedness." This will be the final banquet of the Baptist Social union for the season.

The Rev. Philip Yarrow is pastor of the Morgan Park Congregational church, which today begin a series of dedication services of its new edifice at South Hoyne avenue and One Hundred and Twelfth street. President Ozoro S. Davis of the Chicago Theological seminary will preach at 10:30, the Rev. John Gardner of the New England Congregational church at 3, and the Rev. A. N. Hitchcock and the Rev. E. A. Yarrow, brother of the pastor, at 7:45.

Wednesday evening, April 12, there will be a presentation of the frieze of the childhood of Jesus and the opening of Pilgrim hall. The frieze contains nine pictures and is the work of Wilfred Bronson.

On Palm Sunday the pastor will speak in connection with the presentation of eight memorial windows. The Clarke window is a memorial to Col. and Mrs. George R. Clarke, founders of the Pacific Garden mission. A mother's window is another memorial. The Rev. F. W. Gunsaulus, the Rev. W. B. Millard, the Rev Henry F. Cope, and the Rev. W. T. McElveen are among the dedication speakers.

Tomorrow the Congregational ministers of the Chicago association will meet at the church for an all day session. The Morgan Park church is called "the Church of the Open Door." It is located on the highest point of ground inside the Chicago city limits.

Dr. Yarrow is president of the Chicago Young People's Civic league and was, before becoming pastor at Morgan Park, the assistant secretary of the Congregational City Mission society.

The Chicago Methodist Social union will hold its closing banquet for the season on Tuesday evening, April 25. The speaker will be Bishop W. S. Lewis of China, who has returned to the United States in order to be present at the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which meets in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., May 1. Bishop Lewis believes the United States has more influence than any other nation in the shaping of the destiny of China.

The noonday Lenten meetings at the Majestic theater under the auspices of the Protestant Episcopal church will be addressed this week by the Rev. T. W. Powell, D. D., rector of Trinity church, Toronto, Canada. The meetings begin at 12:10 and close at 12:30.

While the 300th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrim fathers at Plymouth, Mass., is four years ahead, the Congregationalists are preparing to give the event a national observance. An addition of 500,000 new members, a missionary offering of $2,000,000 a year, and a permanent endowment fund of $3,000,000, the income of which will be for the pensioning of aged ministers, are the goals aimed at by 1920. President D. J. Cowling of Carleton college, Minnesota, is chairman of the tercentenary commission having the program in charge. Chicago members of the commission are the Rev. Ozora S. Davis, the Rev. W. W. Newell, and Frank Kimball. The Rev. Hubert C. Herring of Boston, secretary of the national council, is executive secretary of the commission.

The general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church will be held next October in St. Louis, Mo. The Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips, formerly of Chicago, is chairman of the executive committee.

The tercentenary of the death of Shakspeare is to be recognized by a service on Easter in the cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, by the Actors' Church alliance. The hope is expressed in the Church and Stage, a quarterly paper, issued by the alliance, that the chaplains of the alliance throughout the United States will recognize the event in some way. In a report issued by the alliance it is stated that among the benefits of the alliance have been the ministration to thousands of actors in times of sickness and sorrow, the securing of one day's rest in seven in many instances, and the education of the public to make the demand for a rest day where it is not granted by the theater management, and the creation of a better understanding between the actors and the churches, so that actors are not indiscriminately condemned because of their profession independent of their individual characters.

ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

THE APRIL SKY AT 8 O'CLOCK TONIGHT

April Skies.

FOR the person who looks at the heavens at night with the same rewarded interest that phenomena by day are observed, the April skies are the finest of the year. They present nearly all the objects to which sentiment is attached. Early in the evening the summer stars have arisen. The winter stars have not set.

In the west are Capella, the Pleiades, Aldebaran; to the south and west, Orion with Rigel and Betelgeux, the belt and the misty, nebulous sword, Sirius, the great winter star, Procion its follower, and the Twins, Castor and Pollux.

They are the portents of the passing season, the stars that will be in the east again when the bird migration now going north has returned and gone south, when the leaves now in bud on the maples are on the ground.

To the east, about as far east from meridian as the great Sirius is west of it, at 8 o'clock tonight for which time the above star map is set, is Regulus, farther east of Denebola, and then, nearer the horizon the coming summer stars, Arcturus, off beyond the curved line of the handle of the big dipper and Spica, farther along that same projected curved line.

By 9 o'clock tonight Vega has arisen, and then the three brilliants of summer are in sight, Arcturus, Spica, and Vega.

Vega can be located by drawing a line through the pointers of the big dipper to the pole star, and then at right angles towards the east. Vega was once the pole star. It will be again when the sweep of the earth's axis, called the precession, requiring nearly 26,000 years, has completed its circle.

Venus, Saturn, and Mars are visible in the evening sky.

What interests the ordinary and unskilled observer in the April sky is that it is the spectacle of change. It represents the shifting scene and the succession of seasons. It is as if hepaticas were blooming at the east side of the woods where there were song sparrows and thrush, and as if the late golden rod were on the west side where the juncoes had come.

You Can Do the Same!

Here is a concrete example of what can be done by the woman who makes up her mind to reduce. Miss Antoinette Donnelly, beauty editor of "The Tribune," on Feb. 1, 1916, took in hand a model, Mrs. Eva Lane of Chicago, who weighed at that time 204½ pounds, and under the medical supervision and instructions of Dr. Lena K. Sadler of the Chicago Institute of Physiologic Therapeutics, in six weeks to a day Mrs. Lane was reduced to 168½ pounds—a loss of 36 pounds—6 pounds a week. As is shown in the accompanying cuts, in this reduction Mrs. Lane came down from a 37¼ inch waist to a 30 inch waist, from hips of 49 inches to hips of 41 inches, from a 43 inch bust to a 38 inch bust, and she lost an inch from each of her ankles, too.

As Mrs. Lane Did, So You Can Do!

In the work of reducing Mrs. Lane no gymnasium apparatus was used. No exercise was given her nor practiced by her that could not be done by any woman in any home in America.

During the first week Mrs. Lane reduced more than during any later week, which is a characteristic, says Miss Donnelly, common to flesh reduction.

Miss Donnelly, beginning next Sunday, will tell, from week to week, the methods used each successive week as Mrs. Lane shed her superfluous avoirdupois. The greatest burden of fat, as is the case with almost every obese woman, was upon Mrs. Lane's waist, hips, and abdomen. The program followed out the first week, with these anatomical parts as the first points of attack, resulted in a loss of 8 pounds. The program is detailed in full by Miss Donnelly in the Hints Section of exists this season among our patrons over the wonderfully attractive styles we are showing for women to wear. In growing from a small specialty shop to the greatest specialty house in the world, we have had many seasons where we made phenomenal gains, but never before have we hit the chord of popular favor so clearly on beautiful things for women to wear as this season. While this is especially true in the departments of Suits, Coats, Millinery, Dresses, Blouses, etc., it is also true in all other departments, especially in clever imported accessories and things Oriental.

The Greatest Enthusiasm We Have Ever Seen

The Spring Coats

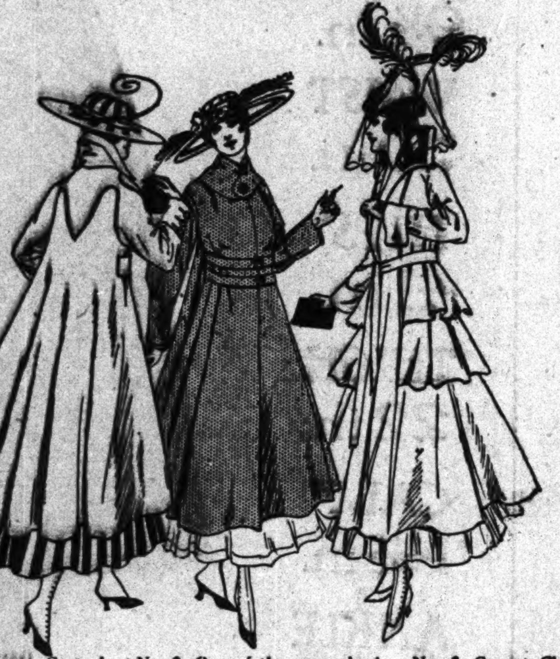
FOR women are even lovelier and more universally becoming than those of previous seasons—for Paris has breathed an artistic touch into every model she has sent out. Such latitude for beauty of design is made possible by the unusual fullness of the silhouette that is now the vogue. Then, too, the new materials are such as to give themselves most gracefully to the loose hanging folds.



No. 1—Smart Street Coat of covert cloth—piping on buttonholes and lining of changeable taffeta. Price $35.00.

No. 2—One of the season's best models, developed in gabardine, with smoked pearl buttons. Price $39.50.

No. 3—Covert Cloth Coat, with collar and lining of plaid taffeta. A new feature is the "shoe string" belt. Price $50.00.

Fashion's Guide Posts

Cunning little Bags to carry with spring dresses are of gayly striped silk poplin—some drawn up on a silk cord with tassels; others set on a frame. They are fitted with mirrors and change purses.

"There is nothing new under the sun," is the old saying. In flat contradiction to this is a Cape Collar of organdy, with a dainty pattern stamped in French blue and edged with tinsel braid.

Capricious as the wind in its choice of trimmings—a new Russian Blouse of Georgette crepe is wool embroidered and has an underbodice and wide sash of satin.

A new Chemise that is positively irresistible is of chiffon cloth, accordion pleated, mounted on a lace yoke and held in place by ribbon shoulder straps. With it are worn accordion plaited knickers made to match.

One strand of pearls around the head—one over the top—the two held in place by an ornament of silver set with French rhinestones—this is "Cleopatra," the newest idea in hair ornaments.

A really, truly old-fashioned Fichu is of net, hand-embroidered and with a tiny lace edging.

The "Pullman" Pajamas, of pink crepe de chine, all in one, like a child's sleeping garment, and bound at the collar and cuffs with white, are especially good for traveling.

"Fantassin," by Jenny, is the original of this dainty Blouse of satin, with a yoke and upper sleeves made in sunburst effect, and a Georgette vestee and collar edged with cloth of gold.

Assuredly a clever idea for sports wear is the four-piece set—consisting of a hat, collar, cuffs, and wide sash of striped silk, in robin's egg blue. The hat is made with a square brim, faced in white.

The Spring Dresses

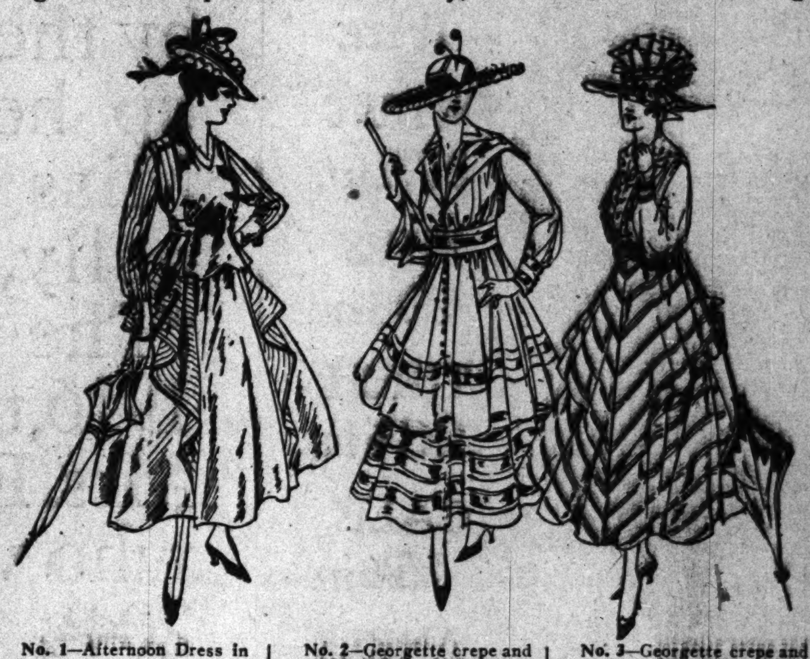
INSPIRED by the Spanish and Louis Seize influence—are picturesque in their graceful, pretty designs.

Contrary to ideas gained through fashion reports from style centers, the sensible thoughts of the master designers rule the later collections. Truly, the inspirations from the various early periods are apparent in the new modes, but, nevertheless, women are assured through care in selection that the majority of styles, though possessing features of quaintness and beauty, are wearable and becoming.



No. 1—Afternoon Dress in combination of plain and striped taffeta. There is a bit of white georgette crepe at the neck. Price $25.00.

No. 2—Georgette crepe and striped taffeta, attractively combined. Has collar and vestee of embroidered georgette crepe and novelty buttons. Price $35.00.

No. 3—Georgette crepe and striped taffeta Dress. Front of waist is embroidered and there is a collar and vestee of net lace. Price $25.00.

Youthful Misses' Modes, Suits, Coats and Dresses

THE Miss of today demonstrates the fact that a checked or navy blue is the smartest of all suits.

A gathering of the choicest models, copies of imports and adaptations from designers of youthful fashions will be especially displayed during the coming April days. $35.00, $39.50, $45.00, $50.00, $55.00 and upwards. Copies from Lanvin, Jenny, Doeuillet, Premet, Brandt, Paquin and Bradley. Also a strong assortment of these extremely chic, clever models at $15.00, $18.50, $22.50, $25 and $29.50.

Dainty New Silk Blouses

THERE is always room in every woman's wardrobe for an extra blouse or two—especially at this time, when new ones are needed for the spring suit and for sport wear. We have an exceptional assortment of spring styles in a variety of materials and colorings. There are georgette crepes, crepe de chines, striped silk sport waists, embroidered net and lace waists—the list is almost endless.

These are priced $5, $6.50, $8.50, $10, $15, and up.

$5 $5 $5

Hundreds of charming new blouses, in all the new materials, in white and pastel colorings—especially priced at $5.00.

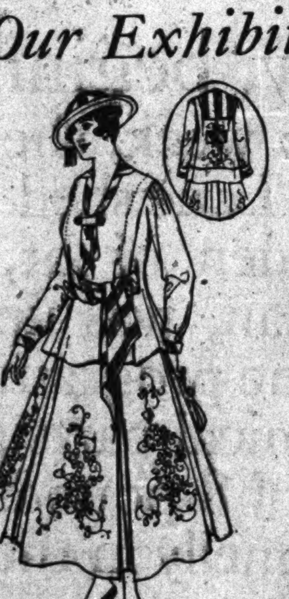
Our Exhibition and Sale of Fine Hand-Embroidered Silks and Silk Articles

from the Orient which opened last Wednesday morning has aroused a genuine enthusiasm and is pronounced by all who have seen it the most marvelous collection of really fine embroidered silks and silk articles they have ever seen. It is all rich and elegant, new, fresh merchandise and is being sold at only 40c to 50c on the dollar, otherwise we would not have been bold enough to purchase two carloads of it.



This Robe unmade contains ten yards of genuine Oriental cotton crepe which ordinarily sells in the plain fabric at about 50c per yard. The ten-yard pattern, hand embroidered, is only $2.95. The above illustration shows one of many pretty ways that this robe may be made up.

The Hon. Y. F. Lai, who is considered one of the greatest authorities in the world on Oriental silks and embroideries, pronounces this the finest collection that he has ever seen. The silks were especially selected and the embroidering especially done by the very best workers in the Orient for the purpose of making a wonderful exhibit at the great Pan-American Exposition. Now that you can get these rare pieces at 50c on the dollar it is an opportunity to be appreciated. There are thousands and thousands of pieces of

Mr. Sothern Pays His Score and Prepares to Depart.

By Percy Hammond.

It is ungracious to say in paraphrase that nothing in Mr. Sothern's career becomes him like the manner of his leaving it, yet many falser if pleasanter things have been remarked of actors in this long, wide column. He unspheres himself amiably and with dignity to the sound of neither dirge nor pealing anthem, and one feels that he modestly regards his passing as a minor episode in the annals of the stage. His exit obviously is sincere and permanent; he will not return. Rich, honest, weary, and unregretful he seeks the spaces where the pleasant shadows bide, bearing with him Miss Julia Marlowe, who has not, by the way, thought it worth while to say good-by. She, too, is tired.

I suspect that Mr. Sothern has no superstitions concerning the amount of sentiment surrounding his retirement. "Some griefs are medicinable," and none more so than that accompanying the farewell of an American actor. The public of the United States (in one respect) are like Mr. Max Beerbohm; they care little for the theater unless there is a good entertainment in it, and for its history and its people nothing at all. This absence of personal feeling perhaps is more marked in the case of Mr. Sothern than in that of other players, because he has seemed to be so utterly indifferent to it. You may recall how in his Shakspearean days he coldly reared his starry front between the acts, aloof, patronizing, and suggesting a contemptuousness which, of course, he did not feel. He appeared chill and superior, in an attitude which, I think, bred little affection for him among his audiences. Mr. Mansfield was a Bill Sikes to them; he beat them and they liked it. Other eminences have ranged in their public pose from the obsequious to the merely gracious, but Mr. Sothern was sheerly indifferent; and so he is an object of admiration rather than of love.

That bauble he sensibly spurns, though its possession would not cause his wage to be excessive for the duty he has performed. No matter what treasure he takes with him to England, he has earned it. "He parted well, and paid his score; and so God be with him." As our leading conservator of Shakspeare he gave us himself and the fine Miss Marlowe in studious if not scholarly presentations, marked by the skillful mediocrity demanded by the majority of those who like to see Shakspeare on the stage. He was not commonplace in the characters, for there was usually a conservative filip added to tradition. The productions were suave, gaudy, and effective, the right results of practical contemplation. He carried the torch comfortably and with serenity and he will be recalled, if not remembered, as the Shakspearean actor of his generation. However, if it does not disturb such decorous revelry as may be proceeding in the Shakspeare death tercentenary, one may note among the Sothern achievements a blasphemous preference for "If I Were King." Which songful romance, to my way of thinking, is the finest thing that Mr. Sothern ever did for the theater.

Meantime Mr. Sothern sharpens the pangs of parting by his delectable deportment in "The Two Virtues" at the Blackstone. Engaged in the genial, fluent, and humorous ironies of a sentimental student, most gracefully verbalized by Alfred Sutro, he makes us selfishly loath to let him go. There you will see him, rich, good looking, not too much troubled, bright, whimsical, and in love with Miss Alexandra Carlisle, whose charm equips that emotion with inevitability. The obstacles separating him from his heart's desire are comfortable, though not trivial, and they are gayly hurdled. Now and then you may think that Mr. Sothern's impersonation is a sort of pageant of previous rôles from Romeo to Dundreary; and that suggested epitome may enhance your pleasure in the performance. Mr. Sothern has been silent thus far in his adieus, but it is promised that on Saturday night he will break the stillness and make a speech.

As Mr. Sothern goes he meets Miss Julia Arthur coming back. Miss Arthur abandoned us nearly a score of years ago for the joys of domesticity in Boston, where, ever since, as the wife of Mr. Benjamin P. Cheney, she has been eminent in fostering what are known as the higher dramatic activities. So essential is she to the practice of dramatic culture in that center that the mayor of it, Mr. Curley, summons her to return on April 23 to speak the initial words of the city's celebration of Shakspeare's death. The event will occur before Miss Arthur's engagement at the Grand is finished, but her managers, the Messrs. Selwyn, have arranged for her to attend. That she may do so they will import hither another star, as yet unidentified, to substitute for Miss Arthur in three performances of "The Eternal Magdalene." The adjoining portrait of Miss Arthur represents her, it is presumed, as a symbol of the sinning woman who in Simon's house anointed the feet of Christ. In "The Eternal Magdalene," it is the mission of the name character to urge compassion and forgiveness for the fallen—which, it is said, she does with earnestness and eloquence through the medium of words by Robert McLaughlin, once a dramatic critic of Cleveland, O.

Miss Edna May's presence in this country inspires George W. Lederer, who staged the piece originally in 1897 to plan a revival of "The Belle of New York," with her in the name part, and "as many of the original cast as are available." Miss May does not care to resume performing, so her old rôle will be taken by Miss Hazel Dawn, a camera player. As to the others of the first cast, few are "available." Dan Daly and George K. Fortesque are dead. David Warfield, the first actor of the erratic German, is beyond temptation. Miss Paula Edwardes, if alive, has been out of mind for many years. She was the first actress of the Bowery girl in the piece. Miss Marie George is now a London matron. Harry Davenport has long been film fodder, and Mrs. Davenport (Phyllis Rankin), when last seen, had outgrown all the physical requirements of Fifi, a sort of sweetmeat Galatea in the C. M. S. McLellan story. George Schiller, Will Sloan, and William Gould were others of the 1897 cast of "The Belle of New York," which was a hit everywhere save New York itself. Its vogue here and abroad made Mr. McLellan rich.

The successor to "Town Topics" at the Chicago next week will be "Her Soldier Boy," a comic opera by the librettist of "The Merry Widow" and the composer of "Sari." It will have as prima donna the attractive Miss Margaret Romaine, who sang in "The Midnight Girl" and as leading tenor Arthur Albro, who officiated similarly in "Gypsy Love." Assisting singers are Miss Audrey Maple and Scott Welsh.

The managers of Miss Elsie Ferguson have rescued her from what is probably the worst play ever written, Hall Caine's "Margaret Schiller," and will soon present her in another—by Hulbert Footner, author of "The Sealed Valley," a book. The rôle devised for Miss Ferguson represents a smart and willful young woman operating in the fashionable precincts of Long Island. Miss Ferguson, before this play is produced, will appear as Portia to Sir Herbert Tree's Shylock.

With no particular reason for doing so, the announcement is made that this department's preference among the plays in New York is "The Boomerang," by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, acted at the Belasco theater by Arthur Byron and others almost as good.

Burns Mantle's Theater Letter from New York

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—So far as the drama is concerned it matters little whether Geraldine Farrar kissed Lou Tellegen, or Lou Tellegen her, or whether each did kiss the other, on the now memorable opening night of Mr. Tellegen's local engagement in "A King of Nowhere." But reports of the affair go to prove just how uncertain is the eyesight of even trained reporters.

The accounts next day as varied as those detailing the incidental jabs and punches of the meeting between Mr. Jess Willard of the circus and Mr. Frank Moran of the working classes. One eager youth reported that Miss Farrar "flew to the arms of her husband and embraced him rapturously." Another that the prima donna proved her acceptance of conventional domesticity by giving Mr. Tellegen the familiar peck of greeting approved in every household.

One declared the incident to be undignified and quite evidently arranged by the press agent of the theater; another that it sprang from "Gerry" Farrar's bubbling spirits and ever ready willingness to please the public. What really happened was a simple exhibition of a good wife's professional and sympathetic interest in a new husband's bad performance in a poor play.

Miss Farrar, advertised to be present and sought by every one who could crane a neck to see over the head of his or her neighbor, sat in a stage box with a party of friends. She had powdered her black hair and this served as a disguise—so good a disguise, in fact, that not many discovered her until late in the evening.

The curtain calls after the second act were prolonged; Mr. Tellegen introduced the several members of his company and finally made a speech in which he craved the indulgence of the audience for his quite evident nervousness. It was the first time, he said, that he had ever acted before his wife, to whom he waved a hand in greeting. Out of compliment to the prima donna, who was herself applauding her husband, the applause increased. Miss Farrar smiled, became a bit flustered, bounced out of her chair and went back stage.

A moment later the Tellegens appeared as a family group and the audience cheered them. At which juncture the prima donna pursed her lips and presented them at the chin of her companion, who promptly and with a confidence born of experience saluted them. The cheers redoubled, Mr. Tellegen blushed, Geraldine bobbed her head until her back hair came loose and scattered powder over her plump shoulders. Then they retired. So much for the most talked of kiss of the season.

"A King of Nowhere" was in need of some such incident to save it. It is quite as poor a romance as one suspected it would be. Mr. Tellegen plays an Irish knight in the days of Henry VIII. in England. He is taken prisoner and amuses his guards by declaring himself to be a king. Henry, suffering from the gout and his sixth wife, orders the Celt brought before him, and as a joke promises him his life if he can induce Olive Tell to marry him, Olive playing a handsome lady in waiting at the court.

Mr. Tellegen takes kindly to the suggestion, but being a man of honor for all his rags—rags, by the way, that show to advantage his white and bulging chest, and the brawny arms he developed when, years ago, he was an instructor of physical culture in Paris—he tells Olive that she is free to go and let him die. Olive is also proud and will not be thrown at the

Of a Pianist Who Tried to Dazzle 'Em.

By Eric De Lamarter.

QUITE subtle is the psychology of the ordinary soapbox orator, albeit unconscious in most cases. So long as he tangles himself in windy compound sentences, with many qualifying clauses and parentheses, uses big words, and is vociferous over the little ones, he's safe. His argument is safe. His pose of being an important influence and one responsible is safe. If he ever descended to clarity and simplicity he'd be lost.

Young Ornstein made that fatal mistake in his recent recital here. His sonata for violin and piano was a mysterious thing. It was well printed, and it looked as forbidding as any page of Schoenberg. It was prophetic of much exquisite anguish, as a Stravinsky score is prophetic. But he made a mistake. He played three compositions of the general dimensions of the Grieg "Lyric Pieces," and he tied to them various and definite titles—"Anger," "Peace," and "Joy." He should have rested secure in his own incommunicability. He communicated, and squashed the illusion.

Mr. Ornstein made a good impression with his playing of the Ravel and Debussy pieces. He made a better impression, in fact, with his interpretation of works by Ravel than he did by his own sonatina, which was a reincarnation of the Ravel sonatina. The parallel was so close, at times, that it was startling. These things he played well enough to merit the term "a good pianist."

Then he went on to clinch things. He hammered the bass end of the keyboard till it thundered—octaves "martellato," much pedal, blur, speed, crescendo, furisco, and, finally, a sudden stop, for which there was no obvious reason. This was "Anger."

"Peace" and "Joy" (as memory has it) were just as definite—a few maudlin chords vague of direction and not at all vague as to their intention of being "different." A flirt or two of arpeggio figures, and they were done. There was no obvious reason for their stopping, nor was any reason obvious for their starting. They simply were "Peace" and "Joy."

Right there the spell broke. Anxious to be astonished, the audience was a congregation of derisive grins. Now, why did it break?

Because Mr. Ornstein was explicit. Also, because he was brief. Brevity does not hide "bunk" as well as prolixity. The soapbox orator proves so much. He should not have completed his "Anger" in the matter of three minutes' time; he should not have labeled it "Anger." It should have been one hour in length, loud, with a shrieking, bombastic "program" of explanation about its inspiration from Schopenhauer's work, "Pflumeduedel," unknown to this country and incomprehensible after translation by Mr. Felix Borowski for the program book; it should have had an orchestral accompaniment, including nineteen tenor anvils and a bass jewsharp obbligato. Then we'd all have been mighty serious about this novelty.

Like the soapbox orator's spellbinding, noise and length are the cardinal virtues of rodomontade.

Mr. Ornstein did his best with the resources at his command. He flailed the lowest bass notes possible, forgetting that anger is not necessarily a trait of the choir member with the biggest Adam's apple. He might have thrown in, merely for good measure, a few coloratura soprano squalls and shrieks, and an imitation of the heavy contralto's thoughts after skidding on the "break" between registers. But this was a heavy-jowled "Anger," and lumberingly inexpressible.

Unfortunately, it called to mind two memories—those "thunder storms" we imitated, as children, by holding the damper pedal and using our fists; and agonizing octave studies during which the supercilious pedagogues would not permit us to touch the pedal for the slightest salvation.

His "Wild Men's Dance" rather modified this impression, for it had one attribute of an art work in the matter of formal design. But that very fact raised two questions equally ominous—when and why, in the sequence of Mr. Ornstein's composition, did this violent change take place, and what is its explanation, anyway? That there is a sharp distinction between "Anger," "Peace," and "Joy" and the sonatina, the "Wild Men's Dance" and the "Funeral March of the Dwarfs" is easily detected. The sonatina, in fact, is almost reactionary. To say that the three "Moods" are logically evolved from the sonatina is to assume more authority than the incomplete knowledge of Mr. Ornstein's composition granted us so far justifies.

If it can be shown that logical development made them inevitable, their creator has the best of the argument. But no such kinship was revealed by the single hearing, and, on the data given, it seems incredible. If that relation can not be established it must be assumed either that they were written as experiments with the public's credulity or merely as outlandish bids for a freakish popularity. In both cases is merited the accusation of artistic insincerity. And that is a serious charge in all aspects, excepting only the box office aspect.

In regard to the new comic opera "See America First," the New York dramatic critics are unamiably deprecatory. They deem it "amateurish." It is by T. Lawrason Riggs and Cole Porter, two Yale young men of Gilbertian gifts the brightness of whose verse inspired hope for its success.

Reviewers in the cities visited by Miss Laurette Taylor in "The Wooing of Eve" hail that work as a masterpiece. It is by her husband, Mr. Manners, who is expert at masterpieces. "Happiness," another comedy by Mr. Manners, will be tried "on the road" ere it is decided which play shall be employed in her return to Broadway.

Maurice Farkoa, a singing comedian of the musical plays, is dead. He had not sung in Chicago since 1907, when he was a member of Joe Weber's company with Otis Harlan, Miss Cecelia Loftus, and William Hodge in "Dream City." He first came to the United States in 1895-'96, with a company from the London Gaiety, and sung in "An Artist's Model" with Lawrance D'Orsay, Miss Marie Studholme, and Miss Allison Skipworth (she, as the dowager, was one of the joys of "A Pair of Silk Stockings"). Farkoa came back to Chicago in 1903-'04 with George P. Huntley in "Three Little Maids," and made a hit by singing refrains of American songs with French words—a device which has happily been taken up by Octave Dua, the gifted Belgian tenor of this season's Auditorium opera.

Another Great Honor

MASON & HAMLIN Pianos will be used this afternoon at Orchestra Hall in one of the most notable musical events of the Chicago season.

Harold Bauer and Ossip Gabrilowitsch

will appear in a two-piano recital. That these two great artists should have selected the MASON & HAMLIN for this memorable occasion is indeed final proof of the unequalled tone qualities of this most perfect of pianos.

For mark you, no living musician surpasses in versatility, these two men of genius. If it is your privilege to attend this afternoon, you will say that the breadth of their work demands and finds in the MASON & HAMLIN, not only a piano of tremendous power but one of surpassing beauty.

And if you will call at our music rooms tomorrow for a demonstration in private, you will echo the words of these great authorities:

"I have never been so completely satisfied with any piano as with the Mason & Hamlin."

"It is the most superbly beautiful instrument I know."

Our exhibit tomorrow of both grands and uprights is especially complete, due to heavy shipments received this past week from Boston. Bear in mind, please, that for those who do not wish to pay cash, convenient terms of payment may be arranged. Your used piano accepted in part payment.

Whipple and Huston:

"Did you ever have money left you?"

"Yes, I had money—and it left me [illegible]."

"Well, I have money—lots of it—a million."

"Will you marry me?"

"I should say not!"

"O, very well. I just wanted to know how it felt to lose a million."

"Are you talented?"

"Yes, I paint."

"Did you ever paint a natural picture?"

"Indeed, I painted a picture so natural that the barber came to shave it three times a week."

M'VICKER'S.

Huff and Chain:

"What smells worse than a goat?"

"Two goats."

"What is your brother?"

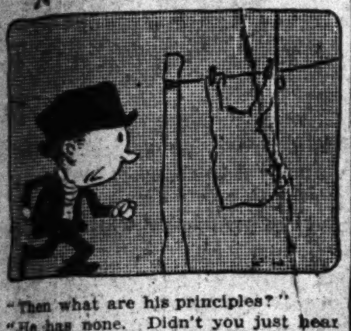
"A politician."

"Republican?"

"No."

"Democratic?"

"No."



"Then what are his principles?"

"He has none. Didn't you just hear me say he is a politician?"

"If it takes two yards of cloth to make a shirt, how many shirts can you get out of one yard?"

"It all depends on how dark the night is and how many shirts are on the line."

"How many children are there at your house?"

"Fourteen."

"You mean to say there are fourteen children at your house?"

"Yes; we got one and an Italian family that lives upstairs has thirteen."

Three Best Sellers in Music World.

The best sellers in Edison records last week were:

"Could the Dream of a Dreamer Come True" and "Mister Silver Moon."

"Dancing with Ma Honey" and "Twinkle Waltz."

"Loading Up the Mandy Lee" and "Some Little Bug Is Going to Find You."

The following were the best sellers in Victor records:

"That Soothing Symphony" and "Those Good Old Days Back Home."

"Memories" and "One Fleeting Hour."

"The Princess Pat Waltzes" and "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling."

Best sellers in Columbia records for the week were:

"Hello, Hawaii! How are You?" and "Underneath the Stars."

"So Long, Letty."

"On the Beach at Waikike" and "Hapa Haole Hula Girl."

The best sellers in Pathe records for the last week were:

"Love's Old Sweet Song" and "The Two Beggars."

"Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Spring Song."

"Hungarian Rhapsody" No. 2.

The best sellers in the piano player rolls were:

"Nodding Roses."

"Sybil."

"Wide Awake Medley."

The three best selling sheet music numbers of the current week were:

"Underneath the Stars."

"So Long, Letty."

"Ladder of Roses."

Burns Mantle's Theater Letter from New York.

head of any man. But in the second act her love overcomes her pride. She seeks out her hero in his dungeon cell and tells him she loves him, not out of sympathy, but in earnest. She is thereupon kissed fairly upon the mouth in the blue moonlight and next act the two of them are forgiven by the irascible Henry.

Mr. Tellegen's French accent has no suggestion of the Celtic about it, and he was as detached a character as he usually is in the drama he effects. He is a striking figure, however, and much beloved of matinée crowds. A good actor, too, in French.

The drama grows interesting as the spring advances. A second sensation of last week was the hit that Thomas A. Wise scored playing Sir John Falstaff in the production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," staged by James K. Hackett. Mr. Hackett's illness prevented his playing the part, and, after seeing Mr. Wise as the fat knight, it is hard not to place some credence in the wisdom of the gods who rule such accidents.

Not that any one wanted Mr. Hackett to suffer an illness that would prevent his appearing. Far from it. But just the same here is a great Falstaff suddenly introduced to fame in place of one that probably would have been no better than fair. Mr. Hackett has many admirable qualities, but the comic spirit is not a part of his equipment. And what would Falstaff be without the comic spirit?

There is honor enough for Mr. Hackett in the magnificence of the production he has furnished. Nothing handsomer, I may tell you boldly, has been staged in America, and, unlike many of Joseph Urban's settings, he being the designer of this one also, it is not at any point too bright with color or cluttered with odds and ends suggested by too evident a desire to make it different.

Mr. Wise, his friends report, has wanted to play Falstaff all his life. He has loved the part for the meat in it, and the meat on it. And he has from year to year found himself assuming those physical proportions that make it possible for him to do without a stomach pad. He is good and round, is Thomas, as those who saw him last season as the sea captain in "The Song of Songs" will recollect.

But I doubt if any one who did see that performance would ever suspect he could play Sir John as quietly, even as delicately, as he does, shading the shady humor with positive skill, drinking his sack in great good nature and pursuing the merry wives with all the ardor of youth, yet with something of the discretion of years as well. A fine, jolly, philandering old codger, who comes all sorts of croppers, but bobs up serenely after each of them, a glutton for punishment, a philosopher in and out of trouble.

There was a surprise, too, in the way the old farce acts, thus bolstered by so good a Falstaff. No modern comic play has been received with heartier laughter this year. Henrietta Crosman shares some of the honor, romping good naturedly as Mistress Page, and Viola Allen, though she is another with no more than a bowing acquaintance with the spirit of comedy, plays a very good Mistress Ford in contrast.

There is not the least chance to doubt the success of at least two Shakespearean ventures these tercentenary days. Sir Herbert Tree's receipts the first week of "Henry VIII." at the New Amsterdam were $19,000, and "The Merry Wives" played to something like $11,000 at the Criterion. Positively unheard of records for Broadway.

It is feared, however, that Wise will be unable to reap the full rewards of his success. He is rehearsing the rôle of P. T. Barnum in a new comedy called "Suki," which the Frohman company is producing for Ann Murdock this spring. He will probably be called back to that part this week or next.

Those valiant semi-professionals of the Bandbox theater, calling themselves the Washington Square players, have a new bill of short plays. Soon now they are to attempt their first spring tour, at which time we shall commend them to your good will and crave for them your fair indulgence. They have progressed wonderfully in their interesting experiments with the unusual drama, and we in New York have grown fond of them because of their sincerity and lack of pose, and proud of them for having stuck to the purposes of their organization.

How About the Starting Battery in Your Car?

You know how you depend upon your Electric Starter—it's one of the biggest conveniences on your car. Remember, your Starter depends upon your battery—if your battery isn't in good shape your Starter won't give you good service.

The "Exide" Starting and Lighting Battery is the highest grade Starting Battery on the market. It's the original "unit-seal" battery—each cell a separate unit—no bulky sealing compound—flood-proof filling plugs—semi-flexible rubber jars—big plates—maximum power. There's an "Exide" Battery for every car.

Money Going Up In Smoke

These beautiful apartments which grace Pratt Boulevard, near Sheridan Road, are heated by Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers. They are burning the cheapest grades of soft coal without smoke and the atmosphere around the building is clean and sweet and wholesome. AND—the gobs of money the owner saves make so much more profit for him to spend in riotous living at Pam Beach and Benton Harbor.

Smoke is a terrific luxury. It costs you owners of buildings a lot of money to make it. May be you don't know it, but smoke is unconsumed fuel, and unconsumed fuel is due to a bum boiler. It doesn't burn all the gases. Here is where the Kewanee Boiler comes in. It not only burns all the gases, but it allows you to cut out the high-priced coal and burn the cheapest grades mined in Illinois. And all this without smoke.

You don't notice the smoke inspector hovering around buildings that use the Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler. That's no place for him. There isn't any smoke. And it's no place for the repair man. Kewanee Boilers are made of all-steel plate and the average cost for repairs, per boiler, is less than $1.50 per year.

Think all these things over then drop a note to The Old Man Behind The Boiler. He is a real boiler maker and he will write you in real boiler language.

At first the projections on tires were only small buttons. But now look at them—great, solid lumps of assorted shapes and sizes! Which shows how a wrong principle will develop if you don't catch it in time. Fortunately are never built on the idea of fastening lumps to their naturally smooth surface. Their indentations, instead of lumps, provide anti-skid protection and, more than that, reduce to a minimum the actual friction surface on the ground, adding speed at every revolution of the wheel.

The Smith Form-a-Truck guaranteed one-ton truck gives you the great economy and dependability of a Ford, plus a rear-end construction that carries 90% of the load—a combination that cannot be matched for either performance or low mileage cost. And all this for half the average cost of a standard one-ton truck.

$350 and a FORD gives you the Smith Form-a-Truck

Follow the example of a concern that knows how to utilize every bit of a pig except its squeal. They know what values ARE. They don't waste a penny. They needed more trucks. They examined a Smith Form-a-Truck with this result—

Morris & Co.—they buy

And it is the same result with practically every concern that really investigates what the Smith Form-a-Truck IS, and what it will DO.

This attachment is all ready for use—telescopes on any Ford—new or old—fits perfectly, bolts securely and reinforces the entire frame. No skilled workmanship required—two men can do the job in a few hours.

12 to 15 miles of speed under full load—12 to 20 miles per gallon of gasoline—ridiculously low upkeep expense—and twice the work of four teams at half the cost.

BUSY DAY FOR MR. DREW.

YOU all know Sidney Drew, don't you? In case you do not, he is the Sidney Drew who does the comicalest of comedies assisted by his wife, Mrs. Sidney Drew. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are at present with the Metro company. The reason for this account of him is that recently he got himself quite in bad when he advertised for a goat to be used in one of his comedies. The day following the publication of the advertisement a number of young men and boys came to the studio with goats of which they hoped to make moving picture actors. Mr. Drew having neglected to state the hour, the goats were there long before he appeared, and in the studio on the sixth floor had the time of their lives upsetting everything and everybody in sight. The stage hands and property men climbed out of reach and waited for the entrance of Mr. Drew. When he came he had a big day ahead of him, for, after having disposed of the goats and their masters, it was up to him to propitiate his irascible helpers. To cap the climax agents from the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals appeared just as he was about to take his first scene with the goat and announced that he would not be permitted to keep an animal captive in the studio. "O blank!" said Mr. Drew wearily, and he substituted a bock beer sign.

Sidney Bracy, the w. k. butler in "The Million Dollar Mystery," has joined forces with the Universal company.

George D. Proctor, scenario editor of the Gaumont Mutual company, announces that he will gladly consider strong three reel scenarios. "These," said he, "must be of a modern theme and of unusual dramatic interest." Gladly he announces, gladly you hear. The scenario department of the Gaumont plant is at the Gaumont studio, Flushing, N. Y.

Under the new title of "An American's Home" "The Battle Cry of Peace" has been shown to trade and press of London. It is said that British audiences are greatly in favor of it and that it will effectually stimulate recruiting wherever exhibited.

Mary Pickford recently met Gaby Deslys. Mary couldn't talk French and Gaby couldn't talk English, so all they did was meet.

FEATURE FILMS OF THE WEEK

"Fear."—Three part Thanhouser drama in which Peggy Burke and Howard Mitchell play the leads. It is billed as "a psychological analysis of fear, a story of cannonball power." Psychologically and cannonballically speaking——?

"In the Shuffle." — Three part American drama, with Winifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen featured. If you have ever gambled or ever expect to gamble you would better see this picture and make up your mind that gambling is nothing with which to occupy your time.

"Out of the Quagmire."—Three part Vitagraph drama featuring Joseph Kilgour, supported by an all star cast. One of those pictures that pull at the w. k. heart strings.

"Paths That Crossed."—Three reel Biograph drama in which you see beautiful Claire McDowell. The sex problem receives another free treatment, which is advertised as "sensational but not morbid."

"The Haunted Manor."—Five reel Gaumont Mutual feature showing Iva Shepard in a vampire rôle.

"The Heart of Paula."—Pallas picture featuring Leonore Ulrich. In it the fair Leonore is supposed to be at her best.

"The Kiss of Hate."—Metro production with Ethel Barrymore doing the kissing.

"The Net."—Mutual feature with Marion Swayne and Bert Delaney depicting a story of fisher folk.

"The Sowers."—Lasky production with Blanche Sweet. Nuff sed.

"The Spider's Web."—Three act Essanay drama with Bryant Washburn and Elizabeth Burbridge spiddig aroud. The people mentioned are pretty good guarantee that the picture is worth seeing.

"The Traffic Cop."—Thanhouser production featuring Howard Mitchell and Gladys Hulette. A traffic policeman loves a poor little rich girl. Does he win her? Ah, see the picture.

"The Vital Question."—Five part Vitagraph blue ribbon feature, with Virginia Pearson in the lead. Declaims the press agent: "A picture in which you can almost hear the heartbeats." Tick-tock, tick-tock, tick-tock.

STATIONARY PHOTOPLAYS.

Castle. — Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, "The Code of Marcia Gray," five reel Morosco production with Constance Collier in the lead. Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, "The Lost Bridegroom," five reel Famous Players comedy featuring John Barrymore.

Colonial.—"The Good Bad Man," five reel Fine Arts-Triangle production featuring Douglas Fairbanks. Also a Keystone comedy.

La Salle.—"The Sowers," five reel Lasky drama with Blanche Sweet in the lead. Also a comedy and Paramount Pictograph.

Studebaker.—"The Heart of Paula," Pallas Pictures production featuring Leonore Ulrich. Burton Holmes travel picture and also a comedy featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.

Ziegfeld. — "The Wall Between," Metro picturization of Ralph D. Paine's drama. Francis X. Bushman is featured. "Dollars and the Woman," Lubin picturization of Albert Payson Terhune's story, "Dollars and Cents." Tom Moore and Ethel Clayton play the leads.

They Laugh at this in Vaudeville

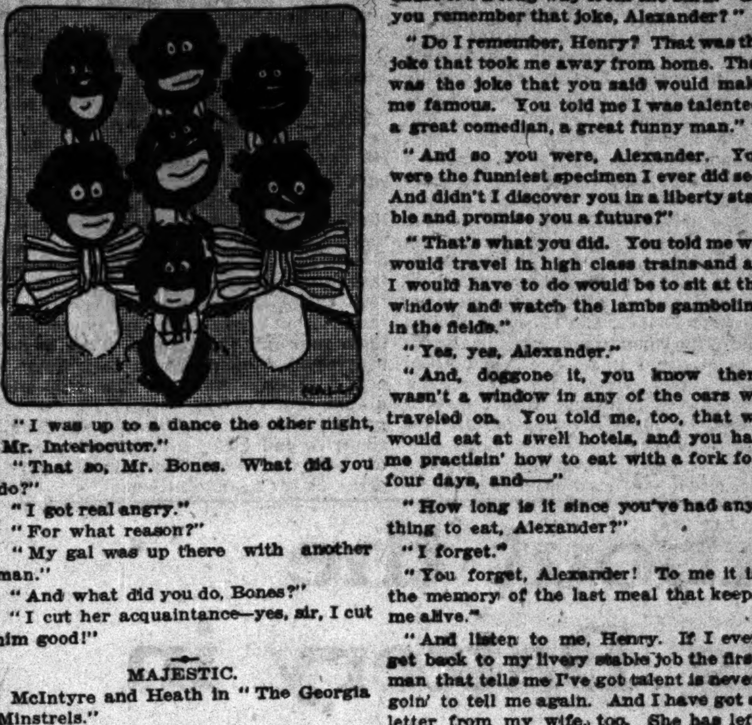
PALACE.

Honeyboy Minstrels:

"Why do they play football in the fall?"

"Because nuts don't get ripe until autumn."



"I was up to a dance the other night, Mr. Interlocutor."

"That so, Mr. Bones. What did you do?"

"I got real angry."

"For what reason?"

"My gal was up there with another man."

"And what did you do, Bones?"

"I cut her acquaintance—yes, sir, I cut him good!"

MAJESTIC.

McIntyre and Heath in "The Georgia Minstrels."

"Well, here we are."

"Yes, and we're going to stay here—broke. But if I ever get back to my livery stable again you bet I'll make love to that job."

"What you complaining 'bout, Alexander? How long you been with the troupe"

"Four days."

"Well, you got the base drum for your services, didn't you?"

"Yes, but that ain't eating."

"Do you remember, Alexander, that great joke of yours that you told me first in the liberty stable? That joke that went like this: 'Why is the heart of a tree like a dog's tail?' And the answer was: 'Because it's a long way from the bark.' Do you remember that joke, Alexander?"

"Do I remember, Henry? That was the joke that took me away from home. That was the joke that you said would make me famous. You told me I was talented, a great comedian, a great funny man."

"And so you were, Alexander. You were the funniest specimen I ever did see. And didn't I discover you in a liberty stable and promise you a future?"

"That's what you did. You told me we would travel in high class trains and all I would have to do would be to sit at the window and watch the lambs gamboling in the fields."

"Yes, yes, Alexander."

"And, doggone it, you know there wasn't a window in any of the cars we traveled on. You told me, too, that we would eat at swell hotels, and you had me practisin' how to eat with a fork for four days, and——"

"How long is it since you've had anything to eat, Alexander?"

"I forget."

"You forget, Alexander! To me it is the memory of the last meal that keeps me alive."

"And listen to me, Henry. If I ever get back to my livery stable job the first man that tells me I've got talent is never goin' to tell me again. And I have got a letter from my wife, too. She has left me."

"How much?"

"It isn't that kind of a left. She wrote me for money and I told her I didn't have any, but sent her my love and inclosed a check for 1,000 kisses. Now read this letter."

"'Dear Alexander: The iceman has cashed your check.'

"So, Henry, I haven't any more home than a rabbit."

SIEGEL COOPER
SC

This store is so wonderful now we want you to enjoy it just as you are going to enjoy the sunshine and the spring you have waited for so long.

Our Buyers have worked hard for you—very hard.

They haven't merely strolled into the markets and bought the regular goods at the regular prices in the regular way. But they have forced their way into the private offices of manufacturers, driving close bargains and taking even their discounts for spot cash.

They've gone into the byways of trade, to factories away from the main traveled routes, and in hundreds of cases have made their money do double duty by being there first and being alone.

What they have brought back

Easter Are the Two Flood Tides of Life

Easter when the warmth of the earth warms our hearts.

We are coming now to the full, warm, sunshine flood of Eastertide.

an inspiration to us, and it will be an inspiration to you.

Easter can mean so much or so little. It all depends on whether we can have the things we crave.

So many of us are able to get only a sip from the full cup. We pay too much for a suit, and continue to wear our old shoes. We put it all into the children's clothes and starve ourselves. Or we buy everything for ourselves and starve our homes.

This Big Store with its merchandise at the price of merchandise will give you all of the things you crave. Your money will go farther and your happiness will last longer.

People are tired of being fooled. They want their money's worth. They are learning faster and faster that there are two ends to this old Loop and that it pays to buy at this end.

Easter Suits and Coats

These will warm any woman's heart. They are so beautiful, so lovely, and so very, very reasonable in price. We should like ten thousand more women to come to this department tomorrow and just see how beautiful these things are and how much you can save by buying here. There is absolutely no reason for the hundreds of per cent of profit that snobbery tacks on to the price of clothes each season under the pretense of exclusive style. Come and see what you ought to pay. Women's and misses' sizes.

Suits at 16.75

The very same things they are asking 22.50 and $25 for, by explaining to you that they have something exclusive that no other store can obtain. What do they take you for? You must know that the market is open to any store that has the price. And our price on this lot of suits (come and see them) is 16.75

And the Smart Coats which you will find priced many places at from 17.50 to $20 are here for you tomorrow in all of the season's new colors and new styles. Only in this store we have them priced for you at just 12.75

Suits at 22.50

Man Tailored Suits, and if you like, we'll show you where you can go and get the same things at $30 to $35. These are the new silk taffetas, in plain and contrasting effects; fine gabardines, poplins and novelty weaves that the makers have made so attractive this season. Come and see them. Price, 22.50

The Coats for which they are asking 27.50 and $30 are here for almost half. Taffetas, poplins, gabardines, coverts, novelty weaves. Full silk lined. An endless variety (come and see them), judge for yourself — our price is 19.50

Greatest Glove Sale Ever Held

1.00, 1.25, 1.50 Values
Long and Short Silk Gloves
Finger Tips Guaranteed

20,000 PAIRS
SILK GLOVES

All Perfect Milanaise Silk Gloves, of rich, clinging first quality silk, that fit the hand closely and retain their shape. This sale is so large that, although we have given six thousand square feet of space to it on our first floor, we will only be able to show half of the merchandise tomorrow. There are 10,000 pairs of short gloves and 10,000 pairs of long gloves.

The short gloves are in 2 clasp Milanaise silk, in a complete range of the new embroidered backs, including the popular heavy, in the much wanted two-tone effects, such as white with blue, gold and violet embroidery, heavy four row contrasting, etc. Absolutely fresh, clean goods direct from the factory.

The long gloves are also in the finest quality of Milanaise silk, with heavy black embroidery or self colors. Black, white and colors. In the color assortment of the 2-clasp gloves you'll find the new pastel shades, navy blue, gray or slate, African brown, tan or green, white or black.

The finger tips are guaranteed. The contrasting embroideries are also guaranteed to be washable. Of course there will be a terrible crowd, but we are ready to give you good service when you come.

Motors and Motorcycles

For Motorist and Motorcyclist

By High

Besides maintaining a bureau of information as to the best automobile routes throughout the country "The Tribune" is prepared to answer all technical questions about automobiles. Address all inquiries to High Speed, care of "The Tribune," Chicago.

What do you predict as the average price of gasoline next summer, and is it true that it may retail as high as 30 cents a gallon? How would some of the "gasoline improvers" work if added to kerosene? What is the difference between gasoline and kerosene, and would the latter prove all right as an automobile fuel?

A. R., Janesville, Wis.

It would be a wise man indeed who could safely venture a prediction as to what gasoline will retail for during the next few months. It is all a matter of supply and demand. At present the price of crude oil, from which gasoline and other fuels are made, is high, and probably will be somewhat higher while the demand for all distillates of crude petroleum is heavy. However, this fact should not deter one from looking forward to a busy season of touring with his motor car. Two things are reasonably certain. The price of gasoline will not be as low as it was last summer, nor will it go as high as 30 cents per gallon the coming summer. Merely as a guess, I should say that the fuel will retail at anywhere from 18 to 24 cents per gallon. It would be a waste of time and money for you to experiment by adding any of the so called "gasoline improvers" to kerosene and trying to use it as a motor car fuel. Better stick to gasoline and be sure of "getting there and back again." Gasoline is of a highly volatile nature, and, mixed with air, by means of the carburetor, forms a satisfactory fuel gas by a simple method. Kerosene is another distillate of crude petroleum and is the substance given off during the refining process following the evaporation of the more volatile gases that are condensed into gasoline. Kerosene can be used only by employing a specially constructed carburetor. Even then one would be obliged to carry a supply of gasoline with which to start the motor.

Will you please publish in your column the best route from Beloit to Waterloo, Ia., and from Beloit to Ravenswood, Ill., and oblige,

MRS. G. T. G., Beloit, Wis.

From Beloit to Waterloo, go through Rockford, Freeport, Lena, Wadham Station, Nora, Warren (Ill.), Shullsburg, Leadmine, Benton, Hazel Green, Fairplay (Wis.), East Dubuque (Ill.), Dubuque (Ia.), 112.6 miles; Julien, Centralia, Epworth, Farley, Dyersville, Earlville, Manchester, Independence, Jesup, Waterloo, 90.7 miles. From Beloit to Ravenswood I would advise you to drive to Chicago and thence over six or seven miles of boulevards to your destination. Go through Roscoe, Rockford, Belvidere, Garden Prairie, Marengo, Harmony, McQueens, Elgin, Ontarioville, Bloomingdale, Addison, Maywood, Oak Park to Chicago, 104.7 miles.

Please advise me where I could obtain a tryout as a race driver or if there is any possible chance of getting such a tryout. Let me know in your column next Sunday.

JOHN J. FABRO, Gary, Ill.

About the only way to break into the racing game is to correspond with some factory or individual that campaigns racing cars and get a position as camp helper. If you show ability you may get to be mechanic for one of the racing drivers and later on may become a pilot.

Will you please give me a little information regarding "motor spirit"? What company handles it and is it a satisfactory substitute for gasoline? How does it compare with gasoline in price?

F. W. BLYTHE, Hicksville, O.

Motor spirits was brought out by the Standard Oil company three or four years ago, and at the time it was thought it could be retailed at a lower price than gasoline and would prove as good a fuel for internal combustion engines. The fuel did not come up to expectations, however, and at the present time little of it is being used. In fact, we are informed by the Standard Oil company that it is about to withdraw motor spirits from the market. The fuel costs as much as gasoline and is of such low test that, with the ordinary carburetor, it is about impossible to start a car with it.

Please publish in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE the best and most direct route from Chicago to Niagara Falls, the distance and the condition of the roads in the summer time.

H. B., Chicago.

From Chicago follow route through South Chicago, Hammond, Highlands, Hobart, Valparaiso, La Porte, South Bend, Mishawaka, Osceola, Elkhart, Goshen, Ligonier, Wawaka, Kendallville, Waterloo, Butler, Edgerton [O.], Bryan, Stryker, Napoleon, Bowling Green, Fremont, Clyde, Bellevue, Norwalk, Oberlin, Elyria, Cleveland, Willoughby, Menton, Painesville, Madison, Unionville, Geneva, Ashtabula, Amboy, Conneaut, Springfield [Pa.], Girard, Erie, Harbour Creek, Moorheadville, North East, Ripley, Westfield, Brocton, Fredonia, Farham, Evans, Athol Springs, West Seneca, Buffalo, Niagara Falls. The total distance is 602 miles. Many improvements have been carried out within the last year and by the time you make your trip the roads should be in excellent condition.

I am running my brother-in-law's automobile at times, and I wish to know if it will be necessary for me to procure a chauffeurs' license, and, if so, where I can obtain one.

G. M., Chicago.

It depends upon whether your relative's car is a private one or if it is for hire. If the automobile is a public conveyance, it will be necessary for its driver to have a city license, for which application must be made at the vehicle bureau, city hall. If the car is for private use only, no drivers' license is required.

Will you give me the route from Chicago to Seattle? Can one go via Minneapolis and through to Helena, Mont.? If possible I prefer touring via Denver to Salt Lake and through Idaho and Oregon. Is there a road following the Denver and Rio Grande railroad or the railroad that runs at the foot of the mountains, the Colorado Midland, I believe? Please give me the two routes—via Denver and Salt Lake and via Minneapolis and Helena.

MISS R. C., Chicago.

Probably the most popular route from Chicago to Seattle is the National Parks highway, which is best outlined as follows: Chicago to Madison, Wis., via Algonquin, Woodstock, Harvard, and Janesville; Madison to La Crosse, Wis., via Baraboo, Reedsburg, and Kendalls; La Crosse to the Twin Cities via Winona and Rochester, Minn.; Minneapolis to Fargo, N. D., via St. Cloud, Alexandria, Fergus Falls, and Barnesville; Fargo to Billings, Mont., via Valley City, Jamestown, Bismarck, New Salem, Dickinson, Mendora, Glendive, Miles City, Forsyth, and Huntley; Billings to Missoula via Livingston and Butte [to reach Helena detour ninety-three miles northeast]; Missoula to Seattle via Wallace [Idaho], Spokane, and Wenatchee. If you wish to motor through the Rockies travel the Lincoln highway as far as Cheyenne and then detour to Denver. From Denver go south to Colorado Springs and cross Colorado by way of Buena Vista, Leadville, Glenwood Springs, and Grand Junction. In Utah you pass through Mack and Price on the way to Salt Lake City. An optional route between Colorado Springs and Buena Vista and one of great scenic beauty is via Divide, Cripple Creek, Cañon City, and Salida. In order to pick up the National Parks highway again travel north from Salt Lake City through Ogden, Pocatello, and St. Anthony to Yellowstone National park. Leave the park by the northern exit at Gardner and fifty-three miles farther is Livingston on the National Parks highway.

What are the best automobile routes from Galesburg, Ill., to Cleveland, O., and Indianapolis, Ind.?

C. W. STOCKTON, Galesburg, Ill.

The route from Galesburg to Cleveland passes through the following cities and towns: Galva, Kewanee, Sheffield, Princeton, Mendota, Earlville, Sandwich, Plano, and Aurora to Chicago. From Chicago, travel by way of Michigan City, South Bend, Goshen, Ligonier, and Kendallville, Ind., to Bryan, O., and thence to Cleveland via Defiance, Bowling Green, Fremont, and Sandusky. To motor from Galesburg to Indianapolis, travel by way of Peoria, Bloomington, Champaign, and Danville to Covington, Ind., and thence to Indianapolis via Crawfordsville, Whitsville, and Jamestown.

Exhaust Echoes

By J. C. Burton

In a campaign to prevent motorists from using oils that are unsuitable to the make of car they drive, the Viscosity Oil company of Chicago has issued a booklet entitled "Correct Lubrication," in which the various grades are listed according to automobiles for which they are suited.

The Jackson Automobile company has just closed a contract with L. Ashcroft Edwards of Wellington, New Zealand, by which he will handle the Jackson line in that country. Mr. Edwards has been in America for several weeks visiting various automobile factories and studying the methods of manufacture. Asked about road conditions in New Zealand, he stated that the roads in general were good, mostly of the macadam type, the worst feature being the heavy dust. For that reason the New Zealanders are particular about having bodies finished in colors that do not show the dust. Gray is the popular shade and tops are made of khaki cloth instead of the black materials in vogue in America. Foreign cars have held sway of the market in New Zealand until the war—but these cars with their lazy backs and low windshields, designed for the smooth roads of the old continent—are now being displaced by American makes.

Power movement in a motor is a much more important factor than the rated or deliverable horsepower, according to Brent Niel, local distributor for the Abbott-Detroit. He claims that to judge a motor by the amount of its horsepower is about as wise as judging the effectiveness of a baseball pitcher by the muscles of his arm. The power movement in automobiles takes into account three factors that have to do with performance—actual brake horsepower, weight of the car, and gear ratio.

The Fisk Rubber company of Chicopee Falls, Mass., has announced completion of its plans for the establishment of department of industrial relations under the direction of Dr. William Hall Coon, formerly of the Massachusetts state board of health. The new department will provide for safety and health of all the thousands of employés at the Fisk plant, for the increasing and bettering of the hospital service, and will include a division given over to the study of all questions having to do with industrial relations. In addition, the Fisk company has provided free health insurance to all employés at the factories and provisions are made for free life insurance as a reward for continuous service. The latter, starting at $500 in one year, increases $100 each year to a maximum of $1,000 in five years.

As a move of preparedness for the 1916 demand for Studebaker cars, additions costing $1,000,000 have just been made to the Detroit factories of the Studebaker corporation. The work on these extensions, begun last October, is now practically completed and will enable the manufacturers of Studebaker cars to carry out their plans of producing 100,000 cars during this year. With the completion of the increased plant facilities the production schedule will shortly be jumped from 300 cars a day to 400, thus placing the Studebaker corporation as the largest builder of cars at or above the prices of the Studebaker fours and sixes.

A new form of automobile contest that promises to spread from coast to coast has been invented by members of the Oldsmobile and Buick sales agencies at San Francisco. It is an assembly contest, in which twelve trained men from rival sales agencies vie with each other in piecing together two machines which have been previously disjointed into as many component parts as possible. The initial contest was staged at the Empress theater there. The curtain went up on a clutter of automobile parts defying description. Fenders were off, lamps on the floor, radiator leaning against a post, the axles out, the transmission torn asunder. At the shot of a revolver twelve men sprang to their work. In two minutes an Oldsmobile, a four, stood complete upon the floor. Twenty-one seconds later and the Buick followed suit, defeated but not disgraced.

New York and Philadelphia, ninety-four miles apart, are points now connected by a daily motor truck service available to all shippers. This service has just been established by George W. Mink of Philadelphia, and the power mediums used are three five ton Pierce-Arrow trucks.

As testimony of the efficiency and adaptability of the Indian motorcycle the Hendee company at Springfield, Mass., has recently received photographs of the Spanish army dispatch unit equipped with the Indian cradle spring twins, ready for instant service by riders, or, with the side carriages attached, as conveyances for officers in their quick dashes from post to post. Spain has profited by her lesson of 1898, and, prompted further by the danger of being drawn into the present conflict, she has been untiring in her efforts to build up a strong defensive army equipped with the most approved machinery of modern warfare adequate to maintain her borders from all comers. And to this end there have been severe tests of all equipment in an effort to develop a fighting unit equal in efficiency to any army in Europe.

Early in the season the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company announced that it had opened large additions to its factory and installed new machinery and labor saving devices that would enable it to produce 175 cars a day. Its production schedule for the year was announced as approximately 20,000 cars. In spite of these strenuous preparations and the enormous increase in production the Paige now faces a shortage in Fairfields, the "six-46" seven passenger model, and although the factory is working night and day the unprecedented demand for cars has swamped it. On March 1 the number of orders on the factory books from Paige dealers throughout the country totaled 3,748 cars, valued at about $4,000,000. Practically every one of these orders is for immediate delivery. This is a tremendous increase over the orders on hand at the same time a year ago.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

With a factory site of forty acres and over 300,000 square feet of floor space, with exceptional financial strength and facilities for conducting the manufacture and sale of a large volume of motor cars, and an organization of such caliber that the quality of the product should establish it in the front rank, the new Premier Motor corporation of Indianapolis is ready for business.

The corporation starts with a capital stock of $2,500,000. Large volume production of quality cars is the intention.

The initial steps of the Premier Motor corporation comprise the purchase of the good will of the Premier Motor Manufacturing company, the purchase of the Mais Motor Truck company and the purchase of the factory site of the T. B. Laycock plant in Indianapolis. These three elements have already been amalgamated and the entire plant has been rehabilitated and adapted to meet the demands of a modern factory doing a modern business.

The officers are: J. C. Flowers, president; Frank E. Smith, vice president; E. W. Steinhart, vice president; C. F. Jensen, secretary; H. L. Thompson, treasurer.

P. D. Stubbs, for the last five years associated with the Hudson Motor Car company, is sales manager. Homer McKee, who has been director of sales and advertising for the Cole, will act as director of advertising. P. W. Tracy, who was with Chalmers and later purchasing agent for Paige at Detroit, will assume the duties of director of the purchasing department.

The engineering department is extraordinarily strong, comprising as it does C. S. Crawford, who was chief engineer of the Cole Motor Car company; Earl G. Gunn, who was chief engineer of the Northway Motors company, and J. L. Yarian, who had assisted in the development of the Curtiss aeroplane engines.

As factory superintendent and production manager the Premier has secured Fred P. Nehrbas, formerly with the American Locomotive company.

Quite contrary to the usual custom, these days, Apperson Bros. are sending out the announcement that there will not be any increase in list prices on current models. The prices they placed on 1916 cars at the beginning are going to remain until the 1917 models are announced. The company is willing to shoulder the burden of the extra cost rather than to disarrange the dealers' selling campaign and embarrass their sales organization in any way.

Improvements for the Ford car to make it look and ride better have been legion. Now comes an engineering improvement to make the Ford motor run better—lynite aluminum pistons completely equipped with leakproof piston rings. These lynite pistons reduce the piston weight of the Ford car two-thirds, it is claimed. Reduction of piston weight is the feature of the 1916 automobile engineering. Practically all of the high grade cars shown at the New York and Chicago shows this year were equipped with lynite pistons. They play an important part in the success of most of the small bore high speed motors for 1916 and a majority of the multi-cylindered motors.

The offer made by the Haynes Automobile company, to exchange one of its light twelves for the oldest Haynes car running is revealing some remarkable motor car history. At Reno, Nev., is a model O four cylinder Haynes that should be decorated for distinguished service. It went to the Pacific coast as a pleasure car in 1906 and after two years of touring on the broad roads of southern California a Los Angeles dry cleaning firm bought it to be fitted out as a delivery car. From the dry cleaning firm it went to a bakery, where it continued in its delivery capacity, and from the bakery to an express and transfer company, that ran it day out and day in through the country about Los Angeles. The express company disposed of the car to a man who ran it on the Mojave desert as a stage for two years. Then he heard of the boom at Reno, packed his belongings, and with his family of five struck toward Nevada by way of Paverville and over the grades of Strawberry pass. He carried his blanket and camping outfit on a trailer that he had rigged up on an old buggy running gear. The desert pilot arrived at Reno and sold the Haynes to W. W. Brinkman, the present owner. He is using it daily in going back and forth to his ranch and carrying parties on mountain hunting trips. This spring he plans to convert the motor into a tractor to pull a gang plow on his ranch.

DORT

A Twice Better Car

Although the Dort does not sell for double the price of some cars—it is a twice better car.

Although it sells for almost half the price of some cars—it will do all that any of them will do. So the $665 that you pay for the Dort delivers you more automobile than any car near its price.

The Dort gives you more in high-grade equipment; for example, the Westinghouse Two-Unit Starting and Lighting System; the Connecticut ignition; the Jacox irreversible steering; Detroit demountable rims; one-man top; the 50½x2-inch full cantilever rear springs.

—and it gives you more in service; in dependability; in economy of upkeep and operation.

Can Your Car Do This?

Under its own power this car climbed an open jack-knife bridge in Chicago at the angle shown in this picture.

This feat is possible only on account of the Stewart Vacuum System.

A car without one could not do it.

Every car so equipped is absolutely sure of a perfect and positive flow of gasoline to the carburetor under all conditions and on any grade.

With the old gravity system of gasoline feed, your car is dead whenever your carburetor is higher than your gasoline tank.

The pressure system requires endless bothersome hand pumping—keeping air leaks out of the lines and often, when most required, it fails.

You need power to climb a real hill—but you need more than power—you need a sure, even flow of gasoline to your carburetor at all times.

A Stewart Vacuum System insures this.

It also saves 10% to 20% on gas bills.

It is used by over 60% of all car manufacturers as standard equipment.

Can be installed on your present car (any make or model).

Price $10—complete.

Bear in mind in selecting your next car to see that it is fully equipped with Stewart products; most cars are, it will cost you nothing extra. See that it has a Stewart Tire Pump, Stewart Speedometer, Stewart Warning Signal and Stewart Vacuum System.

King of Twelves

You will be surprised—delighted—thrilled—when you take your first ride in Pathfinder the Great—King of Twelve-Cylinder Motor Cars.

You will realize a new conception of flexibility that varies from barely perceptible motion to smooth, steady momentum that sets the speedometer to crowding the "seventy mile" mark without an atom of nervous strain—and it's all at the driver's finger tips without shifting a lever.

This marvelous, velvety power, coupled to the most beautiful body design ever attained by the most painstaking coachbuilder, will revolutionize your sense of motor car values.

We suggest that you inspect the full Pathfinder line of "twelves" and "sixes" at our show rooms on Michigan boulevard. Demonstrations by appointment.

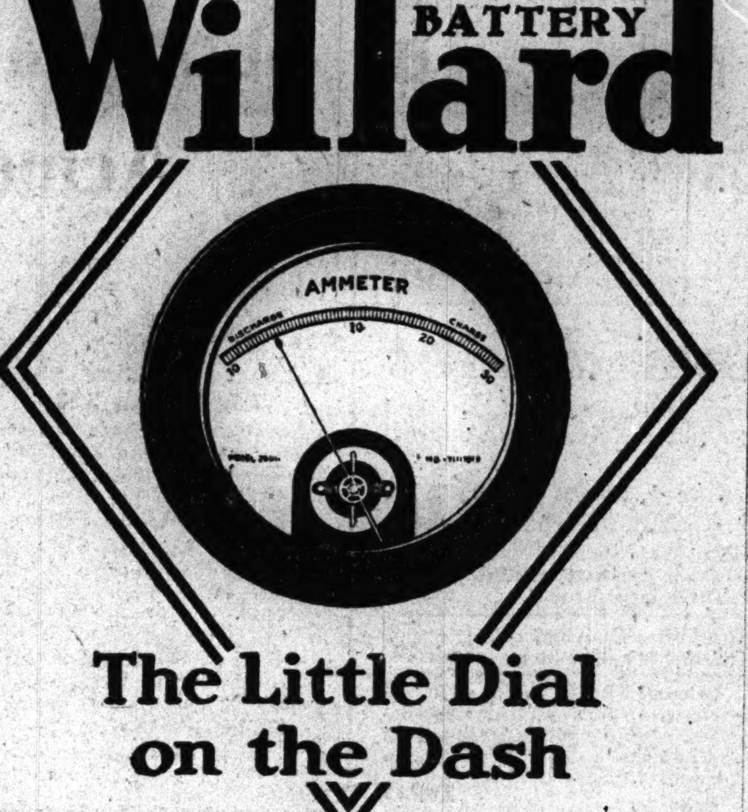
Willard STORAGE BATTERY



The Little Dial on the Dash

It's there for a purpose—to show you how much is going into and out of your battery.

And sometimes a battery may be starved to death. Don't blame the battery for that, but find out the cause.

One of the functions of Willard Service is to help the car owner know his electrical system as he should. Such information is found in booklets which are yours for the asking.

Let us tell you what you need to know. We'll convince you that Willard Service is more than expert knowledge of batteries alone.

By J. C. Burton.

IF Irving Berlin, the czar and eleven-eights of the royal family of ragtime, were writing this diatribe on the present high cost of motoring, it is an odds-on bet that he would make his getaway by penning:

Gas is goin' up,
Goin' up,
Goin' up,

thus proving that he, like Jack London and other masters in the art of irksome iteration, is paid for his literary labors by the word.

Right off hand, I can think of no more commanding or illuminating lead than the foregoing three lines of reiterative syncopation. It has the ring of eighteen karat truth. The price of gasoline is going up, following the pace set by war stocks, the hem of milady's skirt, and Charley Chaplin's salary, and, according to current reports and pessimistic prophecies, the pilots of the soaring commodity, increased demand and decreased supply, as yet have not dropped all the sand bags out of their basket.

The high price of gasoline is the most painful carbuncle on the neck of the motoring Job. Where the automobile owner paid from 10 to 15 cents, according to basis of delivery, for his fuel last summer, he is expending from 19 to 22 cents for his John D. essence at the present time. A further test of his patience is the fact that he sometimes gets fuel of an inferior grade, a blend of gasoline and kerosene, that gives him extremely low mileage. In fact, he is covering one-third less distance at twice the expense now that he did nine months ago.

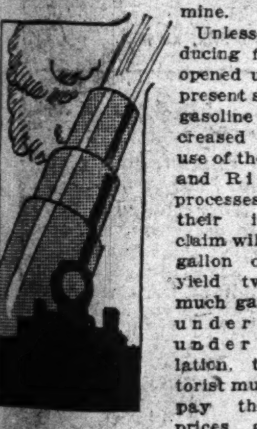
Several reasons have been advanced for the high price of gasoline—the increased home consumption and exports, the depletion of gasoline stocks, the decreased production of crude oil and the consequent increased cost—but the finger of suspicion points most directly and justly at the famous Cushing pool, the mysterious flivver, the Mississippi bubble of the petroleum industry. If Cushing pool were a race horse, its owners would be called before the stewards of the jockey club to explain its sudden reversal of form. A year ago, it was yielding 300,000 barrels a day. This phenomenal flow, which represented more than two and one-half times the total production of the other Oklahoma and Kansas fields, gradually dropped until now its daily yield is only 45,000 barrels.

And the Cushing pool is not the only one that has flivvered. Other wells in the several fields are not producing the amount of crude oil that they did a year ago. Good petroleum is at a premium as a consequence. A legion of prospectors are seeking other Cushing pools and have been promised rich rewards if they find them. Refiners are paying producers a bonus of 80 cents a barrel, in addition to the increased market price, for high grade oil. The El Dorado of 1916 is field, not the gold mine.



Unless new producing fields are opened up or the present supply of gasoline is increased by the use of the Burton and Rittman processes, which their inventors claim will make a gallon of crude yield twice as much gasoline as under present under present lation, the motorist must either pay the high prices, governed by the inexorable law of supply and demand, or switch his allegiance to a substitute fuel. In making Hobson's choice he takes either the road that leads to increased maintenance cost or the highway of decreased mechanical efficiency.

With the possible exception of the tears shed by broken hearted film heroines and the hot air developed by the press agents for the Willard-Moran bull fight, every kind of substitute for gasoline has been advanced in the present crisis. There are only five that are deserving of consideration, however—naphtha, kerosene, and distillate, all refinements of petroleum and lower in gravity than gasoline; benzol, a coal tar product, and alcohol.

The Germans, masters of efficiency who put two suspender buttons on troopers' trousers where only one was sewed before, already have solved the gasoline problem by using a mixture of alcohol and benzol to run their military automobiles. The alcohol was obtained from the same source as the mulligan—the potato; the benzol from coal, it being a by-product incidental to the manufacture of illuminating gas and coke.

In British Columbia, a similar fuel is being developed. Members of the Saskatoon board of trade have recommended to the minister of trade and commerce that motor spirits be made from potatoes and used as a substitute for gasoline. Saskatchewan last year produced over 4,000,000 bushels of potatoes from 30,000 acres of land and the posisble production of the province is said to be almost unlimited.

Thus, there is a remote possibility that in the future Canadians will order their motor fuel as they do their potatoes in restaurants—French fried, baked, Julienne, mashed, boiled, scolloped, hashed brown, or Lyonnaise—according to the grade desired and the appetite of the engine.

France, too, will not be at the mercy of the gasoline barons at the close of the European war. To save the Paris boulevardier from becoming the prey of the nut eating Guacharo bird, the government has prohibited the manufacture and sale of absinthe, and the alcohol, formerly sipped under the gayly striped awnings of the Rue de la Paix, will be the blood sent through the aluminium veins of the republic's automobiles, throbbing the steel beats of the Peugeots, Delages, and De Dions.

In America kerosene has been found the most practical substitue for gasoline. Its use requires the fitting of a special type of carburetor and the starting of the motor by gasoline, as kerosene will not vaporize at ordinary temperatures, and must be heated before it evaporates sufficiently to form a gas.

Kerosene carburetors are made and marketed. Ray Harroun, the former race driver, who won the first 500 mile Indianapolis classic, is the pioneer in their development. His device was adopted as optional equipment on the Henderson car and tested on a 'round the world trip made by a University of Wisconsin student, Edwin Kohl, two years ago.

The advantage of kerosene, which has the same constituents as gasoline and is cheaper, is that it contains more heat units per gallon, which means more power. Preignition, due to high compression; carbon deposits, caused by imperfect combustion; smoke and odor are the chief difficulties that have to be overcome. Owing to the low rate of evaporation, it is claimed that kerosene cannot be used successfully on high speed motors where it is desired to have flexible control and where the engine must be accelerated from a minimum to the highest speed in a short time.

In refuting these arguments the advocates of kerosene point to the achievements of Hughie Hughes and the late Billy Carlson, who drove Maxwells fitted with Harroun carburetors and burning coal oil. In the 1914 Potlatch trophy event, 200 miles in distance and run in Tacoma, Hughes was victor at a speed of seventy-four miles per hour, and with a similar car at Indianapolis last year Carlson covered 500 miles at an average of seventy-nine miles per hour and placed ninth.

Naphtha, which sells for one-half a cent less than gasoline, is a substitute fuel the practicality of which is not challenged. In fact, several racing drivers plan to use naphtha in the 1916 speedway contests. Its specific gravity is only a few points lower than that of the present grade of gasoline, and it is said to give better results in high speed motors. This fuel is known to the trade as varnish makers and painters' naphtha, and used as a substitute for turpentine.

Distillate, which is the lowest cut in the lighter ends of petroleum, has been used to advantage on the Pacific coast for supplying power to Moreland trucks, several of which are now in the service of the United States army in Mexico. In military maneuvers held by the Los Angeles automobile reserve corps the distillate burning trucks made a 264 mile run from Los Angeles to San Diego and return at a ton per mile cost of one-quarter cent.

In California and the southwest distillate stations are being opened, and the manufacturer of the Master carburetor is urging the installation of his device, which is popular with the racing drivers, and the use of distillate instead of gasoline. Distillate retails at 17½ cents a gallon there and gasoline sells for as high as 25 cents.

It should be noted, however, that the grade of distillate sold on the Pacific coast will vaporize at lower temperature than that to be bought in other parts of the United States, and therefore California motorists are getting results that would not be possible with the general run of distillate marketed in the middle west and along the Atlantic seaboard.

Alcohol as a substitute for gasoline offers no present relief in America and benzol is only a remote possibility, is the opinion advanced by E. S. Foljambe in a paper read recently before the New York section of the Society of Automobile Engineers.

"In seeking a fuel substitute it is natural to turn to a substance that can be produced in unlimited quantities, that cannot be controlled by any group of manufacturers, and the source of supply of which is cheap and plentiful," Mr. Foljambe said. "Alcohol is such a fuel. Unfortunately, even if there were no government restrictions concerning its production, it offers no present relief, owing to the fact that for economical use an entire reconstruction of automobile engines would be necessary. Instead of sixty-five to seventy pounds compression for efficient alcohol burning, 150 to 175 pounds are required. This at once eliminates it as a fuel for the 2,000,000 vehicles already in use.

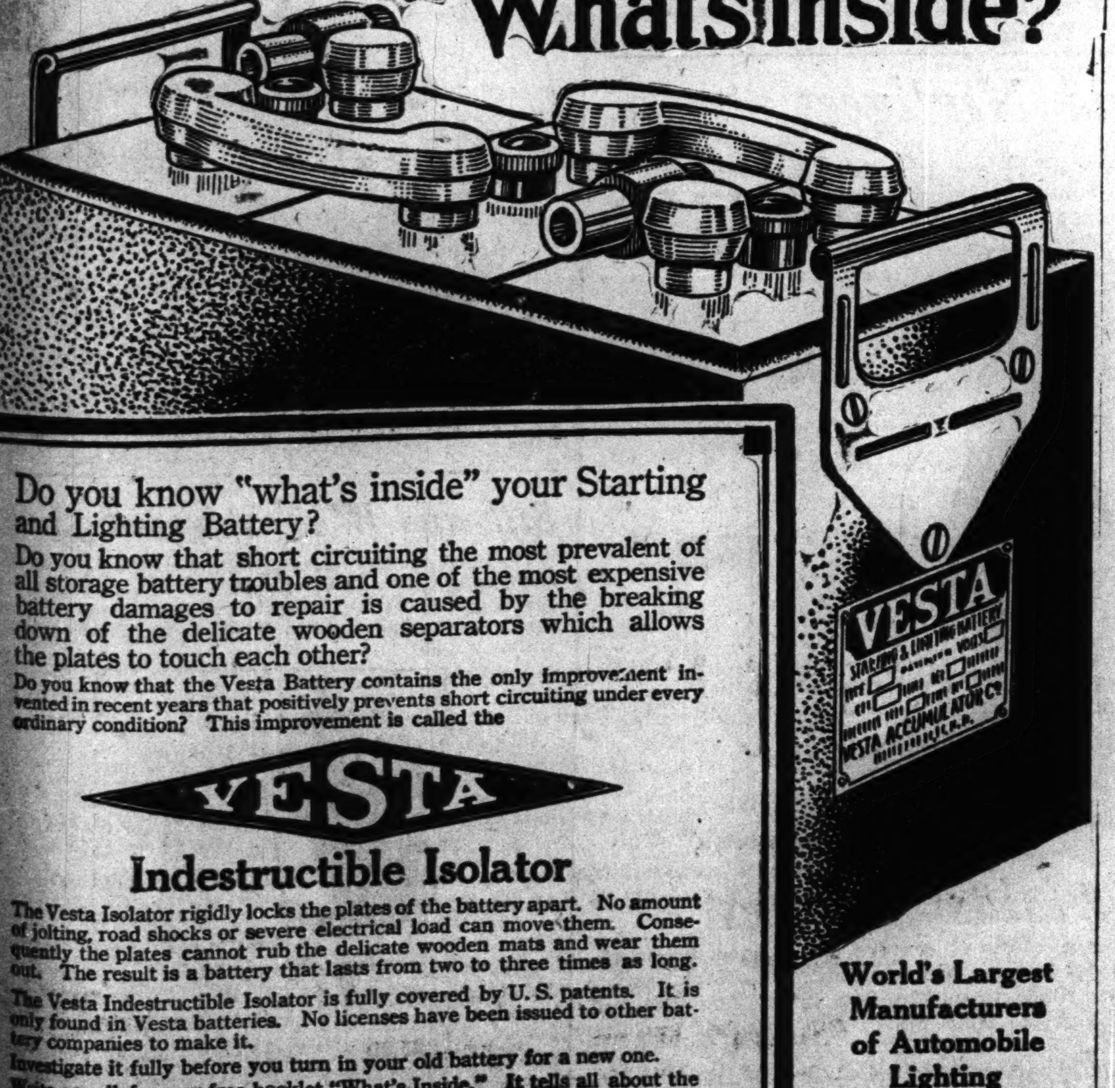
"Under extreme stress and provided the laws were changed, new engines could be produced that will show practically as efficient a performance with alcohol as with gasoline, the horse power being less in proportion as the thermal units per pound of alcohol are less than in gasoline. Even present type engines can burn alcohol, but do it wastefully, the consumption per horse power hour being approximately 50 per cent more than if designed for using alcohol.

"Approximately 14,000,000 gallons of benzol were produced in coke ovens in the United States in 1915, with a probable output for 1916 of 22,000,000 gallons. Unfortunately, this possible fuel is selling at the present time for 75 cents a gallon and not lower than 65 cents in 1,000 gallon lots, and is in ever increasing demand in the manufacture of dyes, explosives, and carbolic acid."

Quick, Watson, the kerosene! The os magnum of the bank roll is seriously fractured.



"What's Inside?"

Do you know "what's inside" your Starting and Lighting Battery?

Do you know that short circuiting the most prevalent of all storage battery troubles and one of the most expensive battery damages to repair is caused by the breaking down of the delicate wooden separators which allows the plates to touch each other?

Do you know that the Vesta Battery contains the only improvement invented in recent years that positively prevents short circuiting under every ordinary condition? This improvement is called the

VESTA
Indestructible Isolator

The Vesta Isolator rigidly locks the plates of the battery apart. No amount of jolting, road shocks or severe electrical load can move them. Consequently the plates cannot rub the delicate wooden mats and wear them out. The result is a battery that lasts from two to three times as long.

The Vesta Indestructible Isolator is fully covered by U. S. patents. It is only found in Vesta batteries. No licenses have been issued to other battery companies to make it.

Investigate it fully before you turn in your old battery for a new one. Write or call for new free booklet "What's Inside." It tells all about the "inside-unseen" superiority of the Vesta Battery.

Few Cars in Corona Classic.

| Stutz | Cooper |
| Sunbeam | Hughes |
| Peugeot | Burman |
| Duesenberg | O'Donnell |
| Milac | Tetzlaff |
| Fiat Cyclone | Durant |

AN attack will be made on the world's road racing record of 87.86 miles per hour on the Pacific coast on Saturday, when the Corona grand prize, which had its inception in the fall of 1913 and was temporarily abandoned last year, will be run over the circular macadam course of the southern California city.

Practice for the event, which will be 301 miles in distance, started yesterday and ten drivers, with covetous eyes on $12,000 in prize money, already have nominated cars. Before the entry lists close on Thursday night five or six more contenders probably will declare themselves, making a field of fifteen or sixteen thoroughbreds of steel for the classic.

Saturday's race will bring together the winners of the two previous Corona contests—Earl Cooper, who celebrated the dedication of the course with a victory in 1913, and Eddie Pullen, whose Mercer put the world's record at 87.86 miles per hour in the 1914 event. Pullen rules favorite for this week's classic, by virtue of his phenomenal showing in the 1914 Corona race and his triumphs this season on the Los Angeles speedway, but Cooper, who has recovered from a recent operation for appendicitis, is not running far behind in the books.

In addition to Pullen and Cooper, the Corona grand prize has attracted several other stars—Barney Oldfield, who starts his Delage for the first time in 1916 on Saturday; Hughie Hughes, who has fallen heir to one of the six cylinder Sunbeams campaigned last season by the late Harry Grant; Eddie O'Donnell, dean of the Duesenberg team, and Bob Burman, who has endowed his Peugeot with greater stamina and speed by means of a winter overhaul.

Burman, by the way, may switch from the Peugeot to the Premier Special in order to give his new car, which he will drive in the speedway events this year, a competitive prep.

The prospective entrants include a third Mercer, which will be piloted by Eddie Rickenbacher if he can obtain a short leave of absence from the Maxwell team angels; two more Duesenbergs, Omar Toft's Omar Special, which turned over in practice for the Los Angeles speedway inaugural March 4, and an Apperson Special.

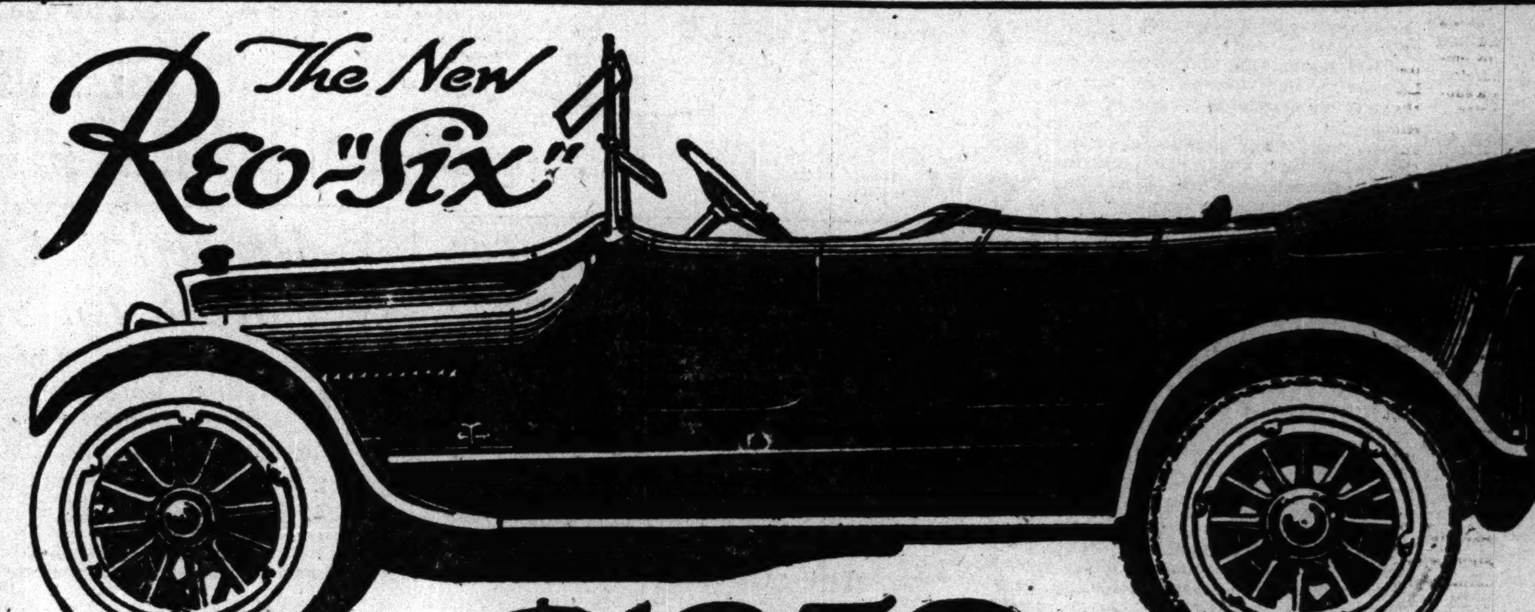
The New Reo-"Six"



$1250

The Supremacy of This Reo Six Was Achieved by Peaceful Conquest

THE TREMENDOUS DEMAND—the over demand—the excess of orders over possible factory production—that this Reo Six enjoys is proof that it now reigns supreme among six cylinder cars.

NEVER DID ANY CAR ENJOY a greater vogue—never did any product achieve such an unqualified victory. Never did orders pour into the Reo factories as they have during the past three months—as they are pouring in today.

JUST THINK OF IT! On March first we had on hand at the Reo factory in Lansing, immediate shipment orders for more than 4200 cars—about equally divided between the two great Reo models.

THAT'S MORE ORDERS than we ever had on hand at any previous time. That was March first, mind you—not May first—and despite the fact that during the past three months, January to March inclusive, we had shipped more Reos than during any previous three months in Reo history.

ISN'T THAT A WONDERFUL RECORD—doesn't it prove that after all sound engineering practice and sound business principles win in the long run?

YOU WILL RECALL DOUBTLESS that we Reo Folk took no part in the recent noisy controversy. We did not vie with others in claiming supernatural qualities for this Reo Six. Like yourself, we were amused onlookers.

REO'S POSITION WAS SECURE. We think it is permanent. Knowing as we do that Reo prestige is the result of long years of conservative designing and of energetic improving; of establishing an ideal, and working consistently toward it, we were only mildly interested in the wordy melee.

SO WE TOOK NO PART. We were content to let others claim anything they thought best—content in the knowledge that we Reo Folk could, when put to the test, prove as much and more.

OUR ONE CONCERN WAS TO BUILD enough Sixes to supply that ever increasing clientele who feel safer when they have tied to a Reo—that ever increasing class of discriminating buyers who are looking, not for the fastest, but for the best, in motor cars.

AND IT WAS A REAL PROBLEM. Consider for yourself. Last year the Reo Six enjoyed a great demand. That was its first year. We had gone about it in our usual conservative way and as usual had underestimated the demand for this Six.

THIS YEAR WE FIGURED that if we built about one Six to two Fours it should about meet the demand. But again we underestimated. That was soon apparent. So we planned some months ago to add to the Six schedule and make just as many of them as we could—split the production 50–50 between the two models as nearly as possible.

BUT THAT WON'T BE ENOUGH to go round. That is now a certainty. We haven't touched the peak of the demand yet—but daily orders are already in excess of daily output.

AND WE'RE MIGHTILY PLEASED, we Reo Folk. For, while it is aggravating to be unable to supply all who want Reo Sixes, it is gratifying to know that our policy is approved by such a tremendous percentage of buyers—and they the best class of buyers because the most discriminating and cautious.

BEST OF ALL, that demand is the result, not of artificial stimulation, but of steady growth.

WE HAVE NEVER FEATURED excessive speeds or radical features of construction. We speak only of Reo quality—Reo uniformity of quality—and of economy of upkeep. Just those things the more sensible buyers demand in a car.

THIS REO SIX APPEALS to a class of buyers who formerly paid several times as much for their motor cars. Men able to pay anything—but too sound in the head to pay for an article more than it is worth.

MEN WHO LOOK TO QUALITY of materials and workmanship—not merely the price tag.

THINGS HAVE MOVED SO RAPIDLY in this industry—such tremendous advances have been made in the improvements of metals and their treatment and in manufacturing methods—it is impossible for most buyers to realize what wonderful quality is available today for $1250.

IT IS NOT TOO MUCH TO SAY—and you know we Reo Folk are not given to extravagant use of words—that it was impossible, three years ago, to buy, at any price—at any price mind you—a car of such excellent riding qualities, of such consistent performance, long life and low maintenance cost, as you obtain in this Reo Six.

WE ARE ANXIOUS TO IMPRESS that great fact upon you. We have no mental reservation in speaking of this Reo Six. We know what goes into it—and we know that all there is of Reo experience and Reo integrity went into its design and making.

AND SO WE SAY—and we measure every word because we Reo Folk stand back of what we say—that no man, however rich, can want or can buy a better automobile.

WHAT COULD HE ASK that is not in this Reo Six. Size?—It is a big liberal seven-passenger car. Power?—it has ample. Riding qualities?—it is unequalled. Speed?—all a sane, sober man will ever care to use. Beauty?—it has been called the "Fashion Plate". Reputation?—none stands higher than Reo.

YET ITS UPKEEP COST has proved to be less than one-tenth—get that, one-tenth!—that of some five-passenger cars. And skimpy Fives, at that!

IF YOUR PAST EXPERIENCE has been only with other makes of cars, you would not believe—could not credit—the facts we might tell you about the low operation and upkeep cost of this Reo Six.

YET ANY REO SIX OWNER will endorse them—any Reo dealer will show you the proofs.

SO ANYONE WHOSE FAMILY DEMANDS a seven-passenger car can afford to own this Reo Six—while the wealthiest will find in it all the luxury that can be had at any price.

IS IT ANY WONDER the demand for such a car is so greatly in excess of our ability to build them—even in the big forty-acre Reo plants? Is it any wonder?

NOW IN YOUR CASE, if you happen to be one of those who are still delaying the placing of your order. Satisfy yourself as to the superior value of this Six. Then don't delay another moment. We've told you the conditions. You must realize that thousands must be disappointed this spring as every previous spring.

FOR NEVER SINCE the first Reo was made and sold has it been possible to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos. Never a time.

THOSE WHOSE ORDERS are in our hands well in advance, can count on getting Reo Sixes for spring delivery. We have our allotment by days. Can tell you just when you may expect your Reo Six. But every day's delay is dangerous—there won't be enough to go round. First orders will be delivered first.

TODAY won't be a minute to soon.

THE RADICAL BOOK SHOP.

Here's a fine chance
To have a good dance.
Bring friend and bring neighbor,
Bring comrades in labor.
Bring good fellows all
To the Radical ball.

I DON'T know who wrote this enticing ditty—not Carl Sandburg, I am sure, though he is not only "the Chicago poet" just now, through his volume of poems about our town which Holt is bringing out, but one of the most ardent of the supporters of the Radical book shop, for the benefit of which this radical ball is to be given next Friday night at Oak hall.

The story of the Radical book shop is as romantic a tale as you could read. Mr. and Mrs. Udell own the tiny shop at 817½ North Clark street. Mr. Udell used to be a Unitarian minister. He is now an avowed radical. Mrs. Udell is a real thinker, a force in the world, despite the tragedy of her blindness.

A couple of years ago they were actually in want. To keep from starving they took the books from their unusual library, spread them out on some boards across an alley in North Clark street, and for two days they held their little street shop. Passersby stopped at the unusual sight, and stopped longer when they read the titles of the books for sale.

Then a man came along, a man who owned a cubby hole of a shop near the alley. "You can't have a shop here," he said, meaning the alley, "but you can here," meaning the cubby hole. They moved into the little twelve foot place. Mr. Udell put up book shelves. Friends of his, I. W. W. workers, eager young anarchists every one, turned in and helped. Books that couldn't be found on the shelves of the élite book shops were to be had there. The patronage grew.

There has never been more than the most precarious living for those connected with it, though, and every so often somebody organizes a "social and dance," sells tickets at 25 cents apiece, and with the proceeds the shop jogs on for another three or four months. This is one of those affairs.

The shop sincerely attempts to furnish a home for radical thought. Around the stove in the back of the shop men and women argue and smoke and gesticulate and tell each other how they are going to reform the world. On the shelves books silently speak their message of freedom of thought. It is a romance of real life that tabloidites won't want to miss.

"What does Ellen Key think of the war?" That's an interesting question whose answer is sure to add much to modern feminine thought. In "War, Peace, and the Future" (Putnam) Miss Key gives her answer.

Leonard Merrick was destined to be a writer. Even in the nursery he scribbled, and he always added a petition to his childish prayers, "and please make me an author and an actor." "I was only 8 then," he says, bitterly, it is rumored, "and I didn't know enough to pray, 'and let me be popular.'" He is a delightful but scarcely known writer of the younger English school.

Spain is preparing to celebrate a tercentennial of its own Shakespeare, Cervantes, this year. They are planning to issue a special popular edition of "Don Quixote" of 10,000 copies, an edition of 100,000 copies for young people, and an edition de luxe of 125 copies in four volumes with 200 illustrations by Ricardo Marin. A new monument to Cervantes is to be placed in Madrid, and during this month there will be in Madrid an exhibition of all the works they can get about Cervantes. A number of 25 peso gold pieces bearing Cervantes' likeness are to be issued during the year.

Sir Rider Haggard is steaming Australiaward in quest of new homes for British soldiers after the war. And meanwhile Allan Quatermain, the original Allan, is back in the dark continent doing his best toward driving the Germans out of their last colony there. He, as you may not remember, is Frederick Courtenay Selous, the most famous of big game hunters and veteran of several little wars. He is in British East Africa now with a detachment of the legion of frontiersmen, almost 65, but deadly as ever with a rifle.

John Masefield is no longer a sojourner on our shores. He has gone back home, and he is planning to enter the ambulance service in France.

The great American novel is a topic lately revived which may be interesting to those who like to chat with the public print, but which is nothing more than mildly diverting to the general reading public. But since it is a post-dining subject I offer you two versions of the sanest words I have read about it. Gertrude Atherton points to Balzac's Comedie Humaine as the amount of space it took to write the story of France, and submits that no American novel can hope to be typical of the hodge-podge of nationalities which make up our United States. The Branch Library News of the New York public library says: "America is too varied for complete interpretation in any one novel, and, consequently, in that sense at least, the g. A. n. will never be written."

A letter from London contains this interesting paragraph anent the literary tastes of the British soldiers at the front: "This week I was assured by an officer back from the front," he writes, "that the living novelist most in favor with the British Tommy is E. Phillips Oppenheim, despite the fact that most of them believe firmly that he is a German! As a matter of fact, he is, despite his name, about the most English person one knows. He was educated at Wyggestin Grammar school, Leicester, and lives down at Sheringham, one of the first towns to be Zeppelined, by the way. His pretty wife was formerly Miss Elsie Hopkins of Boston, Mass., and they have one daughter. The author is exactly 50, which explains why he is not in khaki.

Wilfred Wilson Gibson has written of the war with the same vividness and power which made "Daily Bread" and "Fires" volumes which we wouldn't be without if we could help it. "Battle and Other Poems" (Macmillan) the little book is called.

◆

"Master Skylark" (Century), Edgar White Burrill's dramatization of John Bennett's novel which introduces Shakspeare as a character, has been chosen by Wellesley college as the commencement play for this year.

The best thing I've seen for a long time about a book of Chesterton's is this bon mot about "The Crimes of England" [John Lane]: "'The Crimes of England' is like a verbal plum pudding that has nothing in it but plums."

VENETIAN BUILDING
[The Woman's Building],
15 E. WASHINGTON-ST.

Leases for one to five years.
Rent free to May 1st. Immediate possession.

We are making extensive improvements in this building, and it will pay you to look over the space we have to rent. The service of the building is efficient in every respect, and it will be the policy of the management to give entire satisfaction to every tenant.

The large windows and the fact that the maximum depth of space is only 23 feet make the offices light and well ventilated, and they will be decorated in white enamel or in any manner desired.

The occupancy will be carefully restricted to the highest grade of tenants. We now have many of the best known firms in ladies' lines.

Our office in the building in room 1009 is open daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

Your Next Move!

Special Excursion Tuesday, April 11.

OVER A MILLION FARM RENTERS reported to the Census Bureau that they occupy farms a year at a time. There are about six and a quarter million farm operators in the U. S., and [illegible] per cent of them had occupied their farms less than five years.

ARE YOU MOVING again this spring, Mr. Renter? Moving about only continues the game where you play into the hands of the landlord. Your auction sales and the time you use in getting settled and started again mean a loss for every move. How can you expect to make headway? Permanent agriculture requires a plan of crop rotation, fertility maintenance, and farm improvement which must cover a number of years to bring proper returns, and it can't be done on farms under the yearly lease system.

WHY NOT MOVE NEXT to the Swigart Tract in Michigan, where 91 per cent of the farmers own their own farms? It means becoming a permanent resident in a progressive community instead of remaining in a renting district, where farmers are transient and have little use for neighbors' co-operation and the things that make farm life most pleasant. We have a community interest in our district. The farmers take their places in the church pews, on school boards, and in township offices and help build new roads and improve old ones. Any earnest, industrious man is welcomed here, becomes more of a factor among his fellows and enjoys better citizenship.

WHAT KIND OF FARMING do we practice? What crops? What soil? All these questions are answered in my literature. Write for it today. Learn what is in store for you in the Swigart Tract.

MOST LAND is now out of reach for farm renters, but mine is not. My prices are as low as $10 to $25, and I offer the largest selection in Michigan's Fruit Belt at $15 per acre. Terms, annual or monthly, on the basis of $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month on 40 acres. After the land is partly paid for you are insured for the balance. When you move into our country you will find at your service agricultural advisers whom I employ to visit and instruct settlers in the best methods for our district. I have a seed distribution plan and several co-operative features for settlers.

MY NEXT SPECIAL CAR EXCURSION will leave Chicago Tuesday, April 11th. Round trip from Chicago, including railroad fare, meals, and lodging, $12.50. Accommodations for both men and women. Automobiles free. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

George Swigart,
OWNER.
1249-50 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

FOR SALE—OWNER OF SUCCESSFUL
HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE
1,000 ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM.
WILL SELL

20-Acre Farm for Only $300

ON TERMS OF $10.00 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY,
WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1,000 acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 acres in peaches, 136 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries, and 150 in vegetables, grains, and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes, $300; tomatoes, $100 [$10 per ton at the canning factory], etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 1,000 acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 and 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $10.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangement whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands. elevation above sea level about 550 feet.

Before offering any of my land for sale, I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm, and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income, besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains, and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month. $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the orinary, crowded, brick bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs, and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables, and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth, and happiness come into your own hands. You are boss of all, with room to grow, and no one is big enough to come in and give you orders. We have good schools, churches, rural free delivery, and mutual rural telephone lines and good towns.

FREE RAILWAY FARE

to purchasers; 90 days' time to visit land and make your selection; money back after one year if dissatisfied; payments stop in case of death; money loaned for improvements; perfect title; immediate possession.

GET THIS FREE BOOK TODAY.

I have made about 50 kodak views in and around the big orchard and farm and on the land I am offering, and have had them reproduced in a 16-page pamphlet, in which also I have placed all the information to be obtained regarding the topography, soil, climate, water, rainfall, healthfulness, productivity, products, and about everything you want to know; also 50 letters from men in Chicago and nearby towns who have gone down to look and who have bought. I'll gladly send you a copy if you will write.

USED CAR SALE.

Terms or Cash.

OUR NEW COLE 8 IS SUCH A PRONOUNCED SUCCESS THAT THE DEMAND FOR THEM HAS BEEN FAR BEYOND OUR EXPECTATIONS. WE HAVE BEEN OVERWHELMED WITH OFFERS OF TRADES OF USED CARS AS PART PAYMENT FOR THE COLE 8.

WE HAVE TRADED FOR A GREAT MANY CARS OF MOST EVERY MAKE, BEING VERY CONSERVATIVE AS TO THE ALLOWANCE FOR SAME; ALSO THE VINTAGE YOU WILL FIND IN THIS LARGE STOCK OF USED CARS; NONE BUT THE LATEST AND BEST KNOWN HIGH GRADE CARS AT SURPRISINGLY LOW PRICES; CARS THAT HAVE BEEN DRIVEN ONLY A SHORT DISTANCE; OTHERS THAT HAVE BEEN COMPLETELY OVERHAULED AND REFINISHED, LOOK LIKE NEW, AND AS FAR AS SERVICE IS CONCERNED WILL GIVE YOU MORE REAL MILEAGE AND LAST LONGER THAN ANY CHEAP NEW CAR. ANOTHER THING, THE PRIDE OF OWNERSHIP OF A GOOD HIGH GRADE AUTOMOBILE, EVEN THOUGH IT HAS BEEN USED SOME, IS GREATER THAN IN A NEW CAR OF AN INFERIOR MAKE.

OUR INVOICE ON THE 1ST OF THE MONTH SHOWED THAT WE HAD OVER 100 CARS IN STOCK. THE FOLLOWING IS A PARTIAL LIST ONLY, AS THE COST OF SPACE PROHIBITS US RUNNING A COMPLETE ONE. WE WISH TO EXTEND AN INVITATION TO VISIT OUR USED CAR DEPT. AND LOOK OVER THESE WONDERFUL BARGAINS:

1914 CADILLAC.
1914 CHALMERS.
1914 COLE.

AND MANY OTHERS.

NOTICE.

Contrary to the usual custom of having salesmen whose sole ambition seems to be that of obtaining your name and address only to annoy you later by trying to sell you a car that you do not want, our policy is that if our cars do not interest you after an inspection it will be only because we do not have the particular model that you want.

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE
WILL BE OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

MACHINERY AND TOOLS.

MACHINERY AND FACTORY EQUIPMENT.
We have just purchased another great industrial plant which included one of the biggest and most modern machine shops in the country. The tool list includes many lathes, screw machines, grinders, boring mills, milling machines, planers, drill presses of all kinds, gear cutters, grinders, punches, shears, etc. The equipment includes belting, pulleys, shafting, and 40 electric motors from 2 to 40 h. p., several steam engines, boilers, tanks, locomotives, and traveling cranes, and all kinds of small tools and equipment. Bear in mind we are not regular machinery dealers, and are disposing of this material at savings of 1-3 to ½.
On another deal we obtained about 200 brand new McVicker gasoline engines, also portable saw outfits, light plants, etc. Here are some of the snaps we now offer:

|---|---|
| 4 h. p. McVicker gasoline engine | $56 |
| 6 h. p. McVicker gasoline engine | $91.50 |
| 8 h. p. McVicker gasoline engine | $122.50 |
| 12 h. p. McVicker gasoline engine | $158 |

3 10x12 Ingersoll-Rand air compressors belted to 15 h. p. Fairbanks-Morse gasoline engine, mounted on heavy steel trucks.
1 8x7 Ingersoll-Rand air compressor belted to 12 h. p. Otto gasoline engine mounted on heavy steel trucks.
We can save you big money on any machine tools, contractors' machinery, steam machinery, electric motors, storage tanks and boilers, and factory equipment of all kinds.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

APRIL 2, 1916.

THE BIGGEST LITTLE MAN IN THE UNITED STATES ARMY—Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston, who commands the forces sent "to get Villa," is barely 5 feet 5 inches in height and weighs less than 130 pounds. He was born in New Carlisle, O., Nov. 9, 1865. While a student in the University of Kansas he captured a 200 pound "bad man," who threatened him with a razor, and marched him through the streets of Leavenworth to a police station. Later he was a fighting city editor in Fort Smith, Ark., who attacked his paper's party leaders in the absence of the editor in chief, and then resigned; then a reporter in Kansas City; still later a botanist in the United States Death Valley expedition. His first experience in war came in Cuba, where he commanded Gen. Gomez's artillery. He was captured by Spaniards on his way to Havana, and escaped death by swallowing a letter to the president of Cuba, which would have proved his identity. While a colonel of the famous Twentieth Kansas volunteer infantry in the Philippine war he commanded the expedition that resulted in the capture of Aguinaldo. head of the Filipino insurrection. He has been in command of various army divisions and is now commander of the southern department at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. He is probably more conversant with conditions to be overcome in Mexico than any man in the army. He is married and has four children. His home is in Iola, Kas.

REIMS CATHEDRAL TODAY—Its latest photograph. Though the cathedral has been marred by artillery fire, its structure is still apparently intact. In the foreground are houses which have been wholly destroyed by the fire.

(Photograph from the New York Sun.)

THEY MARCHED DOWN INTO THE VALLEY OF DEATH—Suffering a worse fate than "the gallant Six Hundred," whom Tennyson immortalized, this, the Fifth Norfolk regiment of the British forces, was entirely wiped out at Gallipoli. All the eligible men of King George's Sandringham estate were enlisted in this regiment. This photograph shows the "march out" of the regiment before departure for Gallipoli.

ARMENIAN REFUGEES—This is a group of Armenian children who arrived in this country with their parents after being rescued from the scenes of Mohammedan massacres in Antioch, Syria, and taken aboard a French cruiser.

(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

INNOCENT BYSTANDERS—Here are shown some Ruthenian inhabitants of the city of Brzezany in East Galicia. The city has been captured and recaptured a number of times by both the Germans and the Russians.

THE REGULARS

GUN SQUAD IN ACTION—UNITED STATES FIELD ARTILLERY—The gunner sits on left of piece in command of the squad. He sights the piece with peep sight when firing against visible target (direct fire). Against invisible target (indirect fire) he gives it proper direction by mathematical instruments on data furnished by observing officer.

In indirect fire, No. 1 (by means of quadrant) gives piece proper elevation for range in accordance with data transmitted from observing officer by telephone or other signal. This officer is concealed perhaps a mile off in such a way that he can see his shells bursting over hostile positions; and by noticing "overs" and "shorts" is able to correct fire of his battery. Besides elevating gun to proper angle, No. 1 opens breech to receive loaded and empty exploded shells, and fires gun by pulling trigger. The barrel recoils about forty inches at each shot, so gunner and No. 1 must be careful to allow for clearance, or they will be killed or wounded.

No. 2 at trail moves gun around when considerable changes in direction are necessary. No. 3 adjusts fuse setter for range and corrector for height of burst of shell. These instruments are under limber or ammunition carrier. No. 4 inserts shell nose into fuse setter and twists shell around till it stops. This gives it desired number of seconds in air before bursting. Then No. 4 inserts shell in gun with twisting motion.

No. 5 takes shell from limber chest and hands to No. 4.

No. 6 brings ammunition by hand from caissons in reserve preferably under cover in the rear. The higher numbers from 7 up have the same duties as No. 6, and take the places of men put out of action by hostile fire.

When our field guns are handled by expert cannoneers all these operations can be completed in three seconds and a rate of fire of twenty shots a minute obtained. Time is as important as in a prize ring, for the first shot that lands often does the business to or for a gun.

AMERICAN MACHINE GUNS—The regular army has about 1,000 machine guns of this inferior type, which has recently been condemned, but no provision has been made to supply the army with the improved type of the kind used in Europe. At the outbreak of the great war Germany had over 200,000 machine guns of the modern type, and now has many more.

EACH GUN AND EACH CAISSON (AMMUNITION WAGON) IS PULLED BY THREE PAIRS OF HORSES—There is a driver on the left horse of each pair. It would be impractical to drive the horses from the wagon seats with long reins, stage coach fashion. In field artillery the cannoneers walk beside their pieces and caissons, or ride on them according to the condition of the country and the speed required. In horse artillery cannoneers ride horseback beside the pieces. Artillerymen are provided with revolvers, but not rifles, so must depend on infantry support against sudden surprise attack. Guns are long range fighters, and if a heavy skirmish line of the enemy gets within good rifle range are apt to be in difficulties.

CHARGE! The infantry advance by rushes of 50 to 200 yards, fall on their faces and shoot, while other parts of the line rush up to their line or ahead. If the hostile fire becomes too intense the men dig head shelters of dirt for themselves, where they lie.

Notice the officer running in front of his squad with pistol. In continental armies now it is said that officers carry rifles and bayonets on the charge in order that they may not be singled out and picked off by sharpshooters.

"THE OLD MAN OF THE MAZURIAN LAKES" MAPPING OUT A CAMPAIGN—This painting by Hugo Vogel, a German artist, shows Field Marshal von Hindenburg (seated) and his son-in-law, Lieut. Gen. Ludendorff, working over military maps.

(Photograph supplied by Carolyn Wilson, war correspondent of The Tribune.)

DECORATIONS FOR THE WOUNDED—In compliance with the French government's order that some sign of recognition be given the men wounded in battle, the military authorities have placed red V-shaped stripes on the uniform sleeves of soldiers and officers for each occasion on which they have been wounded. The stripes are of dark red material and are on the lower part of the sleeve. The man in the picture has been wounded two times. That he has enlisted on three separate occasions is signified by the three strips on the upper part of his sleeve.

A ZEPPELIN OVER LONDON—This exclusive photograph shows one of the German military airships flying above the towers of London, with two searchlights playing upon it and anti-aircraft bombs bursting about it.

(Photograph from H. J. Haughton, Toronto, Ont.)

IN THE LIMELIGHT

BARONESS ISHI AND CHILDREN—Baron Ishi has recently been appointed foreign minister for Japan in the new Okuma cabinet. Baron Ishi was former ambassador to London. Baroness Ishi is standing at the right.
(Photograph from Bain News service.)

LEILA LADY PAGET, who, with her husband, Sir Ralph Paget, was for a time cut off from the outside world by the Austro-Bulgarians in Serbia, has been working devotedly for the Red Cross in Serbia. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Paran Stevens, who once owned the now defunct Fifth Avenue hotel in New York. She is the only woman who has ever received the Grand Cross of the Star of the Karageorges, an honór conferred on her by King Peter when her husband was minister plenipotentiary of the British government in Belgrade.
(Photograph from the Press Illustrating service.)

MRS. FREDERICK FUNSTON, the wife of the commander of the expedition sent "to get Villa," was Miss Edna Blankart. She lives in Iola, Kas., with her four children, one of whom was born about a year ago. She and Maj. Gen. Funston were married on Oct. 25, 1898.

THE WIFE OF THE NEW SECRETARY OF WAR—Mrs. Newton D. Baker, wife of President Wilson's appointee to succeed Secretary of War Garrison, resigned, was Miss Elizabeth Leopold of Pottstown, Pa. When her husband was mayor of Cleveland, O., she was celebrated as a hostess. (Photograph by Bain News service.)

Constant Care and Watchfulness

The tender young coffee trees must be shaded—either by artificial means or by growing bananas or other tropical fruits between them.

Even when fully grown, the trees thrive best if sheltered from the wind and sun.

Coffee is picked by hand. It must be carefully protected during shipment or it will become damaged in transit.

The Delicate Roasting Process.

The method and degree of roasting are very important.

Some idea of the delicacy of the roasting process may be gained from the fact that if coffee is roasted even thirty seconds too long its flavor will be affected.

Scientific study, however, has so systematized the methods of coffee roasting that the skillful roaster does not guess or experiment. He knows the exact amount of heat and the period of time required by the various kinds of coffee he roasts.

A Great Undertaking.

Many safeguards and precautions attend every step of the production of Yuban from the tree to the tables of those who use it.

The production and marketing of coffee along perfected and elaborately specialized lines is no small undertaking. It is possible only on account of the magnitude of the operations and resources of the house of Arbuckle.

Arbuckle Brothers have been the world's greatest coffee merchants for years. They have equipment for the prompt, methodical, systematic handling, roasting, packing and marketing of coffee, which it has taken years to perfect, and which has no equal.

The World's Choicest Coffee.

The firm of Arbuckle Brothers long ago recognized the superiority of Yuban. For years they reserved it for their own use and for gifts to their friends.

It was known as the "Arbuckle Guest Coffee" by those who were fortunate enough to receive it as a holiday remembrance; and they were the first to buy Yuban and enthusiastically recommend it to their friends when it was placed on the market.

Its flavor and aroma were so exceptional, its suitability to all purposes so perfect, that in less than three months after its introduction it attained a larger sale than any other package coffee in Chicago.

Your Grocer Has It.

Yuban is now sold by 3,600 grocers in Chicago.

It is not sold in bulk. It is packed in whole bean, pulverized, and in "clean ground, chaff removed" form in all tin containers, sealed across the top with the Arbuckle signature.

This method of packing protects and preserves the freshness and flavor, and brings Yuban to you with its full strength unimpaired.

Include Yuban with your grocery order tomorrow. The more critical and exacting you are the better it will please you. It is the coffee you have imagined, and hoped some time to find.
